Living Nightmares

Dream Creatures of Dal Quor

by Keith Baker • illustrated by Udon
In the Eberron Campaign Setting, mortals touch another plane when they sleep: Dal Quor, the Region of Dreams. The quori, outsiders that gave birth to the kalashtar and the Inspired, claim this realm. Dal Quor is a plane of flowing shadows, constantly shifting to reflect the subconscious desires of mortal minds and the lesser spirits that prowl its fringes.

The Eberron Campaign Setting describes one inhabitant of Dal Quor: the tsuicora quori, which feeds on the primal fears of its victims. This article presents seven additional denizens of dream, divided into three categories: eidolons, drifters, and the quori.

Adventuring in Dreams

Every night, dreamers psychically project their minds to Dal Quor. The mechanics and possibilities of adventuring in dreams could easily provide enough material for an entire article, but the following rules can aid a DM who wants to take her party into the Region of Dreams.

The simplest way to handle dream encounters is to allow the dreaming characters to possess the same equipment, prepared spells, or power reserve they have in the waking world. However, other possibilities certainly exist. A fighter might find himself battling without his armor. A wizard could have no spells whatsoever, or she could find she has access to arcane knowledge of which she had only dreamed.

Under normal circumstances, a character’s dreams cannot harm him, although some natives of Dal Quor have abilities that can affect creatures on other planes. A character usually faces only figments of his imagination in Dal Quor, and most Dal Quor denizens can only force the character to wake up from his nightmare. Only creatures native to the plane of Dal Quor can physically travel to it. Nonnative creatures can reach Dal Quor only in dreams, and the plane manifests nearly everything in their dreams as a figment. In other words, a sleeping character who dreams of battling monsters fights only figments manifested by the plane, not real monsters. The character’s “dreamself” is also a figment; no harm that befalls the “dreamself” actually harms the dreaming character. Normal rules also don’t always apply, thus 1st-level wizards might be able to cast disintegrate spells on Dal Quor, while goblins could have a thousand hit points.

Real creatures do exist on Dal Quor, however. A dreaming character confronted by such a creature can attack it using any of her true abilities and weapons. Thus, a 1st-level wizard confronted by a real quori on Dal Quor cannot harm the creature with imaginary “figment spells” beyond her natural ability, such as disintegrate. However, a spellcaster can cast any spell she normally has to deal real damage to the real creature. The spellcaster then loses the spell from memory (or she uses her spell slot) as normal for her spellcasting class until she wakes up. Similarly, a 1st-level fighter might dream of slaying monsters with an imaginary +5 longsword, but when confronted by a real denizen of Dal Quor, the fighter’s imaginary weapons deal no damage to the creature. If he wishes to deal real damage, the fighter must use his actual statistics and possessions from the real world, including ammuni- tion (although upon waking he finds that he actually spent none of his ammunition). Similarly, a quori can attack a “dream character” on Dal Quor, dealing real damage with its natural weapons. Even then, a slain “dreamself” results only in the character waking up, uninjured, as damage sustained on Dal Quor doesn’t translate to real damage on the Material Plane. (Only quori with the invade dreams ability or a similar ability can truly harm creatures on the Material Plane.) Dreaming characters can kill quori on Dal Quor, which is why they prefer to use their invade dreams ability...
Dream Creatures without Eberron

Not running an Eberron campaign or planning on using a Region of Dreams in your game? You can still make use of these great new monsters. The hob and spellshadow are easy to adapt. Both can exist in your game world without much modification. If you feel you need to, you might change their creature types to something other than outsider. Monstrous humanoid makes a good choice for the hob, and a spellshadow makes an interesting aberration. Either could also be a great undead creature. The quori might more easily exist in a non-Eberron game without their dreamlords theme. They could be new types of devils, or with an alignment change, new types of demons. If you want to ground them in your world, the du’lora and hashisrag make cool aberrations, and the kalaraq could be a frightening undead.

and not attack dream characters in the Region of Dreams.

