RESOURCES:
The foundational game material about drow in Faerûn includes Drow of the Underdark by Ed Greenwood and Menzoberranzan by Ed Greenwood, Douglas Niles, and R.A. Salvatore. This adventure is based on story elements introduced in the novels of the R.A. Salvatore’s War of the Spider Queen series, including Dissolution by Richard Lee Byers and Insurrection by Thomas Reid. The material describing the features and properties of the Ethereal Plane is derived from Manual of the Planes, by Bruce R. Cordell, Jeff Grubb, and David Noonan. Several drow-related magic items in Appendix 1 originally appeared in Lords of Darkness by Jason Carl and Sean K. Reynolds. The revenant template in Appendix 1 originally appeared in Monster Compendium: Monsters of Faerûn by Rob Heinso and James Wyatt.

City of the Spider Queen is a Forgotten Realms® adventure presenting a substantial quest into the deep Underdark of Faerûn. Against the background of civil war among the drow, the characters must halt the onslaught of an army of undead created to exact a terrible vengeance upon the surface world.

Encounter Levels: City of the Spider Queen is designed for a party of four characters who begin the adventure at 10th level. The characters’ long quest should offer enough experience to bring them as high as 18th level by the conclusion of the adventure.

Preparation

You need a copy of the Player's Handbook, the Dungeon Master's Guide, the Monster Manual, and the Forgotten Realms Campaign Setting to use this adventure. Some monsters from Monster Compendium: Monsters of Faerûn also appear in this book, but their complete statistics are given in Appendix 2. If you prefer to use monsters from the Monster Manual, appropriate monster substitutions are suggested in Appendix 2 as well. Several NPCs in this adventure have prestige classes that are detailed in other books. These books are not required to run this adventure, since all pertinent statistics and abilities for these NPCs are included in Appendix 2.

Text that appears in shaded boxes is player information, which you may read aloud or paraphrase as appropriate. Text in sidebars contains important notes for the Dungeon Master (DM) and background campaign information. Monster and nonplayer character (NPC) statistics are provided with each encounter in abbreviated form. Full monster statistics for standard monsters are in the Monster Manual or the Forgotten Realms Campaign Setting, while statistics for new or unique monsters are provided in Appendix 1 and Appendix 2 at the end of this book. You should review all these statistics before the game starts to refresh your memory of the creatures’ abilities.

Adventure Background

Lolth has fallen silent. Each midnight, the priestesses in their darkened chambers send their pleas to the Demonweb Pits, but they receive no answer. They gain no spells. They hear no reassurance that Lolth has not abandoned them, still watches over them, or even remains alive.

Many priestesses remain firm in their faith. In their minds, it is perfectly logical that Lolth would test them this way, withdrawing her presence and observing whether her followers remain faithful. In most cities of the drow, life goes on as normal. Not so in all cities, however.

In the Underdark city of Maerimydra, Lolth’s slackened grip on the drow has brought about utter annihilation. Initially, insurrection, unrest, and the unbridled ambition of the city's archmage, Duneth Wharrreil, weakened Maerimydra and led to its fall at the hands of an invading force of goblins, ogres, giants, and demons. Led by the fearsome half-fiend fire giant Kurgoth Hellspawn, the invaders sacked the city and slaughtered most of its population, drow and slaves alike. From his Shattered Tower, Duneth greatly aided Hellspawn’s onslaught and brought about the fall of many drow strongholds and redoubts.

Duneth and his barbaric allies were not alone in their hatred for House Chûmavh, the ruling house of Maerimydra. Worshipers of Kiaransalee, the drow deity of death and vengeance, took advantage of the chaos to seize control of Castle Maerimydra, home of House Chûmavh. Under the leadership of Irae T’sarran, an albino drow priestess, the Kiaransaleen overthrew the last bastion of Lolth-worshipping drow. While Kurgoth’s troops burned and plundered the city,
Introduction

Irae T'sarran struck against Duneth, killing the archmage and casting down his tower. Then, at the direction of her evil deity, the priestess gathered her living and undead servants in Castle Maerimydra and summoned Kiaransalee's Undying Temple to the Material Plane.

Although most of Maerimydra's drow were killed or enslaved, small bands of refugees escaped into the Underdark. One such group fled toward Maerimydra's former outpost at Szith Morcane, located some 100 miles to the southwest. Irae T'sarran's agents (including her son and daughter) pursued the fleeing refugees to Szith Morcane with instructions to discover whether the Lolth-priestesses in the colony had been similarly robbed of their spells, and—if possible—to seize control of Szith Morcane. These agents quickly accomplished both missions, slaying the priestesses of Lolth and transforming them into guth-maren's, hideous undead servitors. Inspired by their new leaders, the drow of Szith Morcane have begun making raids on the surface, primarily on the lands of Daggerdale, almost directly above the drow outpost.

Back in Maerimydra, Irae T'sarran is now engaged in intensive research on a great reavance spell. Guided by Kiaransalee's divine whispers, the priestess prepares to use the potent negative energy of the temple in conjunction with the new spell to simultaneously animate the thousands of fallen drow, goblins, ogres, and giants in and around Maerimydra into a single horde under her command. The magic Irae studies would raise a vengeful legion of revenants in full possession of their faculties, but enslaved to her will. Irae has already savored the first sweet taste of the vengeance demanded by her deity by destroying the Lolthites of Maerimydra—now she dreams of fulfilling the age-old dream of all drow and exacting revenge against their oppressors, the peoples of the surface world.

Adventure outline

The adventure begins as the player characters investigate a number of recent drow raids on the surface in Part 1. Their explorations lead them through some ancient crypts in the Dagger Hills to the caverns of Szith Morcane, a small drow outpost originally founded by colonists from nearby Maerimydra. In Szith Morcane, the characters discover a thriving cult of Kiaransalee. The cult has taken control of the outpost, slayed the priestesses of Lolth, and spurred the natives of Szith Morcane to the Undying Temple to the surface world.

At the heart of Szith Morcane, the characters find a tunnel leading off to the northeast, toward Maerimydra. In Part 2 of the adventure, they must travel through roughly 100 miles of Underdark tunnels, past numerous dangerous regions, including the Lake of Shadows, the Wailing Cliff, and Vournoth's Mire. Battling past the evil denizens of these tunnels, the characters eventually make their way to the ruins of Maerimydra.

In Maerimydra, in Part 3, the party finds the drow city in ruins. The remnants of the army of Kurgoth Hellspawn have overrun the city. The cult of Kiaransalee still defends the last redoubt of the drow city, bolstered by large numbers of undead. Irae T'sarran's summoning of the Undying Temple created serious local corruptions in the Weave of magic. The bulk of the adventure takes place in the ruins of Maerimydra (the City of the Spider Queen) while the PCs fight the living and undead servants of Irae T'sarran, as well as the remaining invaders of the city.

Part 4, the climax of the adventure, occurs in the Undying Temple. Irae T'sarran's sinister fane at the top of Castle Maerimydra. Built partially in the Material Plane and partially in the Ethereal Plane, the temple sits at the center of a large and expanding area of disruption in the Weave. Within this stronghold, the PCs battle Irae's fiendish and undead minions and finally the priestess herself.

The default hook for this adventure has the characters becoming involved because of the recent rash of drow raids in the Daggerdale region. The PCs may be asked to stop the raids by some higher authority (such as Randal Morn or some Harper higher-up), or they may be lured to investigate for more personal reasons. If any of them have family or holdings in Daggerdale, those could be the targets of drow raids.

If your campaign's activity centers somewhere other than the Dalelands, you can move Szith Morcane to that location, draw the characters in through drow raids in that area, and connect Szith Morcane to the Deep Wastes and Maerimydra through a portal. The adventure assumes you are making use of the Daggerdale setting.

Another option entails a rather different campaign style. The novel Dissolution by Richard Lee Byers and the remaining novels in the War of the Spider Queen series follow the actions of a group of Lolth-worshiping drow from Menzoberranzan in the wake of Lolth's sudden silence. This adventure works as well for evil drow characters as it does for heroes from the surface, though their motivations are completely different. If this kind of campaign appeals to you, the characters could be drow from Menzoberranzan or members of House Jaelre in Cormanthor sent to Szith Morcane to learn what they can about the rumored destruction of Maerimydra. Finding the clerics of Lolth slaughtered and transformed into undead, the player characters (assuming they remain loyal to Lolth) might feel compelled to destroy the Kiaransaleen drow and track down their leader in Maerimydra.

Running the Adventure

Descending deep into the Underdark to confront powerful drow villains in their own demesne makes for an extraordinary adventure. You will want to address several unique complications inherent in this adventure in order to make the best use of the plotline, the villains' capabilities, and the features of its unusual setting. Faerzress, the magical emanation common throughout the Underdark, scrambles teleportation magic. The villains have powerful spells they may employ against the heroes once they become aware of the threat the player characters pose. Finally, the heroes will have to balance the use of time to rest and re-equip against the advance of the villains' plots.
faerzress and the underdark

The Underdark of Faerûn is suffused with a magical radiation that the drow call faerzress. A remnant of the mighty forces that shaped the terrain of the Underdark, faerzress distorts and interferes with certain types of magic. In the context of this adventure, faerzress has the following effects:

- Each Scry check made for scrying on a target located within the Underdark (as opposed to checks made to detect magical sensors) takes a −4 penalty because of the interference of faerzress with divination magic.
- Transmutation (teleportation) spells and effects such as teleport, word of recall, refuge, and even teleport without error do not work reliably over distances greater than 1 mile when either the origin or the destination is within the Underdark. A character who casts the teleport spell or uses an ability that duplicates the spell must make a Spellcraft check (DC 35). If the check is successful, the spell works properly. If it fails, the teleporting character automatically suffers a mishap, just as if he had rolled 100 on the table in the teleport spell description, followed by an “off-target” result.

A character using a normally infallible form of teleportation magic (such as word of recall or teleport without error) must make a Spellcraft check (DC 25). If the check is successful, the spell works properly. If it fails, the character suffers a mishap and an off-target result as described above.

The effects of faerzress on spells are not widely known among surface-dwelling characters. Before a character attempts a spell that would be affected by the Underdark’s magical conditions, you should allow the caster a Knowledge (arcana) check (DC 25) to determine whether the character happens to know about hazards of which the player may not be aware.

The effects of faerzress apply to Parts 2, 3, and 4 of the adventure. The Dordrien Crypts and Szith Morcane in Part 1 are simply not deep enough to be immersed in the dangerous magical aura.

keeping track of time

Because getting into and out of the Underdark can be challenging, a party of characters may find it difficult to rest or re-equip during the course of this adventure. Once the heroes embark on their journey into the depths in Part 2 and begin exploring ruined Maerimydra in Part 3, a return to the surface becomes less and less practicable, at the same time that Irae’s plans begin to accelerate. The adventure is paced so as to afford the characters a couple of retreats for rest and re-equipping during the latter stages of the adventure, but the heroes can’t afford to do so every time they might want to. It’s a good idea to keep kiaransalee (demigod)

- Lady of the Dead, the Revenancer, the Vengeful Banshee, the White Banshee
- Symbol: Female drow hand wearing silver rings
- Alignment: Chaotic evil
- Portfolio: Undead, vengeance
- Domains: Chaos, Drow, Evil, Retribution, Undeath
- Favored Weapon: “Cold Heart” (dagger)

Kiaransalee (kee-uh-ran-sa-lee) is the drow deity of both vengeance and the undead. She is cruel, twisted, and consumed by thoughts of vengeance against Lloth and every other deity and mortal being who has wronged her. Kiaransalee descended into madness long ago, but she retains her twisted cunning and prefers to solve problems herself rather than trust someone else to execute her plans.

Kiaransalee’s church is made up of secretive clusters of drow within larger drow communities, plus a handful of independent enclaves. Her clerics are agents of vengeance, plotting revenge on those who have slain, harmed, or insulted the priesthood in any way. They also regularly go out on missions to kill others and animate their corpses.

Clerics of Kiaransalee pray for their spells at midnight. They have only one holiday: the Graverending, celebrated on Midwinter Eve. On this unholy night, every cleric of Kiaransalee animates as many undead creatures as possible, sending them into the world to wreak havoc upon the living.

Besides this annual macabre celebration, clerics of Kiaransalee observe minor devotions every month.

History/Relationships: Kiaransalee was once mortal, a powerful drow necromancer-queen on another plane. Her unholy experiments provoked her husband to curse and banish her, and she fled into hiding with a cadre of undead servitors. She continued her grisly work in secret for centuries before raising an undead army to exact vengeance on her husband, leaving all the inhabitants of her home realm dead in her wake. This act of all-consuming destruction secured her place among the immortal deities, and she has chafed under Lloth’s rulership ever since. Her first significant advance was her murder of the abyssal lord Orcus, which granted her a brief taste of independence from Loth’s tyrannical control. Her activities on Faerûn have earned her the enmity of Dumathoin, Kelemvor, and Jergal, while securing her alliances with Malar, Hoar, and Velsharoon.

Dogma: Death comes to all, and cruel vengeance will be exacted on those who waste their lives on the petty concerns of this existence. True power comes only from the unquestioning servitude of the once-dead, mastery over death, and the eventual earned stature of one of the ever-living in death. Hunt, slay, and animate those who scorn the Revenancer’s power, and answer any slight a thousandfold so that all may know the coming power of Kiaransalee.

Aided by Harper agents, Archendale, Deepingdale, and Mistledale unite to confront Irae's horde and stop the depredations at about D+100. This action culminates in a terrible battle in Arkhenvale at D+120. The undead army is defeated, but at an awful cost; many thousands of Dalesfolk die, and three of the small Dales (Battledale, Featherdale, and Tasselda) are virtually depopulated by Irae's scourge. Worse yet, unless Irae and her Undying Temple are destroyed, she simply gathers the vaunted dead who fell stopping her initial invasion and animates them, starting the cycle of destruction again a few months later.

The D+50 event offers an excellent chance for you to have an NPC known to the characters contact them and urge them to redouble their efforts.

Resting and re-equipping

Obviously, the Underdark offers few safe places in which to study new spells, sell or buy magic items, or engage in item creation. Dagger Falls and Hillsfar provide such services, or the characters can look elsewhere.

Dagger Falls

Dagger Falls is located only 10 miles from the Dordrien Crypts and its hidden entrance to the Underdark. It takes a party of adventurers on foot about 7 hours to hike the distance along a wide, dusty track. On horseback, it's about a 2-hour ride. Dagger Falls is close, but it is not a very large community, so it offers few possibilities for high-level characters looking to acquire expensive magic items.

Hillsfar

Hillsfar is not a particularly friendly city, especially to nonhumans, but it is a safer place to visit than Zhentil Keep. Hillsfar is large enough to offer access to many of the items or markets high-level characters may be seeking. The city is also home to a Red Wizard enclave offering many minor items at good prices, and a few more powerful ones to discreet customers.

Hillsfar (Metropolis): Conventional; AL N; 100,000 gp limit; Assets 199,880,000 gp; Population 39,976; Isolated (humans 97%, half-orcs 2%).

Authority Figure: Maalthir (First Lord of Hillsfar), N male human Wiz18.

Important Characters: Vaustal Urle, LN female human Clr17 of Helm (high-level cleric willing to aid adventurers serving lawful deities); Imaerphil Clovenshield, NE female human Ftr9/Rog4 (leader of Maalthir's guard); Dreveth the Gray, NG male human Div16 (high-level wizard willing to aid adventurers serving the cause of good); Chaumyk Vorn, LE male human Evo7/Red4 (khazark of the Thayan enclave in Hillsfar).

OTHER CITIES
Characters with access to teleport spells or with knowledge of the right portals in the area may decide to travel to any number of other cities. Distance is no longer a constraint once characters reach a certain level of power and affluence. Characters in search of the largest city with the greatest likelihood of having whatever it is they seek would be well advised to travel to Waterdeep. Other large and wealthy cities that would serve the needs of adventurers include Calimport, Ordulin, Raven's Bluff, or Westgate. Each of these cities has its own unique perils, but in the context of this adventure they serve as excellent refuges and armories.

Playing the Villains Smart

Once Irae T'sarran realizes that she is under attack by surface-dwelling adventurers, she doesn't ignore the approaching threat. She begins to take steps to make the heroes' lives more difficult. Her actions allow you to introduce the players to their primary antagonist before they even reach her citadel, so that they can build up an honest loathing for her wickedness and evil ways. It also lets the players know that their task will become more difficult if they take too long to interfere with Irae's plans.

Triggers

Four trigger events may trip particular NPC responses in the adventure, as described below. These events are an attack on Szith Morcane, the death of Dorina T'sarran, the detection of a player character's scrying efforts, and an attack on Castle Maerimydra. Additional events may have other consequences; use the suggested events here as a guideline for other villain reactions.

Attack on Szith Morcane
If the heroes attack Szith Morcane, cause noticeable damage, and then withdraw, the drow there naturally blame the folk of Daggerdale. In addition to the defensive adjustments described in Part 1, Dorina organizes a counterstrike.
Introduction

The first time the heroes enter the complex, cause damage or an alarm, and then leave, Dorina organizes a raiding band the next night and sends it up through the Dordrien Crypts; see the event description under Szith Morcane in Part 1.

The first time the heroes enter the House Morcane level (S37 through S50) and then retreat, or if they defeat Solom Ned'razak or one of the T'sarran nieces, Dorina organizes a hunter-killer team and sends it out in search of the offending characters on the following night. Again, refer to the description in Szith Morcane.

DEATH OF DORINA T'SARRAN

While Irae T'sarran holds no affection for her daughter than she does for any of her minions, she entrusts Dorina with important responsibilities and expects her to perform well. To this end, she communicates with Dorina once or twice a tenday by means of sending spells and summons infernal messengers to carry her orders to her daughter.

Dorina naturally does not divulge any information about troublesome surface meddlers to her mother, and she goes to great lengths to conceal problems from Irae T'sarran. However, if Dorina suddenly becomes incommunicado, note the day on which that occurs. Irae notices Dorina's lack of response 1d8 days later and investigates the following day with disern location, scrying, and similar spells. On the second day after she notices, she uses one of the responses noted below (most likely resurrection).

HEROES NOTICED SCRYING

Should the heroes succeed in learning the name of their ultimate antagonist and scrying on her activities, Irae may notice their efforts. She is entitled to a Scry check of her own (DC 20) to notice the magical sensor used against her (Scry modifier +12). On the day following the noticed attempt, Irae tries to scry on the spellcaster who was spying on her, as described below in Irae's Responses.

HEROES INVADE CASTLE MAERIMYDRA

Irae could not care less what happens in the Deep Wastes or the ruined city of Maerimydra, but the appearance of adventurers in her citadel provokes an immediate attack. If she has not done so already, she makes use of one or more of the tactics listed below and directs her followers to prepare an ambush as described in Part 3.

IRAEE'S RESPONSES

Irae is busy with her spell research, so she doesn't want to devote much time to dealing with enemies who aren't actually inside the walls of Castle Maerimydra. Once the heroes attract her notice by defeating Dorina or otherwise interfering with her plans, she employs one or more of the tactics below.

SCRYING

Irae attempts to scry one of the characters in the party. If she has no better idea of her target than "the person who was scrying on me" or "the person who killed my daughter," she must make a Scry check (DC 20). She checks in on the characters once every 1d6 days until they reach Maerimydra, after which she attempts to scry them at least once per day.

SENDING

Once she knows one of the characters in the party, Irae uses a sending spell to deliver a threat. Imaginative and sadistic, she looks for opportunities to sow dissent or uncertainty among her foes through this tactic. For example, her message might be, "One of your companions is destined to serve me, fool. When the time is right, you will learn the meaning of vengeance," or perhaps, "Every spell you cast only adds to my strength. How can you hope to defeat me?"

TRUE RESURRECTION

Irae T'sarran views undeath and revenance as a suitable result of any of her minions' defeats, but she can't make a revenant without a body close at hand. If a key follower dies in some remote or particularly destructive way, the high priestess of Kiaransalee is willing to cast a true resurrection spell to restore that individual to her service. Because the spell costs 7,000 gp per use, she takes this step only for important followers.

Two NPCs likely to be brought back this way are Dorina T'sarran or Zedarr T'sarran. When restored to life, the subject lacks any gear not recovered by Irae's forces. Once the resurrected minion reaches Irae's citadel, he or she can re-equip with masterwork arms and armor, plus a handful of minor magic items that Irae makes available.

If Dorina is restored to life, she endeavors to return to her previous existence as a vampire as quickly as possible, because she actually prefers that state.

SUMMON MONSTER (EL 12–13)

Once the player characters have wrecked Szith Morcane or found some other way to irk Irae, she begins to engineer attacks on them from the sanctity of her citadel. Once she locates the characters through scrying, she uses a summon monster spell to summon a demon or devil, then orders it to teleport to the party's location and attack. Her monsters of choice for this tactic include a cornugon (devil, CR 12), gelugon (devil, CR 13), or vrock (demon, CR 13). She doesn't bother to summon anything less dangerous, or anything that can't teleport to the party's location. While Irae could theoretically use this tactic every day, she doesn't attempt it more than once per tenday because she is busy researching her great revenance spell.

Even though the characters don't really defeat the summoned monster or Irae T'sarran when they kill or drive off such a fiend, the encounter should be worth something. Award experience as if the party had fought the monster, with an ad hoc adjustment of –50% because of the creature's inability to use its own summon ability and its limited time on the Material Plane.

PLANAR ALLY (EL 16)

When Irae T'sarran becomes truly concerned about the approach of the player characters, she casts planar ally and summons a nalfeshnee (demon). She strikes a deal with the creature to locate the party and slay or carry off at least one of the heroes.

Because the nalfeshnee is quite intelligent and the nature of the spell calls it to the risk of real death, it does not rush headlong into combat with the heroes. Given a chance, it uses alter self or invisibility to get close and study the characters, looking for a weakness or an opportunity to attack while the party is divided. When it decides the time is right, it uses its spell-like abilities to prepare for battle, assuming to summon additional demons and casting unholy aura before attacking.

Since Irae is already heavily indebted to various demonic powers and does not wish to incur additional obligations, she does not do this more than once.

Cast of Characters

The following significant characters are found in this adventure. This list is organized alphabetically by first name to help you reference a particular character quickly.

Alissannara Morcane: The high priestess of Szith Morcane, now a ghost.

Cabrath Nelinderra: Drow cleric and second-in-command of Kiaransalee’s cult in Maerimydra; Irae T’sarran’s chief lieutenant.

Chahir: Vampire sorcerer residing in the Dordrien Crypts.

Chiirikk: Phasm belonging to the group known as the Hidden in the ruins of Maerimydra.

Dessa sik-Morcane: A minor noble in Szith Morcane, now a prisoner.

Dorina T’sarran: Vampire drow cleric of Kiaransalee who commands Szith Morcane; Irae T’sarran’s daughter.

Duneth Wharreil: Former Archmage of Maerimydra, now a silveraith under Irae T’sarran’s dominion.

Filzaur: Drow wizard, Inverted Tower student in Szith Morcane.

Fienser: Draegloth torturer who serves Irae T’sarran in the Undying Temple.

Ghindul: Kir-lanan leader at the Wailing Cliff.

Gok’lak: Grimlock barbarian dominated by the mind flayer Quthnorak in Vounroth’s Mire.

Guk: Goblin rogue, member of the Hidden in the ruins of Maerimydra.

Ice: White dracolich, important ally of Irae T’sarran in Castle Maerimydra.

Irae T’sarran: High Priestess of Kiaransalee in Maerimydra and leader of the White Banshee’s cult. She plans to raise an army of revenants to unleash on the surface world.

Kara: Divine seeker of Vhaeraun and member of the Hidden in the ruins of Maerimydra.

Khumarr: Blackguard of Kiaransalee, an important lieutenant of Irae T’sarran in Castle Maerimydra.