Whenever a dreaming character encounters a creature on Dal Quor, he has a chance to figure out whether it is merely a figment of his imagination or a truly dangerous native denizen of the plane. By interacting with the creature (such as speaking with it or fighting it), the character can make a DC 15 Will save as if disbelieving an illusion. If the character succeeds at the Will save, he knows the true nature of the creature. The DM should adjust the DC according to how closely the creature resembles reality (for example, a seemingly unkillable goblin should lower the DC).

Experience in Dreams

Usually, it is inappropriate to provide characters with XP rewards for challenges they face in their dreams. People dream every night, after all. However, if the party spends an extended amount of time dealing with dream encounters, the DM might want to give the characters a small story reward.

If an adventure cannot conclude without spending some time on Dal Quor, dream plane encounters should provide a set percentage of the experience reward such encounters would otherwise grant. As long as an encounter includes real creatures on the plane (such as quori) instead of merely figments, the PCs should receive some sort of reward. Eidolons and other figments should never provide XP, except as noted above. Other creatures should provide roughly half their usual experience if the encounter takes place solely on Dal Quor.

Eidolons

The quori claim the heart of Dal Quor as their realm, and dreamers rarely reach that center. Instead, dreamers prowl the fringes of the plane, shaping the mutable environment with their subconscious desires.

Characters most often encounter eidolons in the fringe realms of Dal Quor. Much like an illusion, an eidolon is an imaginary creature conjured to play a role in the dream. While an eidolon might appear to act in an intelligent manner, an eidolon possesses no sentience. It simply fulfills a role in the dream, reacting in the required way to meet the needs of the story. Although mindless, eidolons react as if they possessed intelligence, and thus mind-affecting effects affect them normally.

An eidolon can appear as any creature and typically possesses that creature's standard statistics. However, two exceptions exist: nightmare eidolons and idyllic eidolons. Nightmare eidolons have far greater power than the creature they appear as, whereas idyllic eidolons are remarkably easy to defeat. A nightmare eidolon uses statistics from a creature more powerful than the apparent creature (as measured by the creatures' CRs), while an idyllic eidolon uses the creature statistics of a much weaker creature. If you intend to have the PCs dream without the players knowing, you should use statistics for creatures with roughly similar abilities. If the PCs face dream monsters and their players already know it (or you don't care if they figure it out), use whatever statistics you wish.

Eidolons of Dal Quor are different from the rogue eidolons introduced in Monster Manual II.

Drifters

In between the purely imaginary eidolons and Dal Quor’s true children (the quori) lurk the drifters—bizarre creatures emerging from the collective minds of Eberron’s inhabitants to prey on dreaming souls. Drifters possess sentient intelligence and can exist outside of a dreamer’s imagination, but they have no common characteristics with one another. Drifters do not reproduce naturally; they emerge fully formed within the fringes of Dal Quor. The following two drifters represent merely the tip of the iceberg.

Hob

A hunched humanoid lurks in the shadows. It stands about 3 feet tall, and a patchwork of black scales and mangled fur covers its skin. Its bony head is almost as large as its torso, with 3-foot-long arms tipped with vicious claws. It snarls, revealing a mouth full of rotting fangs.

The predatory hob feeds on the fears of mortal minds. Solitary by nature, hobs roam the fringes of Dal Quor searching for prey. The inscrutable mind of the hob makes it immune to mind-affecting spells and powers, and as a result, hobs sometimes pose threats to quori; hunting parties of psilids and dal'oru quori occasionally roam the border realms, exterminating any hobs they find. Some sages believe that hobs occasionally find a way to reach Eberron, and encounters with hobs might account for more than a few folk tales.

A small humanoid creature in its natural form, a hob has a hunched posture, long arms, and a vaguely feline head almost as large as its torso. It typically runs on all fours.

Hobs can communicate telepathically with any creature with a language within 100 feet.