Kurgoth Hellspawn: A half-fiend fire giant who conquered Maerimydra, aided by the treachery of Duneth Wharreil. Kurgoth’s army still besieges Castle Maerimydra. Kurgoth has a fiendish war elephant companion named Tusk.

Lady Quallem: A human ghost in the Dordrien Crypts.

Laerekh: An important necromancer of Kiaransalee’s cult in Castle Maerimydra.

Larala Dumia: An insane half-drow fang of Lolth, hiding near Szith Morcane.

Logala Thenduk: Drow wererogue, a member of the Hidden in Maerimydra.

Mass: A drow vampire assassin in Castle Maerimydra, the lover of Cabrath Nelinderra.

Nohruzzai: A male drow wizard, student at the Inverted Tower in Szith Morcane.

Paelinn: Divine seeker of Kiaransalee, a resident of the Undying Temple.

Phaikkul: Kir-lanan leader at the Wailing Cliff.

Quthnorak: A mind flayer in Vounroth’s Mire.

Solom Ned’razak: Archmage of Szith Morcane and head of the Inverted Tower.

Suumath Dacindra: A drow half-dragon sorcerer in the Deep Wastes.

Susstam Mar-Shinne: Drow wizard, Head Student at the Inverted Tower in Szith Morcane.

Taharak: A drow ghost champion of Kiaransalee. He rides a nightmare and leads an ethereal patrol in Maerimydra, the castle, and the Undying Temple.

The Claw: A half-fiend kuo-toa cleric/assassin who rules the kuo-toa in the Lake of Shadows.

Thulk: A bugbear fighter who bosses the slaves of Szith Morcane.

Tierak Morcane: A drow priestess of Lolth in the Dordrien Crypts. She fled her home in Szith Morcane after the followers of Kiaransalee overthrew her House and flayed the other Lolth clerics.

Tooman Thendrik: A drow cleric of Ghaunadarr, the deity of slime and corruption. He maintains a secret shrine in Szith Morcane.

Umaerh: A drow lich arcane devotee of Kiaransalee, found in the Undying Temple.

Velasta and Velina T’sarran: Twin drow clerics of Kiaransalee, members of House T’sarran, and Irae’s nieces. They answer to Dorina T’sarran in Szith Morcane.

Wisp: A half-drow rogue in Maerimydra, member of the Hidden.

Wyrruth: An ambassador from the City of Shade, guest in Castle Maerimydra.

Yashar: A medusa sorcerer who helps to defend the Undying Temple.

Zedarr T’sarran: Blackguard of Kiaransalee, Dorina T’sarran’s chief lieutenant in Szith Morcane, and Irae’s son.
Daggerdale has recently experienced a number of raids conducted by drow—not the drow resident in Cormanthor who make life so difficult in Mistledale, but drow from the Underdark. Hailing from a small drow outpost called Szith Morcane, these Underdark raiders are vicious, thoroughly evil, and supported by ghastly undead troops.

Szith Morcane lies in the upper Underdark, below an ancient burial ground called the Dordrien Crypts. The forgotten folk of Dordrien, a town that once nestled in the Dagger Hills, built a series of crypts in some natural limestone caverns nearby. Those caves connect to the Underdark in the vicinity of Szith Morcane, an outpost built a few centuries ago by drow from the deep realm of Maerimydra. While the drow of Maerimydra also ruled Shadowdale, Szith Morcane served as a supply station for drow operating on the surface and a staging point for new drow incursions against the surface. Since humans took back control of Shadowdale, however, the drow of Szith Morcane have shown little interest in the surface world. The folk of nearby Daggerdale know of the crypts and believe they house an entrance to the Underdark, but they avoid the area, believing it haunted.

A month ago, refugees from the destruction of Maerimydra arrived in Szith Morcane, led by a handful of surviving priestesses of Lolth. Unbeknownst to them, servants of Irae Tsarran had infiltrated the group. Irae’s minions were instructed to learn whether the priestesses of Lolth in Szith Morcane had lost their spells as those in Maerimydra had, and if so, to usurp control of the entire colony. They quickly accomplished these goals, and they now lead the drow of Szith Morcane in revived raids upon the surface.

The residents of Daggerdale, suddenly exposed to drow raids stemming from the vicinity of the crypts, naturally suspect the rumored Underdark connection there. The “Character Hooks” section of the Introduction suggests ways to lead the characters into investigating, and the victims of the raids naturally point the characters toward the Dordrien Crypts.

Adventure Start

The player introduction presented here assumes that you set the beginning scenes of City of the Spider Queen in or around Daggerdale, and that your players respond to a request for assistance from a local ruler with a good reputation. If you have decided to locate the drow outpost of Szith Morcane somewhere else in Faerûn, or if your players are not likely to investigate the recent drow raids simply because they’re asked to do so, you may need to set up your own starting scenario.

When you are ready to start the adventure, read or paraphrase the text below to the players:

You have received an urgent summons to the hall of Lord Randal Morn, ruler of Daggerdale. Randal Morn has governed the war-torn dale for more than four years now. Under his wise guidance, much of the damage done by the decades-long Zhent occupation has been repaired, and the folk of Daggerdale have begun to prosper again. The heroic story of Randal Morn’s resistance against the Zhents and the restoration of his throne is widely known throughout the Dalelands.

The Lord of Daggerdale does not stand on ceremony, and he personally greets you at the doors of his hall. Leading you to a comfortable study lined with bookshelves, he calls for refreshments. “I thank you for coming so quickly,” he begins. “I’d heard that your company was passing through the area, and you have a reputation as courageous problem-solvers. Well, I think I have a problem that needs solving.”

“Seven days ago, a band of drow raided several farms and freeholds about 10 miles south of here. A number of people were killed, and the marauders caused much damage. Local militia tracked the drow band to the vicinity of an old set of drien Crypts, on the desolate western edge of the Dagger Hills. Rumor has it that those crypts conceal an entrance to the Underdark.

“Three nights ago, the drow raiders returned and caused even more damage. I think the time has come for some experienced and capable adventurers to put a stop to these raids. We haven’t had trouble with drow in Daggerdale for hundreds of years, and I have no idea what has stirred them up now. Can you help me?”

Randal Morn knows of two raids. His soldiers have reported the deaths of fifteen to twenty farmers in the affected area. Very little loot was carried away, and no captives were taken—the drow seemed bent on mindless slaughter, which strikes the Lord of Daggerdale as unusually savage and pointless. The signs indicate that perhaps a dozen drow on foot were responsible for the damage.

Mercenary-minded characters might ask Randal Morn what’s in it for them. The Lord of Daggerdale is willing to pay 5,000 gp if asked, and he promises to cover up to 5,000 gp worth of healing or other spells at the temple of Tyr in Dagger Falls if necessary. Randal Morn is not an especially wealthy lord, and if the characters press him for too much more than that, he tells them that he can’t afford their services and that he’ll have to call in some favors to get another company of adventurers to look into the raids.

If the characters press Randal Morn for more information about the crypts, he tells them that they are rumored to be haunted, and he knows that the folk who live nearby give the place a wide berth. “But I’ve never looked into it,” he says. “No trouble has ever surfaced there before. I would round up some companions and go myself, but I have too many duties here.”

This is a good opportunity for the characters to make any last-minute preparations they wish before setting off. Randal Morn urges them to look into the situation before the drow launch another raid, but beyond that he is willing to provide lodging, mounts, porters, or other such resources as requested.

The Dordrien Crypts

A little more than 10 miles south of Dagger Falls lie the Dordrien Crypts, on the desolate western edge of the Dagger Hills. A cart track running from the town into the farmlands and wilds of southern Daggerdale passes roughly 2 miles to the west of the crypts. From the road, a trail leads past several nearby homesteads (most of them recently burned or abandoned, although some have been empty for many years) toward the entrance. Based on the directions Randal Morn provides, the characters can find the place without difficulty.

Until the latest raid, local goatherds often grazed their herds in the vicinity. The trail leads past the crypts and up into the Dagger Hills, where the high summer pastures lie. It finally peters out 5 miles farther east.

The Dordrien Crypts consist of a passage carved into a hillside, leading to three elaborate vaults carved from the rock. Two impressive stone mausoleums still stand outside the crypts proper, their stonework crumbling and worn, and their doors hanging open in the wake of ancient tomb robbers. A handful of other mausoleums have not fared so well, and over many, many years, nearby homesteaders have hauled off most of the fallen stones to use in their own buildings. On several occasions, bandit groups have attempted to use the crypts as a hideout, but the depredations of Chaahir and his minions (D2) quickly drove the interlopers away.

Dordrien Crypts Features

Both the two freestanding mausoleums and the underground crypts share the following features, unless noted otherwise in a specific area description.

Doors: The doors in the crypts are stone. They are neither locked nor stuck. Standard doors are as follows:

- Stone Doors: 4 in. thick, hardness 8; hp 60; AC 5; break DC 28.

- Walls: Walls in the freestanding mausoleums (and their exterior walls) and the surface level of the crypts (D1–D6) are superior masonry walls.

- Superior Masonry Walls: 1 ft. thick, hardness 8; hp 90; AC 3; break DC 35; Climb DC 20.

Walls in the lower crypt level and the Underdark level (D7–D20) are unworked stone.

- Unworked Stone Walls: Minimum 5 ft. thick, hardness 8; hp 900 (per 5 feet of thickness); AC 3; break DC 65; Climb DC 20.

Graves are carved into the walls of the crypt caverns.
Common citizens were interred in the natural caverns below.

The floors in the Underdark level (D15–D20) are natural stone floors. Running and charging are impossible on these surfaces, but no Climb checks are required to navigate them.

Ceilings: Ceilings in the surface level crypts (D1–D6) are 8 feet high and as smooth as the walls. The natural caverns on the crypt level (D7–D14) are 12 to 15 feet high, and those on the Underdark level (D15–D20) are 14 to 18 feet high. The ceilings in all the natural caverns are unhewn and marked by the occasional stalactite.

Surface Level

Before you, the trail winds past a low, rounded hill dotted with jutting boulders and dense briar patches. Sere grasses crown its barren slopes. Beyond this first rampart, a long chain of rugged hills stretches away to the south and the east—the Dagger Hills. The trail turns here and continues south, skirting the lower slopes.

Two old, small, stone buildings stand here in the shadow of the hill. The ruined shells of several more lie nearby, overgrown with tough brown grass. A niche has been cut in the hillside just past the surface buildings. Within it, a stone door stands closed in a masonry alcove.

The crypts and mausoleums on the surface level are the resting places of the most important families and individuals from Dorden's short history: the noble families and founders of the barony. Common citizens were interred in the natural caverns below.

D1. Looted Mausoleum

Great stone double doors bar the entrance to this ancient mausoleum. The doors or the lintel may once have borne an inscription or crest, but centuries of wind and rain have erased any such marking, just as they have slowly eroded the structure of the building itself, leaving cracked walls and crumbling mortar in their wake.

The stone doors, though heavy, pivot easily to allow entrance to the mausoleum. If the characters enter, read the following text:

The door to the mausoleum is stuck. Chahir and his minions have plastered over the top and sides of the door, leaving just the crack underneath it for them to enter and leave the mausoleum in gaseous form. Characters can break the door (Strength DC 28), enter in ethereal or gaseous form themselves, or use teleportation magic to get in. If they enter the mausoleum, read the following text:

Two ornately carved stone coffins lie side by side against the wall across from the door. Dust lies thick on the floor, and the air is deathly still.

Any character who makes a successful Spot check (DC 20) notices small amounts of dirt on the floor near each coffin, dark spots among the light-colored dust.

Though coated with dust, this large stone chamber has clearly not lain undisturbed since its crafting. Human refuse is strewn around the room as if this place had served as a campsite for more than one group of travelers, bandits, or grave robbers.

Four closed doors lead out of the chamber.

Crypts A through D are all the same. Read the following text when the characters enter one of them:

A large stone sarcophagus rests in the center of this otherwise bare room. Unlike the outer chamber, this room shows no sign of habitation, and dust lies thick on the floor and on the carved lid of the stone coffin.

A careful examination of any of these sarcophagi (Search DC 22) reveals that the lids do not rest squarely on the coffins. Scratch marks are visible, suggesting that the lids have been removed, probably with crowbars. Each heavy stone lid weighs about 600 pounds. Two strong characters can lift a lid off (two characters, each with Strength 18, can share a lid between them as a heavy load—see “Carrying Capacity” in Chapter 9 of the Player’s Handbook), or a character with merely average strength can slide a lid over (a character with 12 Strength can push 670 pounds)—but if a lid falls from the top of the coffin to the floor, it breaks. The corpses inside have decayed to bare skeletons—anything of value that was buried with them has either decomposed or been taken by grave robbers.

D2. Vampire Mausoleum (EL 11)

A single, massive, stone mausoleum bearing a weathered but still visible family crest marks the entrance to this crumbling mausoleum.

The crest is ancient and obscure, as well as hard to read. The Knowledge (nobility and royalty) skill is of no help here, since the family is long extinct. With a successful Search check (DC 18), a character can read the name “Chahir,” written in the Thorass script still used to write Common and other languages. A character who can read ancient Thorass, or who makes a successful Decipher Script check (DC 20), can also make out the words, “Together for Eternity.” A successful Knowledge (Dalelands local) check (DC 30) reveals that the name Chahir was somehow connected with the vampires that plagued Daggerdale around 796 DR.

The door to the mausoleum is stuck. Chahir and his minions have plastered over the top and sides of the door, leaving just the crack underneath it for them to enter and leave the mausoleum in gaseous form. Characters can break the door (Strength DC 28), enter in ethereal or gaseous form themselves, or use teleportation magic to get in. If they enter the mausoleum, read the following text:

Two ornately carved stone coffins lie side by side against the wall across from the door. Dust lies thick on the floor, and the air is deathly still.

Any character who makes a successful Spot check (DC 20) notices small amounts of dirt on the floor near each coffin, dark spots among the light-colored dust.
Creatures: Chahir, the ancient noble interred in this mausoleum, is a vampire. He rests in the western sarcophagus, which bears his likeness on its lid. The eastern sarcophagus is carved to resemble his wife, also a vampire, who was destroyed in Daggerdale. Two would-be tomb robbers, now vampire spawn, lie together in the close quarters of her coffin.

Chahir is gaunt but very handsome, despite the slightly feral cast to his features. He has thick black hair and almost beige skin, and he sports a neatly trimmed moustache and beard. He wears a fine silk robe, fastened down the front with gem-studded buttons and embroidered with golden thread.

The vampire spawn are much rougher in appearance than Chahir. They are dressed in traveling clothes and generally filthy. Their stocky frames mark them as Dalesfolk.

Chahir, Vampire Sorcerer: hp 66; see page 131.

Vampire Spawn (2): hp 33, 29; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: If the characters made noise outside the mausoleum (by trying to force open the door, for example), the vampires are ready for them. All three are in gaseous form, ready to seep out through cracks in their coffins. Chahir has already cast improved invisibility and mage armor on himself.

When the characters are inside (and in material form, if they entered by becoming gaseous or ethereal), the two vampire spawn materialize and attack, taunting their foes with the words, "Thought to rob the dead, did you? That's what we thought we'd do, too."

Chahir, meanwhile, exits his coffin invisibly and takes up a position on top of it. He uses baste on himself, then peppers the party with lightning bolts for as long as he can. If he can tell that one of the characters can see him, he uses his domination power on that opponent.

Treasure: Chahir has killed more than one traveler camping in D1 over the years, and he's taken a fair bit of loot from his victims. In addition to the items carried on his person, the treasure here includes sacks in his wife's coffin that contain 4,870 sp, 970 gp, a garnet ring worth 140 gp, and a fine emerald worth 800 gp.

D3. Crypt Entrance

Another large pair of stone doors is set into the hillside. These are flanked by a pair of columns carved to resemble skeletal warriors in full plate armor, their visored helmets open to reveal their leering skulls. The doors are unadorned except for two stone handles, although gouge marks indicate that heavy tools dealt some damage to the doors in the past.

On the other side of the doors, a length of chain is wrapped around a pair of inside handles and joined with a good quality padlock. The break DC for the doors is 24 because of the damage inflicted by tomb robbers long ago. A character who can somehow get to the padlock securing the inside chain can open it with a successful Open Lock check (DC 30). Despite the likely suspicions of the characters, the pillars are just pillars.

The doors open into a long, wide hallway that runs deep into the hillside. The only illumination comes from items the characters bring with them. While the outer doors are open during the day, sunlight illuminates the first 15 feet of the hallway. When the heroes get a look inside, read the following:

A cursory examination reveals that three of the drow died from wounds inflicted by small crossbow quarrels, which are still lodged in their bodies. The other two seem to have been killed by blows from blunt weapons.

A character with the Track feat who succeeds at a Wilderness Lore check (DC 22) can follow the tracks these drow made back to the stairs that lead down to D7. A character with the Track feat who scours the area for additional tracks may attempt a Wilderness Lore check (DC 20) to determine that an additional dozen or so drow were present, and that they dragged away two bodies that fell near the others.

The corpses are those of four drow sentries and a spellguard from Szith Morcane, all Lolth-worshipers. Five days ago, they fled the outpost and made for the surface, hoping to find their way to a city where Lolth still held sway. If questioned via a speak with dead spell, some of their likely responses include:

Who killed you? "Followers of the White Banshee."

Where is the White Banshee? "Kiaransalee."

Where did you come from? "Szith Morcane."

Who is Szith Morcane? "Below the old human crypts."

A 10-foot wide hallway of stone runs back into the hillside as far as you can see. Right in front of you, five dead drow, two female and three male, lie in the mouth of the tunnel. They have been stripped of arms and armor, but each still wears a black tabard emblazoned with a silver spiderweb insignia. The air here smells strongly of death.
Why were you killed? "Because we followed the Spider Queen."

These drow don't know much about how or why the Kiaransalee came to Szith Morcane. If carefully questioned, they reveal that the worshipers of Kiaransalee now hold sway in Szith Morcane, and that most Lolth-worshipers have been driven off or killed. If questioned about Szith Morcane, they state that it is home to about 150 drow, most of them commoners of little standing, and about 80 slaves.

The killers of these drow removed all their valuables, so nothing remains here to loot.

D4. EMPTY FAMILY VAULT

This wide hallway extends about 40 feet into the darkness before ending in what looks like a small crypt, though there is no sarcophagus. Two alcoves branch off from each side of the hall. These are also apparently empty, except for a thick coating of dust.

This vault was built for a family that never had the opportunity to use it because Dordrin fell before they could be buried here. All five crypt areas are as empty as they appear.

D5. INTACT FAMILY VAULT (EL 11)

The door here was obviously once plastered shut, but the wide crack in the plaster surrounding it indicates that it has since been broken open. The door is now closed.

Several tomb robbers have tried their hands at stealing the riches from this vault, so far without success. A character who makes a successful Search check (DC 20; a dwarf’s stonecunning bonus counts) while examining the plaster sees clear marks from a chisel.

On the other side of the door, in the hall leading to the crypt proper, the ancient builders placed a potent trap to discourage thieves—a greater glyph of warding. Anyone who moves more than 5 feet into the room without speaking the pass phrase (a long-forgotten word) or disarming the glyph sets off the trap.

Summon Monster VI Glyph: CR 11; two celestial dire lions; Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31; resets after 24 hours.

Read the text below if the trap goes off:

On the floor at the threshold of the crypt, a dangerous-looking glyph suddenly becomes visible and flashes bright blue. With a peal of thunder, two bright-golden lions appear, roaring with anger!

Beyond the glowing lions stand several stone sarcophagi—at least four, probably more.

These creatures are celestial dire lions with orders to attack all those who enter the vault. The lions remain for only 12 rounds before the summon monster VI spell ends, returning them to their celestial home.

Creatures: If summoned, the celestial dire lions defend this room ferociously, but they do not pursue intruders who flee farther than 30 feet outside the door. Since the glyph’s activation probably signals the beginning of combat in this room, and summoned monsters can act on the round they appear, the lions are likely to surprise anyone who unwittingly triggers the greater glyph of warding.

Summoned Celestial Dire Lions (2): hp 66, 57; acid resistance 15, cold resistance 15, DR 5/+2, electricity resistance 15, SR 16; Int 3; see Dire Lion in Monster Manual.

Treasure: One of the bodies in this tomb wears a silver necklace set with moonstones, worth 600 gp. Another wears a gold ring set with a black pearl, worth 900 gp. In addition, the moldering skeleton in the center coffin (a minor druid in life) holds a +1 shocking shortspear and a wand of neutralize poison with 6 charges left. It wears a gold torc worth 370 gp.

D6. SEALED FAMILY VAULT (EL VARIABLE)

The door to this vault is still plastered shut (break DC 28) because the trap it bears has killed every robber who has attempted to open it. Since this trap amuses the drow, they take care to remove corpses from the area before the door, so as not to generate suspicion in newcomers.

Trap (EL 8): The door to the vault is trapped with a slay living spell, which goes off when someone touches the door. Any attempt to break the door down also triggers the trap.

Slay Living Trap: CR 7; death; Fortitude DC 17 for 3d6+13; Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 30.

If the characters get past the trap and through the door, read the following text:

This vault’s most prominent feature is a large stone statue of a regal-looking woman dressed in a long, elegant gown. Her pose is commanding, and her presence is imposing even in stone as she stares imperiously toward the door. Two doors behind her and two doors flanking her lead out from this antechamber.

Still another threat wards this vault of the Quallem family—the ghost of Lady Quallem, head of the family.

Creature (EL 9): The ghost of Lady Quallem sleeps restlessly in this tomb, unable to pass out of this world until her last descendant’s body is found and buried here beside her (a task beyond the scope of this adventure). Though she was not exceptionally powerful in life (an 8th-level aristocrat), Lady Quallem is a fearsome foe in undeath, particularly since she can animate the statue that bears her likeness.

Lady Quallem, Ghost Aristocrat: hp 49; see page 131.

Tactics: Lady Quallem reacts to the characters invading her tomb by first moving to the statue in the center of the room to animate it. If any characters are ethereal or can see her in her ethereal form, they are immediately subject to her horrific appearance special attack. She then animates the statue and, through it, verbally challenges the intruders and warns them to depart. She speaks Thorass, Old Common, or Tharassan, which is unintelligible to modern speakers of Common.

If the intruders fail to leave, she first emerges from the statue and manifests, subjecting them all to her horrific appearance, then uses her corrupting gaze to weaken them. After that, she returns to the statue and fights the intruders physically as long as the statue holds up.
Treasure: The northwestern crypt holds the body of Lady Quallem’s eccentric son, a wizard of some small ability. The corpse wears a gold pectoral worth 450 gp and a ring of protection +2. If either item is removed, a magic mouth spell on the corpse causes it to say, in Thorass: “Whomever despoils my tomb will be devoured by demons seven days hence!” The curse has no real power, but it might alarm would-be tomb robbers.

Crypt Level

This level consists of natural caverns used by the people of Dordrien for ordinary burials. Graves are cut into the cavern walls like shelves in a pantry, and the bodies unceremoniously piled within them have little if any adornment. This arrangement proves convenient for the maurezhi (detailed in Appendix 1)—a demon that enjoys eating human bones.

The maurezhi lairs in cavern D14 but frequently wanders the other caverns to gnaw old bones. The behithins in D10 keep it from bothering the drow who currently live in the caverns beyond, but it has killed two other drow—a powerful cleric of Lolth and, most recently, a male fighter sent to scout the caverns—and consumed their identities.

While the characters explore the crypt level, the maurezhi spies on them in the guise of a male human rogue it consumed some years ago. It uses its invisibility to remain out of sight. Allow characters Spot checks to detect the demon only if they are actively looking around.

If one character splits off from the rest of the party at any point while the characters are in the crypt level, the maurezhi attacks the lone character, hoping to add another identity to its repertoire. If it overcomes its target, it retreats to its lair (D14) for a feast. In D13, it pauses for 2 rounds to animate twelve of the skeletons there. The animated skeletons can serve as an early warning if pursuers arrive.