Combat:

A hob typically hides in the dreamscape of Dal Quor, searching the minds of dreamers for an appropriately terrifying nightmare scenario. Once it finds a suitable choice, it uses its metamorphosis ability to take the form of a creature appropriate to the setting of the nightmare, targeting the source of the nightmare with paralyzing fear.

A hob fights to satiate its appetite for mortal terror. The death of a single creature sates its needs, and it attempts to flee soon thereafter.

Darkest Fears (Su): A hob knows the deepest fears of all creatures within 100 feet and uses this information when choosing what forms to assume. This requires no concentration or effort on the part of the hob; it is a continuous, intuitive sense. This also allows the hob to detect the presence of any thinking creature within 100 feet.

This power provides the hob with enough information to carry out a convincing impersonation. If a character begins to suspect an evil fighter, the hob knows how the character expects the fighter to behave. This provides the hob with a +5 circumstance bonus on Bluff and Intimidate checks when it plays to a specific character’s fears.

Paralyzing Fear (Su): If the hob takes the shape of what creature a single enemy fears most, the hob can paralyze its victim with unreasoning terror. The DM and the character’s player can work together to determine what creature a character fears most. Faced with this apparition, the victim must succeed at a DC 18 Will save or be dazed and unable to take any actions for as long as the hob retains that shape or until the character makes a successful saving throw. The victim may attempt a new Will save each round until he succeeds or until the hob changes into a different shape, at which time he breaks free of the daze effect and is immune to that hob’s paralyzing fear ability for the next 24 hours. In addition, if the hob makes a successful attack against a dazed victim, that victim must immediately attempt an additional DC 18 Will save or become panicked for 2d4 rounds.

This is a mind-affecting fear effect. The saving throw DCs are Charisma-based.

Metamorphosis (Sp): A hob can change its shape at will as a free action. This works just like the metamorphosis power, except that the hob’s Metamorphic Transfer feats allow it to assume up to two of the extraordinary or supernatural abilities of its new form, in addition to keeping all of its own innate abilities. A hob can use an adopted power only 3 times/day. The hob can maintain the new form indefinitely, but it resumes its natural form if it killed or knocked unconscious.

Skills: The hob receives a +10 bonus on Disguise checks when using its metamorphosis ability.

A vaguely human-shaped apparition distorts the air. On closer examination, tiny letters and symbols inscribed on the air in faintly glowing energy define the lines of its body.

The spellshadow feeds on the knowledge of wizards and other arcane spellcasters. Some sages assert that spellshadows manifest from the thirst for arcane knowledge—that wizards’ desires for mystical power take form in Dal Quor and feed on their creators. Unless a character actively tries to keep an eye on it, the mere ripple of air that marks a spellshadow is difficult to spot. It has the vague outline of a humanoid form, composed of mystic symbols and runes. When it uses its spell theft ability, the words that comprise its body briefly flare with mystical energy; otherwise, the spellshadow is virtually impossible to see. A spellshadow understands Common and Draconic, but it never speaks. Its only sounds come from the whisperings of the distorted fragments of spells it has stolen in the past.

Combat

Hunger drives a spellshadow. If a group has no arcane spellcasters, the spellshadow avoids contact entirely. Otherwise, it uses stealth and its incorporeal nature to ambush spellcasters, appearing on top of them and draining magic as quickly as possible. While not terribly intelligent in most situations, a spellshadow possesses a keen instinctive sense of the tactical uses of magic and uses its stolen spells to deadly effect. If it drains all the spells that it can from the party, it attempts to flee.

Spell Theft (Su): The touch of a spellshadow drains away arcane energy and knowledge, stealing prepared spells. Whenever a spellshadow makes a successful melee attack, it drains 1d6 arcane spell levels from the victim. The spellshadow steals one random prepared spell or spell slot of the highest level it can. It then steals the next highest-level spell it can, up to the spell level amount it rolled. For example, a spellshadow that strikes a 5th-level wizard and rolls a 5 for its spell theft first steals a random 3rd-level spell (if the wizard still has one prepared) and a random 2nd-level spell. Against a 5th-level sorcerer, the same roll would result in the spellshadow draining two 2nd-level spell slots and a 1st-level spell slot.