If the maurezhi manages to consume the PC, it assumes the dead character’s identity, dons his or her gear, and then joins the party. With access to the character’s memories and potentially some of his or her skills and feats, the maurezhi should be able to pull off its deception for a time. While so disguised, it seeks opportunities to kill and consume other characters.

D7. Moldy Crypt Cavern (EL 6)

A hallway of worked stone extends some 20 feet from the base of the stairs, then opens into what appears to be a natural cavern. Graves are hollowed out from the walls of this cave, and some jumbles of bone are visible within.

D8. Great Crypt Cavern (EL Variable)

A marble statue in the center of this large cavern depicts a gaunt, alien-looking creature with bulbous eyes, an insect’s mandibles, and an elongated oval head. More graves are carved into the stone walls all around.

The statue represents the deity Jergal, guardian of tombs. The yellow mold from D7 has not spread into this cave.

The west wall of the passage leading from this cave to D9 is hewn stone. Like the passage between D7 and D8, this corridor was widened for human use.

Trap (EL 6): The statue of Jergal animates (as a Huge animated object with speed 30 feet and hardness 8) only if someone uses animate dead, create undead, or create greater undead within this cavern. If that occurs, it attacks the caster until it is destroyed or the offender either dies or leaves the chamber.

Animate Object Trap: CR 6; animate object; Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31; resets automatically.

Huge Animated Object: hp 44; see Monster Manual.

D9. Narrow Cavern (EL 10)

A barely noticeable bulge in the tunnel is marked by more graves carved into the wall. Here they line only the east side.

The narrow space between caverns 8 and 9 restricts the graves to one wall.

Creature: A roper hides (Hide modifier +18) near the western wall at the north end of the cave, blending into the natural stone wall. The roper is accustomed to sharing its home with the drow, and it normally allows groups of them to pass unaccompanied. If it appears that a drow accompanies the party, it questions that individual (in Undercommon) about his or her business and the presence of any nondrow. If the drow character makes a plausible reply and succeeds at a Bluff check, the roper lets the party pass. If no drow is present, the roper attacks without conversation.

Roper: hp 70; see *Monster Manual.

Treasure: A small hollow beneath the roper's base contains a handful of gems: a 300-gp blue spinel, two tourmalines worth 80 gp and 120 gp, and three rose quartz stones worth 20 gp each. Gems are the only kind of treasure the monster values.

D10. BEBILITH NEST (EL 11)

The entrance to this cavern is covered with an illusory wall placed here by the drow of Szith Morcane years ago to protect their hiding place. It is crafted to blend perfectly with the stone walls on either side. A creature under a true seeing effect sees right through the figment, and touching or probing the wall immediately reveals that it is not real.

The read-aloud text below assumes that the bebiliths are aware of the party's approach. They can hear any ordinary noise outside the cavern, such as fighters walking past in armor or conversation about the illusory wall. If the characters are completely silent, they find the two demons crawling in their webs on the walls of the room.

Two enormous spiderlike creatures stand at the ready in this small cavern. One hangs back, near the exit at the far end, but the other advances menacingly, making a loud clicking noise as it comes. More graves are cut into the walls of this chamber.

Before the arrival of the refugees from Maerimydra, these three caverns (D10–D12) served the Szith Morcane drow as a secret hiding place. They used this area to stage ambushes on any surface-dwellers foolish enough to follow them into the crypts after a raid, and they kept supplies hidden here as well.

When the followers of Irae T'sarran took over Szith Morcane, they transformed most of the nobles and priestesses of House Morcane into quth-marens, but a few escaped, fleeing into these concealed tunnels. The T'sarran drow, not knowing about this hiding place, believe that the refugees have either died or fled to the surface. The remaining drow of Szith Morcane have so far chosen not to reveal the existence of these tunnels to their new masters.

Creatures: Two bebiliths serve as watchdogs for the drow priestess and her retinue who hide in D12. The clicking sounds they make in battle serve to alert the araneas in D11, which in turn notify the drow of an intrusion before moving into position to defend their cavern. The araneas do not aid the bebiliths in any way. Allow any character who is keeping an eye on the exit a Spot check (DC 19) to notice an aranea watching the battle for a few rounds.

Bebiliths (2): hp 104, 89; see *Monster Manual.
D11. SPIDER WARDERS (EL 10)

Use this text if the spider warder araneas in this cave know that the characters are approaching—for example, if they heard the characters fighting with the bebiliths.

A white-haired, dark-skinned woman sits crumpled against the north wall, sobbing quietly. More graves line the cavern walls all around.

Should the characters somehow manage to enter this cavern without alerting the araneas, they simply see both creatures in their natural form, resembling Large monstrous spiders.

Creature: Two aranea rangers, devout worshipers of Lolth, guard this area. They are sworn to protect the drow in D12. The araneas have no love for the bebiliths, so they do not enter D10 to help the demons fight.

Spider Warders, Aranea Rangers (2): hp 69, 62; see page 133.

Tactics: Assuming that the araneas hear the combat between the characters and the bebiliths before the party enters their cave, they spread webbing behind the illusionary wall leading to D12, then assume an ambush position. One aranea, in spider form, crouches on the wall just above the cavern entrance, while the other huddles against the north wall in humanoid form (appearing as a drow female), feigning sobs as described above.

When the characters enter the cavern, the aranea in spider form first casts a web across the entrance (from D10) to seal off the party’s escape, then attacks by casting a web at one of the characters. If possible, it chooses a lightly armored character such as a rogue or ranger. The other aranea remains in humanoid form, first drawing the characters into the cave before casting a web at one of the other araneas. While the araneas’ web trap, one drow gleefully attacks the entangled character while the other waits for the next intruder to enter.

Treasure: In addition to their gear, the two araneas have the following items wrapped in webbing in their nests: 402 gp, moonstone (40 gp), golden yellow topaz (400 gp), bloodstone (20 gp), black opal (800 gp), and a mighty composite shortbow (+2 Str bonus). Each cache of webbing has 6 hit points and takes double damage from fire.

Trap: The entrance to D12 is covered by another illusionary wall, which forms a false back to the D11 cavern. Assuming that the araneas had advance warning of the characters’ approach, a sheet of webbing lies just behind this illusionary wall. A character who walks through the illusionary wall while the webbing is there risks becoming entangled as if the araneas had cast the web at the character. Only one character can become entangled in this manner.

To the distinct advantage of the characters, the web trap also prevents the drow in D12 from becoming involved in the fight with the araneas.

Web Trap: CR included in aranea’s CR; entanglement; Reflex DC 20 avoids; Search DC 20; Will DC 16 disbelief for check (DC 15) to cast a spell.

D12. SPIDER-KISSER HIDEOUT (EL 12)

The drow in this cavern probably know of the characters’ approach, either because the araneas in D11 warned them while the characters were fighting the bebiliths in D10, or because they heard the party fighting the araneas. Assuming that the drow are aware of a threat, they ready themselves for battle (see below) and immediately attack when the characters enter.

When the characters have time to look around, they discover that there is little to see—a long tunnel slopes ahead and down into another crypt cavern, though only a few graves have been dug into the walls here.

Creature: Four drow—the sole surviving priestess of Lolth from House Morcane, her two bodyguards, and a loyal spellguard wizard—have made an uneasy camp here to hide themselves from the new regime in Szith Morcane. Unwilling to venture too close to the surface, these drow lurk in this well-concealed cavern, plotting revenge against the minions of the drow deity of vengeance.

Tierak Morcane, the priestess of Lolth, is a striking drow woman with a permanent scowl but an almost tangible aura of authority. She wears a fine mithral shirt and carries a spider-shaped dagger at her belt. Each of her noble guards wears the livery of House Morcane—a deep purple tabard with crossed rapiers beneath an image of a black widow spider—over his mithral shirt. The spellguard is clad in a deep purple tunic and black breeches. His clothing has no insignia of any kind. He wears a rapiers at his belt, but he hasn’t drawn it from its scabbard in a hundred years.

Szith Morcane Spellguard: hp 19 (+4 temporary); see page 133.

Tactics: When the drow become aware of the characters’ impending arrival, the two noble guards take up positions just inside the entrance and attack characters as they come through the illusionary wall. If a character becomes entangled in the araneas’ web trap, one drow gleefully attacks the entangled character while the other waits for the next intruder to enter.

The spellguard prepares for combat by casting see invisibility and stoneskin, plus mage armor from his scroll. In the first round of combat, he casts baste and then ice storm. In the following rounds he uses lightning bolt indiscriminately (the death of Tierak Morcane would cause him no great grief). He also uses web to entangle troublesome foes. If his baste spell (duration 7 rounds) runs out before combat ends, he quaffs his potion of baste to maintain his increased rate of spellcasting.

Tierak Morcane is painfully hampered in this battle by the lack of her clerical spells. She uses her wand of scorching ray conservatively, since she knows that when its charges run out, she will have no more magic. She tries to stay out of melee, using the levitation power of her drow house insignia as needed to avoid combat on the ground.

Treasure: In addition to the incidental treasure most drow characters carry (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), Tierak carried away a small cache of loot and supplies when she fled Szith Morcane. At the western end of the room are five small casks of pickled rothé sausage, four sacks of mushroom flour, and two kgs of mushroom ale—enough supplies to provision this party of drow for another tenday or so. Alongside the supplies is a locked iron strongbox (Open Lock DC 30), the key to which is in Tierak’s possession. Inside the strongbox are 370 gp, 110 pp, and a fine silver service. The ewer is worth 230 gp, and each of the four cups is worth 30 gp.

Development: If Tierak and her followers survive one attack from surface dwellers; they decide to hide elsewhere until the following night, then slip out of the crypts and make for Cormanthor. Thus, this room is empty the second time the characters visit.

D13. RESTLESS CRYPT CAVERN (EL 0)

No unusual features mark this cavern, beyond the graves carved into the walls all around.

This cavern is unexceptional unless the maurezhi has created a diversion here.

Creatures: If the maurezhi has killed a character and retreated to its lair to consume the corpse, it has left a dozen animated skeletons in this room, both to slow down pursuers and to give him early warning of their impending arrival. The skeletons are not a significant challenge for the party (a 10th-level good cleric can’t help but destroy them all with a single turning check), so do not award experience for defeating them.

D14. MAUREZHI NEST (EL 11)

The reek of death hangs thick in the air, replacing the dry odor of the ancient graves with a more pungent and nauseating stench. No graves line these walls, but loose piles of gear—a breastplate and greataxe here, a large shield and chain shirt there—litter the cavern floor.

If the maurezhi is in the process of consuming a character’s corpse, read the following text:

Your companion’s corpse also lies on the floor of this foul cavern. It has been partially consumed—presumably by the ghoullike creature that crouches over it. An almost palpable energy crackles between the creature and the body, as if the thing were feeding not only on the flesh but also on the spirit of your friend.

Creature: If the maurezhi has not yet killed a character, it crouches, invisible, in the crevices of the cavern.

D15. UPPER OUTPOST (EL 8)

The tunnel widens into a cavern, its entrance marked by scattered rubble on the ground. A masonry wall formerly sealed the end of this tunnel, but it seems to have recently been removed. In the cavern beyond the doorway, a large hole in the floor leads to a passage sloping steeply down.

During Szith Morcane’s retreat from the outside world, a wall of stone blocked this cavern off from the crypts above. When Irae T’sarran’s followers took control of the city and began leading raids to the surface again, they chipped through the wall, but its edges are still visible (Search DC 10) around the walls, floor, and ceiling of the tunnel. The drow carted away most of the rubble and dumped it into the chasm (S2), but they were not thorough, so some rubble remains.

Creatures: Two drow sentries and a Large wraith spider watch the upper reaches of Szith Morcane.

The sentries crouch by the old wall at the entrance to D15. They can see as far as point X on the map, where the corridor bends away. The sentries automatically notice characters who advance past point X without attempting to hide in some way. They also notice if any illumination falls on the hallway at point X, so a party carrying sunrods alerts the sentries in this area as soon as a sunrod comes within 30 feet of point X.
The wraith spider lurks in the shadows by the hole leading down to D16. With its tremorsense, it can detect the approach of any character who traverses point X on the map. The monster has been commanded to stay in this chamber and alert the sentries to the approach of any creature, then attack all nondrow entering the room.

For the purpose of this encounter, assume that the guards take 10 on their Listen and Spot checks and apply a –5 penalty for inattention. Each then has a Listen check result of 9, which lets him hear people talking 90 feet up the tunnel.

Szith Morcane Sentries (2): hp 37, 31; see page 134.

Large Wraith Spider: hp 33; see Appendix 1.

Tactics: If they remain unaware of the PCs’ approach, the sentries are sitting on the cavern floor near the south wall when the characters enter, with their weapons close at hand.

If the sentries detect the heroes’ approach, they use the remnants of the wall for 90% cover and engage the intruders with missile weapons for as long as possible. The wraith spider skitters out and attacks. These drow are more interested in self-preservation than in glory. They use their potions of cure light wounds when wounded and flee when the situation looks hopeless, hurtling down the tunnel toward the guardpost at the top of Szith Morcane proper (S1).

D16. DESCENT

Since this tunnel slopes precipitously into the depths, a certain amount of agility is required for anyone who is not flying to negotiate it. The slope at the top of the tunnel is too steep to walk up or down, so a successful Climb check (DC 0) is needed to traverse it.

A character attempting to move at full speed down the tunnel must make a successful Balance check (DC 10) or fall prone, ending all movement. Running and charging are impossible here, just as they are in the rest of the Underdark level.

D17. WALL OF STONE

The tunnel ends abruptly in a wall of hewn granite that looks rather out of place among these natural tunnels. A hole gapes in the tunnel floor in front of the wall, and a large iron ring is set securely into the floor a couple of feet from the lip of the hole.

When Szith Morcane was closed off from the surface, the hole here was sealed with the same thick spider webbing that connects the caverns of Szith Morcane, and the driders from D20 ruled this area of caverns. When the T’sarran drow decided to use the upper caverns again, they opened the webbing seal and used a wall of stone to trap the driders in their own caves. A successful Search check (DC 12) allows a character to find the webs hung in dusty tatters from the ceiling and walls of this small cavern, but nothing moves anywhere within.

D18. NEST OF SPIDERS (EL 6)

Gigantic tangles of webbing, encrusted with dust and rubble, fill this large cavern. An enormous spider’s head protrudes from one of the tangles, as if the creature were using it for a nest.

The tangles are shelters for the spiders that live in this cavern.

Creatures: Two Huge monstrous spiders lair in this cave. Since the drow sealed them in their caverns, constraining their hunting range, the spiders have been slowly going hungry, though so far they are suffering none of the ill effects of starvation. They have eaten all the smaller spiders that used to dwell in D19 and D20, and they have even managed to kill one drier. They are still ravenously hungry, however, so they attack the party without hesitation.

These are hunting spiders, so they cannot use webs against opponents.

Huge Monstrous Spiders (2): hp 56, 51; see Monster Manual.

D19. ALCOVE

Wells hang in dusty tatters from the ceiling and walls of this small cavern, but nothing moves anywhere within.

This small cave used to be the nest of countless Tiny and Small monstrous spiders. In the last month, since these caverns were sealed off, these spiders have all become meals for the Huge spiders in D18 and the driders in D20.

D20. THE BANISHED (EL 10)

The acrid, sulfurous odor that fills this cavern probably emanates from a heap of filth in the far southwest corner. Two large forms shaped like bloated spiders creep slowly along the walls and ceiling.

Two driders lair in this cavern, which they have warded with a spiked pit trap near the entrance.

Trap: These drider sorcerers used a scroll of illusory wall captured from a slain drow to create a pit trap near the entrance to their lair. An illusory wall that looks just like the floor covers the pit, and its location is not marked in any way—the driders rely on memory to avoid their own trap.

Wall of Stone: 3 in. thick, hardness 10; hp 60 per 5-foot square; AC 5; break DC 26; Climb DC 22.

The hole in the floor leads down to S1 on the Szith Morcane map. The floor of S1 is about 20 feet below the level of this tunnel.

Sorcerer Spells Known

- 0—daze, detect magic, disrupt undead, flare, open/close, read magic, resistence; 1st—mage armor, magic missile, shield, true strike; 2nd—blur, Melf’s acid arrow; 3rd—lightning bolt.

---

Part I

Treasure: The filth heap in the southwest corner contains the driders' collected treasure: 70 pp, 800 gp, a potion of jump, a scroll of greater magic weapon, locate object, and knock, and another scroll of burning hands, displacement, and minor image. The scrolls and potion are sealed in waterproof tubes to protect them from the refuse in which they are embedded.

A character searching through the filth for treasure risks contracting blinding sickness. If the character washes thoroughly within 1 minute after searching the pile and cleans any treasure recovered from it before handling it further, there is no risk of infection. Otherwise, the character must make a Fortitude save (DC 16) to avoid contracting the disease. Blinding sickness is described in Chapter 3 of the Dungeon Master's Guide.

Szith Morcane

The drow settlement of Szith Morcane has lain beneath the Dordrien Crypts for centuries. Founded in 804 DR as an outpost of Maerimydra when that city also ruled Shadowdale, Szith Morcane served as a supply station for drow operating on the surface and a staging point for occasional raids into Daggerdale. With the flight of the drow from Shadowdale, the inhabitants of Szith Morcane lost interest in the surface world until the recent arrival of refugees from Maerimydra.

Szith Morcane Features

Szith Morcane was built inside a complex of caverns, all of which open out into a vast chasm that penetrates deep into the earth (see S2). The caverns of Szith Morcane all share the following features unless noted otherwise.

Doors: The doors in Szith Morcane are stone. Standard doors are as follows:

- Stone Doors: 4 in. thick, hardness 8; hp 60; AC 5; break DC 28.
- Walls: Walls in most of Szith Morcane are hewn stone.
- Hewn Stone Walls: Minimum 3 ft. thick, hardness 8; hp 540; AC 3; break DC 35; Climb DC 22.
- Unworked Stone Walls: Minimum 5 ft. thick, hardness 8; hp 900 (per 5 feet of thickness); AC 3; break DC 65; Climb DC 20.
- Floors: The floors throughout Szith Morcane are hewn from the natural cavern floors. They are relatively even but can be treacherous to run across. A character attempting to run or charge across these floors must make a successful Balance check (DC 10) or fall prone, halting all movement.
- Ceilings: Ceilings in most areas of Szith Morcane are 7 feet high and smooth. The ceilings in the natural cavern areas (S12, S17, S19–S22) are unhewn stone, at least 15 feet high, and marked by many stalactites.

Retaliation

In addition to the defenses the drow of Szith Morcane mount when surface adventurers assault their home (see the Intruder Alert! sidebar, page 20), they immediately plan appropriate counterstrokes. On the night following the PC’s first intrusion into Szith Morcane, Dorina T’sarran dispatches a raiding party (see below) to go out through the crypts and scour the nearby countryside for the intruders. On the night following the party’s first intrusion into the House Morcane level (S37–S70), Dorina organizes a hunter-killer team to track down the heroes and eliminate them before they strike again.

Intruder Alert!

Two sentries are posted at the edge of the chasm in S4 to listen for the sounds of combat anywhere within the complex. Echoes within the chasm and the sound of rushing water below duplicate the effect of severe wind on hearing, imposing a –4 penalty on Listen checks in the chasm area. The S4 sentries can easily hear the sounds of a pitched battle or a shouted alarm in S1 while taking 10. As a rule of thumb, the S4 sentries move into action on the round following a shouted warning or the casting of any energy-based spell such as lightning bolt, fireball, or ice storm.

When spurred to action, one S4 sentry moves into S7 and sends a sentry from that room to notify the officers in S7, then (in the second round) returns to S4 to keep an eye and ear on the chasm. The other sentry waits for the first sentry to return, then (in the third round) begins his climb down the web to notify the priestesses on the House Morcane level. It takes him 6 rounds to reach S37 (taking 10 on his Climb checks and a –5 penalty for accelerated climbing), where he passes the warning to the quth-maren. One round later, he heads back up the web to S4, which takes another 6 rounds of climbing. While climbing in either direction, he is quite vulnerable to attack from any characters who can see well enough in the darkness to target him.

The room descriptions in the Barracks level and the House Morcane level describe the rooms in two states: Unaware and Alerted. Three rounds after being warned by a sentry, the sentries, officers, and spellguards on the Barracks level have moved into their Alerted positions, and the web team (see S2) leaves the Barracks level and begins patrolling the web. It takes the drow and undead on the House Morcane level 5 rounds to move into their Alerted positions.

If the characters kill the sentries in D15 of the Dordrien Crypts or S1 of Szith Morcane, the drow move into their Alerted positions after a maximum of 1d6 hours, when shifts change and new sentries discover the deaths of the old ones. The dead sentries’ posts are not filled in the Alerted state.
RAIDING PARTY (EL 13)

Unless the characters have found an extremely well-hidden place to camp or simply aren't anywhere nearby, a drow party attacks their camp during the night. If the drow cannot locate the heroes who attacked Szith Morcane, they settle for harrying the countryside nearby, attacking several farms and homesteads within 3 to 4 miles of the Dordrien Crypts. The raiding party consists of the following individuals:

- Common Drow Warriors (10): hp 3 each; see page 135.
- Quth-Maren (2): hp 76, 63; see Appendix 1.
- Velina, T'sarran Niece: hp 44; see page 139.
- Arcane Guard: hp 31; see page 136.

The common drow warriors are from S18. The two quth-maren and the T'sarran niece are from S42. The arcane guard is from S26. Reduce the creatures encountered in those areas to account for any raiding party members killed outside Szith Morcane. If some of these monsters and NPCs were killed before this raiding party was formed, either substitute equivalent ones from another part of the complex or skip to the Hunter-Killer Team encounter.

HUNTER-KILLER TEAM (EL 15)

After the heroes have demonstrated that they pose a deadly threat to Szith Morcane, Dorina assembles a crack squad to track them down and deal with them. If necessary, the drow leaders make use of spells such as scrying and commune to localize the party before dispatching this team. Unless the characters have used extreme caution in concealing their campsite or simply aren't anywhere near the Dordrien Crypts, the hunter-killer team attacks them during the night.

- Zedarr T'sarran: hp 92; see page 139.
- Susztam Mar-Shinn: hp 37; see page 137.
- Quth-Maren (2): hp 75, 70; see Appendix 1.
- Velasta, T'sarran Niece: hp 70; see page 139.

Zedarr T'sarran is from S43, and Velasta and the two quth-maren are from S42. Susztam Mar-Shinn is from S31. If any members of the hunter-killer team are killed outside of Szith Morcane, note their absence from those rooms. If some of them have already been killed when the team is formed, substitute vampire noble guards from S39 or arcane guards from S26. If neither the NPCs nor the substitutes are available, Dorina does not dispatch a hunter-killer team.

SZITH MORCANE DESCRIPTION

A large chasm forms the basic structure of Szith Morcane. Six tunnels lead from the southeast side of the chasm wall into the caverns that house the drow outpost. From the floor of S1, the chasm plunges to a depth of 600 feet before ending in a rushing torrent of black water.

A character who falls that entire distance (which takes almost an entire round) takes 20d6 points of damage and is swept away by the water, carried at the rate of 100 feet per round into lightless, airless caverns far under the drow outpost (see fast-moving water under Water Dangers in Chapter 3 of the DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE).

SL ENTRY POST (EL 12)

The hole in the floor at D17 drops down through about 10 feet of rock, then opens into the ceiling of a 10-foot-high cavern. Drow ascend and descend by means of a rope of climbing kept at this guardpost.

Though they do not expect any reprisals from the surface, the drow of Szith Morcane always keep guards stationed here to monitor the chasm. Their position allows them to reach any point on the web of the city with relative speed.