For every 2 Hit Dice it possesses above 6, a spellshadow gains a +1 bonus to its spell theft damage roll; thus a 10 HD spell shadow rolls 1d6+2 and has the potential to steal 8th-level spells. The spellshadow can store a maximum number of spell levels equal to four times its Hit Dice.

This is one of the rare cases where dream damage affects the real world: when a spellshadow drains a spell, the victim cannot make use of that spell or spell slot for 24 hours.

A spellshadow can cast any spell it steals as a 6th-level caster. If the spellshadow steals a spell slot from a spellcaster that does not prepare spells, it can use that spell slot to cast a spell the spellcaster knows that is appropriate for the level of the spell slot.

Arcane Empowerment (Ex): A spellshadow feeds on arcane energy. Whenever it uses its spell theft ability, it heals a number of hit points equal to the number of spell levels drained. In addition, any time an arcane spell affects the spellshadow, it automatically heals a number of hit points equal to the spell’s level. This healing occurs before any effects of the spell are resolved. A spell that fails to get by the spellshadow’s spell resistance doesn’t heal the spellshadow.

Mage Sense (Su): A spellshadow can sense any form of magic within 200 feet, as greater arcane sight, but without actually needing to see the target. In addition, the spellshadow can sense the presence of prepared arcane spells not yet cast and unused arcane spell slots, which serve as the food of the spellshadow. This ability allows the spellshadow to ignore magical invisibility and to automatically disbelieve illusions without the need for a saving throw.

Superior Hide in Plain Sight (Ex): A spellshadow can hide while observed and even when it does not have cover or concealment.

Skills: A spellshadow receives a +10 racial bonus on Hide checks.

The Quori

Intelligent and immortal, quori inhabit the central regions of Dal Quor. Cruel but sophisticated, most quori prefer psychological torment to physical conflict. Quori patience knows no end, and they can wait decades to take vengeance on a foe or bring a plan to fruition. While often deadly opponents, most quori want to control every aspect of a battle; if caught by surprise, a quori might flee from an inferior foe, returning when it has the upper hand.

Quori Subtype: Quori is a subtype of the outsider type. It refers to a native of the plane of Dal Quor.

Traits: A quori possesses the following traits (unless otherwise noted in a creature’s entry).

---Energy Resistance (Ex): A quori has resistance to acid 10, cold 10, and fire 10.

Includes twenty-two stories of dark fantasy, with an introduction by Drew Hayes, creator of Fear Elves.

Greater Teleport (Su): On the plane of Dal Quor, a quori can use greater teleport at will, as the spell cast by a 14th-level caster, except that the quori can only transport itself and up to 50 pounds of objects. This ability does not function on other planes.

—Immunities (Ex): Quori are immune to charm, fear, and sleep effects.

—Power Resistance (Ex): A quori gains power resistance equal to 11 + its Hit Dice.

—See in Darkness (Su): A quori can see perfectly in darkness of any kind, even darkness created by a deeper darkness spell.

—Telepathy (Su): A quori can communicate telepathically with any other creature that has a language within 100 feet.

Quori Special Abilities: Quori that meet certain prerequisites gain the following additional special abilities.

—inactivate Dreams (Sp): Once per day, a quori with at least 9 Hit Dice residing on the plane of Dal Quor can cast dream or nightmare on a specified creature on another plane. When appearing in a dream, a quori can assume an alternate form, as if using alter self. The caster level for this ability equals the quori's Hit Dice. The save DC for the nightmare version of this ability is Charisma-based.