The guards have several ways to notice the approach of enemies from above—for example, they might hear a loud noise, or the wraith spider might sense someone approaching, or a light source could suddenly illuminate the hole in D17. If the guards detect approaching intruders, they hide along the walls and ready themselves for a fight. Should the heroes manage to catch them off-guard, read the text below:

Creatures: This post is well guarded by two drow sentries in the livery of Irae T'sarran (white tabards with leering black skulls), a spellguard wizard (in the traditional purple tunic and black breeches), a Medium-size wraith spider, and a quth-maren—a powerful undead creature created from the flayed corpse of a priestess of Lolth. All the guards are loyal to the new regime in Szith Morcane—or as loyal as chaotic evil creatures can be. They have witnessed the failure of Lolth first-hand and are committed to backing the up-and-coming new power—Kiaransalee.

If the characters chased a fleeing sentry from D15 into this cavern, the guards here are ready to fight, but the fleeing sentry has continued down the web to S9 to alert the rest of the guards.

- Szith Morcane Sentries (2): hp 42, 30; see page 134.
- Szith Morcane Spellguard: hp 16 (40 temporary); see page 133.
- Quth-Maren: hp 76; see Appendix 1.
- Medium-Size Wraith Spider: hp 16; see Appendix 1.

Tactics: Already impressed by the quth-maren's abilities, the sentries are happy to stand back and let it have its way with the intruders—at least until the characters prove themselves to be a threat. During the fight, one sentry spends a round moving to the edge of the cliff and shouts loudly down to S4 if no sentries from D17 have yet carried the alarm below.

The spellguard is rather more cautious about intruders, so he is happy to assist the quth-maren with his magic. Given a chance to prepare, he casts stone skin and mage armor before a battle. He first uses lower-level spells, including magic missile, burning hands, and flaming sphere, saving his greater firepower for a serious threat. As soon as he realizes that the characters are dangerous, he drinks his potion of haste as he launches his ice storm and begins a barrage of lightning bolt spells. If the characters use silence to quiet the sounds of battle, the spell-guard uses dispel magic to negate it, knowing that the sentries below are listening for the sounds of combat. See the "Intruder-Alert!" sidebar for details of Szith Morcane's reaction to the characters' arrival.

A character standing at the edge of the chasm and looking around carefully may spot the Gargantuan monstrous spider in S2, since it is only about 50 feet north of this cave and a little below it. The creature has 70% concealment in its webbing nest there.

Treasure: The drow in this chamber keep a rope of climbing coiled neatly on the table, for use in getting to the level above. When necessary, one of the sentries orders the rope to affix itself to the iron ring in D17.

Development: The drow of Szith Morcane do not allow this post to go unguarded. If the sentries here are slain, remove two sentries from the barracks in S11 and place them here. This adjustment reduces the Web Team by two sentries if the complex goes to alerted status. Replace the spellguard with an arcane guard from S26 and the quth-maren with another from S37.

If their rope of climbing goes missing, the drow replace it with a mundane knotted rope, which they leave tied to the ring.

S2. THE CHASM (EL VARIABLE)

In striking contrast to the deathly still air elsewhere in these caverns, a cold, strong breeze blows up from some unknown depth here. A chasm yawns in the earth, reaching far down into the endless reaches of the Underdark. Though it is only about 30 feet wide, the rift continues for hundreds of feet on either side. Large webs stretch down into the darkness, and from far below you can hear rushing water.

A sheet web spun by a Gargantuan monstrous spider connects the caverns. The drow can use certain of its strands (see Trap, below) to climb from one tunnel mouth to another.

The wall of the chasm is quite rough, dotted with natural handholds and footholds. The Climb check DC for sections of the chasm wall that are not covered in webbing is 15.

Climbing up or down the main stem of the web, which is coistructed like a ladder, requires a successful Climb check (DC 0). The diagonal strands of the web are more difficult to move on, requiring a Climb check (DC 10) to navigate.

A creature that falls while climbing the web plummets 1d4 × 10 feet before becoming entangled in another section of webbing (see below for the effects of entanglement). A creature that falls while climbing a section of chasm wall that is not covered with webbing can catch itself on the wall with a successful Climb check (DC 25). Failing this, it falls to the bottom of the chasm unless some sort of magical aid prevents it. (The drow view the extreme danger of their city's construction as a means of weeding out the weak and unworthy from their populace.)

Trap: Most of the strands on the sheet web are sticky, except a few that the drow use to move from cavern to cavern. Any creature that strays from the "safe" strands (marked in red on the map) becomes stuck in the web (unable to move, but not entangled). A stuck creature can try to free itself with an Escape Artist check (DC 30), a Strength check (DC 36), or by cutting itself loose (a sticky section has 16 hit points and DR 5/fire).

In addition to the sheet web, a loose mesh of web strands stretches across the width of the rift. Any character, flying within the chasm must make a Spot check for each round of movement or fly headlong into a web and become entangled (not just stuck, like a character caught on a sticky strand).

Web Trap: CR included in spider's CR; entanglement; Spot DC 20 avoids. See Monster Manual for more details.

An entangled creature takes a −2 penalty on attack rolls and a −4 penalty to Dexterity, and it cannot move. An entangled creature capable of spellcasting must make a Concentration check (DC 15) to cast a spell.

Combat on the web is difficult. A climbing creature loses any Dexterity bonus to AC and can't use a shield. Furthermore, an attacker gets a +2 bonus on attack rolls made against a climbing creature. The drow likely to be encountered here have climbing ACs listed with their statistics in Appendix 2.

Any time a climbing character takes damage, he or she must make a Climb check against the DC of the web (noted above). Failure means the character falls, as described above.

The spider (see below) quickly moves to attack any creature that becomes stuck or entangled in its web. It can crawl across the chasm on a single strand if necessary.

Creature (EL 9): The spider that made this web is a fierce ally of the Szith Morcane drow. Under orders to ignore vibrations on the nonsticky strands (marked in red on the chasm map), it views creatures that touch any other strands as fair game. It can cross the entire web in 5 rounds to attack a creature that strays from the "safe" strands.

Fiendish Gargantuan Monstrous Spider (Web Spinning):

hp 132; see page 135.

The spider spends most of its time in a huge nest of webbing almost 30 feet in diameter, located at the upper northern corner of the web. It has 70% concealment within its nest.

Tactics: Though it is immeasurably smarter and more malevolent than a normal vermin, this spider is hardly a genius. It obeys its drow allies and ignores creatures traveling on the safe strands, but otherwise it follows its instincts and eats creatures caught in its web. If harassed by opponents who are not stuck or entangled, including flying characters, the spider tries to entangle them by casting webs at them. If seriously wounded (40 or fewer hit points remaining), it retreats to its corner of the web, where it defends itself to the death.

Alerted: The Web Team (EL 14): If the drow on the barracks level are warned of the characters' approach (see the "Intruder Alert!" sidebar on page 20), they send a party of guards to patrol the web. This team moves directly from S4 to the spine of the web. From there, its members can move quickly to address any disturbance they detect.

Szith Morcane Officer (1): hp 67; see page 135.

Szith Morcane Spellguard (1): hp 16 (40 temporary); see page 133.

Szith Morcane Sentries (8): hp 45, 42, 41, 41, 37, 33, 32, 30; see page 134.

S3. SOUTHERN CAVERN (EL 13)

The entrance to this cavern is not visible from S1 or any of the other tunnel mouths leading into Szith Morcane. The only ways to access the cavern are by flying or by crossing the chasm on the spider webs and climbing at least 10 feet to the cave entrance (Climb DC 15). A flying character within 10 feet of the entrance must make a Spot check (DC 15) to notice the cleft in the rock face.

Clean and dry, this small cavern feels more like a roadside campsite than an underground cave. Halfway into the cave, the floor drops away in a short but steep cliff, leading to a lower area about 10 feet down. A bedroll—tightly rolled and neatly tied—and a backpack lie in the lower section, propped against the north wall. Otherwise, the room seems clear.

The small cliff in the center of the cavern is smooth and difficult to climb up or down (Climb DC 25).

Creature (EL 13): The refugees from Maerimydra are not the only new residents of Szith Morcane. Shortly after their arrival, a warped and twisted half-drow came to the chasm, troubled by the absence of Lolth's insidious whispers, which had previously been a constant presence in her mind. Finding the priestesses of Lolth in Szith Morcane exterminated, this half-drow, whose name is Larala Dumian, now feels called to destroy the worshipers of Kiaransalee, in the belief that it is they who have silenced Lolth's whispers.

The magic of the fang scarab she wears has deformed Larala's body. Her skin, once dusky gray, is now completely black, and her canine teeth are long and sharp. Her limbs and digits are unnaturally long, and tufts of coarse, black hair cover her body. The most striking aspect of her transformation is her eyes, which are large and multifaceted. She wears black studded leather armor that seems to blend into the darkness around her, and she moves with incredible quiet (another property of her armor). Larala is not entirely sane; in fact, she displays considerable paranoia. She also has a habit of mumbling and whispering to herself (a behavior begun in response to the whisperings of Lolth in her own mind, but which continues even now that Lolth has fallen silent).

Larala Dumian: hp 78, see page 135.

Tactics: Larala Dumian spends much of her time sitting at the base of the cliff, where she is out of sight of creatures entering the cave. If she hears the characters enter, she hides in a shadowy corner at the cliff base (Hide modifier +32).

Despite her evil alignment, Larala is not automatically hostile to the characters. Her initial attitude is indifferent, though that quickly shifts to unfriendly if the characters head straight to her backpack and start looting. Larala's enemies are the drow leaders of Szith Morcane, not a random band of surface-world interlopers—in fact, she could conceivably ally with the characters against the drow, despite her paranoia. If the PCs use Diplomacy or raw Charisma to sway her attitude to friendly (DC 15 if she is indifferent, or 25 if she is unfriendly), she assists them insofar as their goals align with hers—no further. If they can change her attitude to helpful (DC 30 if she is indifferent, or 40 if she is unfriendly), she aids them as much as she can.

Treasure: In addition to the gear she carries on her person, Larala's backpack holds her mundane equipment: caltrops, 10 feet of chain, a crowbar, a grappling hook, 50 feet of silk rope, a full waterskin, a set of masterwork thieves' tools, and a small pouch containing 10 gp.

Ad Hoc X.P. Adjustment: Award the characters experience as if they had defeated Larala should they win her help against the drow.
barracks level

S4. BARRACKS ENTRANCE (EL 8)

Inside the cavern mouth, the walls are smooth and even, narrowing toward a short passage heading to the east.

This is not really a separate room from S7; it’s actually a hallway leading from the chasm to that guardpost.

Creatures Two sentries are stationed here at all times, crouching at opposite sides of the entryway and carefully listening for sounds of disturbances in the chasm. Noise in the chasm is baffled by echoes and the spiderwebs, imposing a –4 penalty on the sentries’ Listen checks. Assume that both sentries take 10 (giving a check result of 10), which allows them to hear combat in any of the entrance chambers except S37. See the “Intruder Alert!” sidebar on page 20 for information on their actions in case of a disturbance.

* Sixth Morcane Sentries (2): hp 43, 37; see page 134.

Unaware Tactics: If the sentries are surprised here, they immediately raise a cry (or run, if silenced) to summon the other sentries and the quth-maren from S5. One sentry from S7 runs to notify the officers in S7, while the other three bring the quth-maren to assist here. As soon as possible, one of the sentries hurries out of the cavern entrance to notify the quth-maren in S37; as described in the “Intruder Alert!” sidebar.

Alerted Tactics: If they have already detected the approaching characters, the sentries remain here to watch for the intruders. If they see the characters coming, they retreat immediately into S5.

S5. GUARDPOST (EL 11 OR 13)

Standing guard at the entrance to this chamber is another skinless undead creature, its unblinking eyes on the lookout for intruders. Drow forms are visible in the bare room behind it.

The drow of Szith Morcane generally believe that guardposts are for guarding, so they keep such rooms unfurnished. (Area S1 is an exception to this rule.) Drow on guard stand or squat on the ground, usually in complete silence, communicating only in their sophisticated sign language.

Unaware Creatures (EL 11): A quth-maren and four sentriesordinarily keep watch in this chamber, ready to respond to any emergency situation. The sentries wear the livery of Irae T’sarran (white tabards with leering black skulls).