—Possession (Su): A quori with at least 4 Hit Dice and a Charisma of 13 can shuck its physical form on Dal Quor and take on an ethereal spirit form. Its spirit can then possess a suitable and willing human host (referred to hereafter as a "human vessel"). While in ethereal form, the quori's corporeal body lies senseless on Dal Quor in a state of suspended animation. Direct damage or exposure to an extreme environment harms it normally. The quori can roam ethereally as long as it wants, but the ethereal quori dies if its body is destroyed. It instantly returns to its body if dispel magic (or a similar effect) is successfully cast on the quori's body.

An ethereal quori spirit can attempt to possess a human vessel as a standard action. First, it must be adjacent to the desired human vessel. Second, the human vessel must have the same alignment as the quori and have a Charisma score equal to or greater than the quori's Charisma score. Finally, the human ves-

This creature is a whirlwind of eyes, wings, and shadow. Dozens of eyes study you as the creature spins about in midair: human eyes, insect eyes, and a luminescent dragon’s eye larger than your head. Its wings are an equally unlikely assortment, and it is difficult to see how they can possibly support its weight. A layer of smoky shadows wreathes the entire mass. Three dark tendrils reach out for you, and you feel a wave of hatred slam against your mind.

A du’loras quori is a spirit of rage, capable of driving mortals mad with its very presence. As the guardian spirits of the quori, the myriad eyes of du’loras sentinels watch the vaults of the Dreaming Dark. In times of battle du’loras fight in the vanguard, watching dispassionately as their enemies turn on one another to satisfy their bloodlust. While a du’loras feeds on the rage of others, the fiends themselves are cold and calculating. The typical du’loras enjoys tearing apart its opponents and burning their souls with flames of pure anger, but it remains a clever tactician and uses its aura of madness to sow chaos and confusion among its enemies.

Where the tsurosas constantly fight for position within the ranks of Dal Quor, du’loras serve the Dreaming Dark contentedly. Battle defines the existence of a du’loras, and these fiends spend their lives eagerly awaiting the next opportunity to match wits with a cunning foe. Du’loras often help the hashalags maintain order in Dal Quor, providing physical power to deal with traitors or troublemakers identified by hashalag inquisitors.

A maelstrom of eyes and wings suspended in a whirlwind of shadow; a du’loras appears insubstantial, but the shadowstuff that forms it is actually solid. A du’loras fights by grappling its enemies with smoky tentacles formed from this dark matter.

Du’loras speak Common, Infernal, Quori, and Riedran.

Combat

Cunning tacticians, typical du’loras use fury as a weapon. A common tactic among du’loras puts them close to spellcasters as soon as possible, where their burning rage ability strips the spellcasters of their ability to use magic or sophisticated tactics. Once a spellcaster has succumbed to burning rage, the du’loras turns its attention to others in the group. Id insinuation works particularly well for causing dissension in the ranks, forcing the enemies of the du’loras to fight one another.

A du’loras’s natural weapons are considered evil-aligned and lawfully aligned for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction.

Aura of Fury (Su): The mere presence of the du’loras drives creatures mad with rage. Any non-quori creature within 30 feet of a du’loras must make a successful DC 15 Will save or suffer the effects of the rage spell and attack another creature of the du’loras’s choosing within range. The affected creature does all it can to kill the target of its rage. As a move action, the du’loras can change the target of an affected creature’s rage. This effect lasts for as long as the victim remains within 30 feet of the du’loras. A character who successfully saves against the effect must make a new Will save at the beginning of every round he remains within 30 feet of the du’loras. A barbarian or other creature that can enter a similar rage suffers a –2 penalty to resist this effect. A character can make an Autohypnosis check in place of his Will save. This is a mind-affecting compulsion effect, and the save DC is Charisma-based.

Burning Rage (Su): Once a du'loran has established a hold, it can attempt to call on the grappled victim's inner rage and anger to trigger spontaneous combustion. After the du'loran inflicts constriction damage, its victim must make a DC 15 Will save. If the victim fails, it suffers 1d6 points of fire damage for every point by which it failed the Will save. A barbarian or other creature that can enter a similar rage suffers a -2 penalty to resist this effect. A character can make an Autohypnosis check in place of the Will save. This is a mind-affecting effect, and the save DC is Charisma-based.

If it slays a victim with this attack, the du'loran immediately heals 3d6 points of damage as it draws energy from the fury of its dying victim.

Constrict (Ex): On a successful grapple check, a du'loran deals 1d6+10 points of damage.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, the du'loran must hit with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it succeeds on a grapple check, it can constrict.

Psi-Link Abilities: At will—far hand, mindlink; 3/day—id insinuation, internal armor, psionic scent, trace telepath; 1/day—body adjustment, recall agony. Manifest level 10th. The save DCs are Charisma-based. When a du'loran uses id insinuation, its victim adds 10% to the roll made to determine the victim's action each round.

All-Around Vision (Ex): The many eyes of a du'loran provide it with a +4 bonus on Spot and Search checks. A du'loran cannot be flanked.

Skills: A du'loran receives a +2 racial bonus on Intimidate checks. It retains this bonus while inhabiting a human or inspired vessel.

Du'loran Altered

There are 90 Inspired with du'loran spirits on EBERRON. Most of these serve as wardens and commanders among the Thousand Eyes in Riedra. However, the Dreaming Dark occasionally sends du'lorans to Khorvaire to provide raw power to its operations. A typical du'loran quori has 12 ranks of Autohypnosis, Bluff, Concentration, Intimidate, Knowledge (psionics), Listen, Move Silently, Psicraft, Search, Sense Motive, Spot, and Survival; and 10 ranks of Knowledge (the planes).

Du'loran Quori The Dreamstalker, a du'loran quori, insinuates itself into the mind of a victim, causing them to act in ways that further the du'loran's goals. The Dreamstalker uses its Autohypnosis ability to make the victim more susceptible to its influence. It then uses its Euphoric touch to create a euphoric state in the victim, allowing the Dreamstalker to control their actions. The Dreamstalker's possessions and psi-like abilities further enhance its control over the victim. The Dreamstalker's telepathy and tongues abilities allow it to communicate with its victims and manipulate their thoughts, ensuring their compliance.

You see a man wearing an iridescent, pale blue robe. A deep hood hides his features, and a dim blue light shines out from under the hood. He seems to hover a few inches off the ground. As you look more closely, you realize that translucent, fleshy tendrils twined together form the entire figure—robe and all.

Hashalaqs serve as the loremasters of Dal Quor. Even those hashalaq without inspired vessels devote a great deal of time studying Eberron and its surrounding planes. Unlike most quori castes, they understand the ways of magic as well as psionic power. In Dal Quor, hashalaqs typically work as advisors to the higher powers. They also serve as inquisitors, policing the quori and ensuring that the rivalries of the tsucorax never threaten the greater plans of the Dreaming Dark.

In its natural form, a hashalaq quori is composed of hundreds of translucent tendrils, similar to the tentacles of a jellyfish. It can compress its tendrils to form a wide range of shapes, from a humanoid figure to a giant floating hand. A point of blue light suspended within the tendrils serves as its eyes and ears; it can move this sense organ around to suit its current shape.

Hashalaqs telepathically inherit the languages of any creature they wish to communicate with, speaking with perfect fluency and accent.

Combat

Hashalaqs despise physical combat and seek to use guile and treachery to defeat opponents. If forced into battle, a hashalaq uses its euphoric touch to incapacitate weak-willed melee fighters, saving its psi-like abilities for spellcasters and other ranged combatants. If in danger, a hashalaq teleports away and attempts to use its shapeshifting abilities to monitor its foes’ actions. The hashalaq waits for favorable conditions before it strikes again.

A hashalaq quori’s natural weapons are considered evil-aligned and lawful-aligned for the purposes of overcoming damage reduction, regardless of the quori’s current form.

Euphoric Touch (Su): The touch of a hashalaq floods its victim with sensations of joy and pleasure—feelings so intense they can destroy the victim’s mind. Whenever a hashalaq makes a successful melee touch attack, it deals 1d4+1 points of Wisdom damage instead of normal hit point damage. In addition, the victim must succeed at a DC 15 Will save or suffer the effects of brain lock for 1d4+1 rounds. If the victim’s Wisdom drops to 0, the victim suffers a catastrophic cerebral overload and dies. This is a mind-affecting effect, and the save DC is Charisma-based.

When it slays a victim with this attack, the hashalaq immediately heals 2d6 points of damage. A character killed by a hashalaq in his dream suffers 1d4+1 points of Wisdom damage when he awakens, as well as the effects of a nightmare spell.

Intimate Knowledge (Su): A hashalaq quori has an intuitive awareness of the emotions and thoughts of the creatures in its vicinity. This continuous ability functions as the empathy and detect hostile intent powers, but it affects a 60-foot radius centered on the quori.

As a free action, the hashalaq can focus this power on a single individual. The target may make a DC 15 Will save to resist this effect. If the target fails its save, the hashalaq gains a +2 insight bonus to AC against attacks made by the target and a +2 insight bonus on attack and damage rolls made against the target. The hashalaq does not have to concentrate to maintain this effect, but it loses its broader awareness when concentrating on a single individual.
The intimate knowledge ability of the hashalaq also provides it with a +2 insight bonus on Bluff, Diplomacy, Intimidate, and Sense Motive checks.
This is a mind-affecting ability.
The save DC is Charisma-based.

Psi-Like Abilities: At will—far hand: 3/day—body adjustment, a +10 bonus on Disguise checks when it uses metamorphosis.

A humanoid figure formed of pure shadow floats before you. A nimbus of light surrounds it without illuminating the surrounding area. It only serves to highlight the absolute darkness of the being within. A host of disembodied eyes of all shapes and sizes whirl around the featureless figure. These eyes constantly shift, appearing, disappearing, fading away, and bursting like bubbles.

Kalaraq is the princes of nightmare.
They guide the quori race. While calaraq never fight one another overtly, each has its own agenda; as a result, a kalarq rarely leaves Dal Quor to inhabit a mortal vessel.

Brilliant, ruthless, and cruel, kalarq are masters of manipulation, capable of twisting the thoughts of mortal and spirit alike. A kalarq possesses the power to consume and trap souls, preserving their knowledge in its essence. In battle, kalarq enjoy taunting opponents with the words of loved ones and other friends the spirit has devoured. An individual kalarq might have the knowledge of ancient kings, great sages, or even dragons trapped within its essence.

A kalarq is a creature formed of shadow, surrounded by a host of spectral eyes. Like the hashalaq, kalarq possess a mutable form, while they generally take on humanoid shapes; they can adopt any simple shape of Medium size. This has no impact on its ability scores or combat abilities.

Kalarq communicate telepathically, and can broadcast thoughts to any or all creatures within 500 feet. Kalarq's projected thoughts typically have a calming, hypnotic quality. The telepathic abilities of the spirit allow it to understand any form of communication used by a creature that has a language.

Combat

In its standard shape, a kalarq can form weapons or claws to make incorporeal touch attacks that makes use of its soul binding ability. These shadowy attacks strike at the soul of the victim, stripping away his life force and his sanity. When facing a group of enemies, a kalarq either relies on energy wave or psionic blast. After it stuns its opponents, the kalarq disperses into a swirling vortex of eyes and shadow, engulfing its enemies and devouring their minds. Against powerful individual opponents—especially other outsiders—the kalarq relies instead on focused attacks, such as ego whip to strip away spellcasting abilities, followed by insanity, mind thrust, and psychic crush. As most of the kalarq's psi-like abilities allow Will saves, it usually softens up its enemy with its soul binding touch before using its powers.

A kalarq's natural weapons are considered evil-aligned and lawful-aligned for the purpose of overcoming damage reduction.

Night Terrors (Su): A kalarq quori can split off aspects of itself and send these dark eyes to prowl Dal Quor in search of mortal spirits. This allows the kalarq to use nightmare three times per night as the spell cast by an 18th-level sorcerer (DC 22 Will save negates). The kalarq does not have to enter a trance. Victims who fail their initial saving throws must immediately make an additional DC 22 Will save. Any victim who fails this additional Will save takes 1d4 points of ability damage to its Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma scores. This is a mind-affecting effect, and the save DCs are Charisma-based.

Psionic Abilities: At will—dispel psionics, ego whip, far hand, inertial armor, mass cloud mind, mindlink, mind thrust, psionic blast, psionic charm; 3/day—energy wave, insanity, psychic crush; 1/day—focused mind seed, personal mind blank. Manifest level 18th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Soul Binding (Su): The incorporeal touch of a kalarq tears at its victim's mind and soul. Its incorporeal touch deals 1d6 points of cold damage and 1d4+1 points of Wisdom damage. This damage bypasses all forms of damage reduction. In addition, the victim must succeed at a DC 22 Will save or be confused as the confusion spell cast by an 18th-level caster.

If a kalarq reduces its opponent's Wisdom to 0, it binds the soul of its victim to one of its many eyes. This kills the victim instantly. Even a dreaming character dies if reduced to Wisdom of 0 from this attack. The kalarq gains access to all of the memories of the victim (although it does not gain any actual skill ranks or class levels) and gains a +10 insight bonus on Disguise checks made to impersonate the victim. A victim who dies to this ability cannot return to life through any means short of a wish or miracle spell until the kalarq dies. A dead kalarq automatically releases all the souls it bound.

All-Around Vision (Ex): The many eyes of the kalarq provide it with a +4 bonus on Spot and Search checks. A kalarq cannot be flanked.

Spying Eyes (Ex): A kalarq can send its many eyes to scout and spy at a distance. This grants it the same effect as the greater prying eyes spell with an unlimited duration, but the kalarq can only use 20 spying eyes per day. These eyes fully regenerate after 24 hours.

Swarm of Eyes (Su): A kalarq can disperse its physical form into a swarm of eyes. This transformation takes a standard action that does not provoke an attack of opportunity. While in swarm form, a kalarq becomes a size Large swarm composed of Fine creatures. Physical attacks, including ghost touch weapons, cannot harm it, although a weapon that deals energy damage (flaming, frost) can still deal that damage on a successful hit. A kalarq in swarm form uses its soul binding ability on any creature that occupies its space at the end of its move. Any creature that begins its turn in the same space as the swarm must succeed at a DC 26 Fort save or suffer 1 round of nausea. The kalarq swarm form has all of the abilities and vulnerabilities common to all swarms, as described on page 237 of the Monster Manual.

True Seeing (Su): The many eyes of a kalarq provide it with the benefit of a continuous true seeing spell, with a range of 120 feet.

Kalarq Inspired

At the time of the kalahtar exodus, only 12 kalarq-possessed Inspired lived on Eberron. While possible that new kalarq have arisen over the last few millennia, few of these spirits exist and each has duties and schemes to attend to in Dal Quor. Every kalarq has an Inspired vessel awaiting its use, but a kalarq only manifests on Eberron under the most dire circumstances.

A typical kalarq quori has 20 ranks of Autohypnosis, Concentration, Psicraft, and Sense Motive; 10 ranks in Bluff, Diplomacy, Disguise, Hide, Intimidate, Knowledge (arcana), Knowledge (history), Knowledge (local), Knowledge (nature), Knowledge (psionics), Knowledge (the planes), Listen, Move Silently, Perform (oratory), Search, and Spot.