* Quth-Maren: hp 66; see Appendix 1.

Sixth Morcane Sentries (4): hp 37, 33, 32, 26; see page 134.

Unaware Tactics: The sounds of battle in this room are enough to alert the officers in S7 that intruders have entered the level. The officers rouse the off-duty sentries in S8 and S11 and the spellguard in S9, then all of them hurry to S5.

If the characters use silence to keep the sounds of battle from reaching beyond this room, one of the sentries runs toward S7 to notify the officers. If the message is delivered, one of those officers hurries to help the sentries here, while the other rouses the remaining drow on the Barracks level and brings them to the battle.

Alerted Creatures (EL 13): If the Barracks level is in a state of alert, the guard contingent here increases to seven sentries, plus the quth-maren and one officer. The sentries and officer wear the livery of Irae T’sarran.

* Quth-Maren: hp 66; see Appendix 1.

Sixth Morcane Officer: hp 52; see page 135.

Sixth Morcane Sentries (7): hp 41, 37, 33, 32, 32, 26; see page 134.

Alerted Tactics: If the assembled guard force here is not sufficient to handle the intruders, one sentry withdraws from melee and runs to S4, where he calls loudly into the chasm for help, hoping to summon the web team (see S2).

S6. PRISON CELLS (EL 9)

A long hallway with six heavy iron doors in the south wall stretches out to the west. A small, shuttered window is set into each door.

Drow rarely keep prisoners for long, and that practice has been followed even more rigorously under Sixth Morcane’s new regime. Kiaransalee’s faithful find it eminently practical to transform uncooperative prisoners into cooperative (if mindless) undead servants. As a result, all these cells are empty. The thought that well-meaning would-be rescuers could be caught in a deadly trap does amuse the drow, however, so they have trapped one of the cell doors (see below).

Iron Doors: 2 in. thick, hardness 10; hp 60; AC 5; break DC 28; Open Lock DC 30.

Trap: A magical trap protects the door to cell G. Unlocking the door by any means triggers the trap, which summons a noble salamander. The creature appears in the hallway in front of the door, positioned as necessary to ensure that it isn’t sharing a space with a character.

* Summoning Trap: CR 9; summon monster VIII (noble salamander, duration 15 rounds); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.

Noble Salamander: hp 112; see Monster Manual.

S7. OFFICERS’ QUARTERS (EL 12 OR 0)

A heavy brocade cloth hangs from the ceiling, splitting this room into two semiprivate bedchambers. Large, sumptuous beds with wooden frames lie in opposite corners, and a hardwood chest of drawers stands beside each. Flanking the door are two writing tables—one bare except for a neat pile of papers, the other covered with a disorderly mass of scrolls and sheets of paper.

These fine quarters belong to the two officers of Sixth Morcane’s guard force.

Unaware Creatures (EL 12): The two guard officers work or rest here most of the time, but at least one is always ready to respond to an alert called by the sentries in S5. The officers wear the livery of Irae T’sarran (white tabards with leering black skulls) and are natives of Maerimydra who arrived in Szith Morcane only recently. They were Irae's followers before coming here, and they are completely loyal to her and to Kiaransalee.

Szith Morcane Officers (2): hp 67, 52; see page 135.

Alarmed Creatures (EL 0): The room is empty. One of the guards is on duty in S7, while the other leads the web team (see S2).

Treasure: Each guard officer carries a key to the iron grate in S19 on her person.

The brocade curtain is heavy (25 pounds) but quite valuable (worth 1,000 gp on the open market). Stuffed deep into the mattress of one bed is a sturdy leather pouch (Search DC 15 for a character who specifically searches the bed). In the pouch are 65 pp, 50 gp, and a mithral necklace worth 1,300 gp.

Most of the papers on the writing tables are uninteresting: duty rosters showing which sentries are assigned to which guardposts—the Upper Outpost (D15), the Entry Post (S1), the Chasm Edge (S4), and the Guardpost (S5). A review of these papers reveals that the guards operate on two alternating duty rosters showing which sentries are assigned to which guardposts—the Upper Outpost (D15), the Entry Post (S1), the Chasm Edge (S4), and the Guardpost (S5). Because the drow don't use surface notations for time, notes in the margins reveal which guards can't be trusted on duty at the same post together.

On top of the next stack of papers is a wax-sealed bone tube containing a letter penned by one of the officers. It is intended for a cousin of hers in Cormanthor. The letter is written in Elven (Espruar script, the drow dialect) and reads as follows:

**Indrizil:

*Word has probably reached you about the fall of Maerimydra, and perhaps you have wondered about my safety. Obviously, I survived the sack of the city, although it was a close call indeed. The city fell at the hands of mere chattel—the priestesses of the Spider Queen had kept the city so cowed that, with their power gone, its defenders could not resist even a force of goblins, ogres, and giants. We held our strong places for a time without the clerics, but then House Obimarz was overthrown from within, and so we were undone. I write to you now from Szith Morcane, the old outpost north and west of the city. Perhaps you will come visit me—though I must say that if you still profess faith in Lolth you will not be welcomed by those who rule here now. The Spider Queen's priestesses have found a new role here, which I think you would not enjoy very much. I do not know if you still cling to the hope that the Spider Queen will restore you—will restore all of us—to her favor, but if you do, I urge you to reconsider. It is not too late for you or for our bond of blood. The Lady of the Dead will accept you still, just as she has taken me into her care. All Maerimydra is her temple now, and her emissaries rule here too. Abandon your empty allegiance to a silent goddess and come to Szith Morcane, but do not wear the emblem of the spider. I have need of allies of my own blood, and if Lolth still ignores your pleas, I suspect you do as well. —Rhavauz*

A successful Knowledge (religion) check (DC 20) identifies the Lady of the Dead as one of Kiaransalee's titles.

Rhavauz, the guard officer, intends to send the message with the next Undervark merchant who happens to pass through the outpost. A few such individuals carry on a small bit of trade between Maerimydra's outposts and the drow living in the shadows of Cormanthor.

Development: In Part 2 of the adventure, the officers may return as revenants to exact revenge on the characters. Make note of the spells and tactics the characters use in this encounter so that the revenants, if they appear, can adapt their tactics to suit the techniques used by the PCs in this battle.

S8. barracks 1 (EL 11 OR 0)

Six bunk beds fill nearly all the available space in this room. The smell of sweat lingers in the air, along with some less pleasant odors. One of the bunks has just a bare mattress; the others are covered with linen sheets and wool blankets.

This barracks is home to eleven drow sentries, though no more than six are ever here at any given time.

Unaware Creatures (EL 11): Five off-duty sentries are meditating in their bunks. They doze in their mithral shirts, but they must spend a full round after being roused to collect their weapons and bucklers. (A sentry's AC without his or her buckler is 15.) As long as the characters stay reasonably quiet outside the door, they can surprise the drow here.

Szith Morcane Sentries (7): hp 46, 43, 41, 33, 32; see page 134.

Alerted Creatures (EL 0): The room is empty. Two of the sentries from this room are assigned to S7; the other three are on the web team in S2.

Treasure: At the end of each of the eleven bunks is a small footlocker secured by a simple lock (Open Lock DC 20). Each footlocker contains several changes of clothing and some odds and ends of no great value. The drow don't trust each other, so they carry most of their personal treasure on their persons. One locker, however, conceals a gold comb studded with small diamonds (worth 470 gp), a scroll of haste and suggestion, and a wand of fly with 14 charges remaining. These valuables lie beneath a false bottom (Search DC 15). The owner of this footlocker murdered a wizard he disliked during his escape from Maerimydra, and he is now trying to decide how best to sell off his dead foe's magic items.

S9. Wizards' Quarters (EL VARIABLE)

The door to this room is warded with a fire trap.

Trap (EL 5): The three Szith Morcane spellguards share a secret password ("Quelzaress," a nonsense word) that allows them to open the door safely. Anyone opening the door without speaking the password triggers the trap.

*Fire Trap: CR 5; 5-foot radius (1d4+7 fire); Reflex DC 18 half; Search DC 29; Disable Device DC 29.*

Four plain beds line the walls of this room. One is simply a bare mattress on a wooden frame; the other three have linen sheets and wool blankets as well.

This chamber is home to the three spellguards—evokers who serve as part of Szith Morcane's guard force. A fourth spellguard fled toward the surface with Tierak Morcane and has taken up residence in D12.

Unaware Creatures (EL 8): One off-duty spellguard is... meditating in his bed before the characters arrive. He rises ready for combat if the fire trap goes off, though he is wearing only his long purple tunic.

Szith Morcane Spellguard: hp 16 (40 temporary); see page 133.

Unaware Tactics: Caught alone and possibly surprised, the spellguard concentrates on survival. He drinks his potion of haste, then tries to trap the party in a web. If anyone escapes the web, his next two spells are purely defensive: stoneskin and fire shield. Protected by these spells, he’s willing to risk running out the door to find help, but if that proves impossible, he stays and puts up a good fight, using ice storm and a hail of lightning bolts to whittle the party down. He makes as much noise as possible during the battle, hoping to draw aid from the other guards.

Alerted Creatures (EL 0): The room is empty. One of the sentries from this room is assigned to S7; the other four have joined the web team in S2.

Treasure: At the end of each of the eleven bunks is a small footlocker secured by a simple lock (Open Lock DC 20). Each footlocker contains several changes of clothing and some odds and ends of no great value. The drow sentries carry most of their treasure.

Bazaar Level

At Szith Morcane’s height, its bazaar—centrally located in the heart of the great spiderweb—was a bustling hub of activity. Merchants—not just from the six merchant families residing in the outpost, but also from drow settlements across the Dales region and even as far away as Menzoberranzan—came here in droves to sell their wares. But in the years after the drow of Maerimydra were driven from Shadowdale, Szith Morcane gradually changed from a busy mercantile center into a spartan military outpost. A few traders from other Underdark settlements still visit the outpost, providing the supplies (mostly foodstuffs, arms, and armor) that the drow here need to subsist. The rothé herds and mushroom farms on the Commoners’ level provide for the settlement’s other needs. The warehouses of the six merchant families now stand mostly vacant, and the bazaar is generally quiet.

S12. Bazaar (EL 12–13)

This huge natural cavern seems overlarge for the single clump of creatures gathered near its southwest wall. Two lizards loaded down with packs and crates stand at the center of the clump. Three gray dwarves beside them seem to be selling wares from the lizards’ packs. The customers include a pair of drow, a trio of kuo-toas, and a mind flayer. A lodge, about 10 feet off the ground, runs the length of the northeastern wall, and some half-dozen doors are set into the wall beyond the ledge. The cavern’s ceiling is about 20 feet high.

This chamber is Szith Morcane’s bazaar, in all its diminished glory. Over the course of any given week, a couple of merchants from elsewhere in the Underdark arrive with their pack lizards. The sentries, wizards, priests, and commoners of the outpost, as well as a handful of visitors from other Underdark locales, come to haggle over the merchants’ wares.

The cavern wall below the ledge is pitted with a number of natural handholds and footholds, making it fairly easy to climb (Climb DC 15).

Creatures: The potential combatants in the bazaar include the duergar merchants, two off-duty sentries, and the mind flayer, who simply can’t resist a good fight against surface-worlders. At the first sound of combat, the sentries and spellguard from the Bazaar Watchpost (S17) come to join the fray, raising the Encounter Level to 13.

Duergar Merchants (3): hp 65, 55, 51; see page 139.

Pack Lizards (2): hp 89, 79; see Forgotten Realms Campaign Setting.
Szith Morcane Sentries (2): hp 46, 33; see page 134.
Szith Morcane Spellguard: hp 16 (40 temporary); see page 133.
Mind Flayer: hp 50; see Monster Manual.

The three kuo-toas are not interested in fighting the characters. They flee toward the back of the cavern and make for S19 (on the Commoners’ level) as soon as any trouble begins.

Kuo-Toas (3): hp 14, 8, 7; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: The duergar are not accustomed to seeing surface-dwellers in the bazaar. Should a group that obviously does not consist entirely of subterranean races approach the merchants as if to do business, the duergar treat the visitors with suspicion and undisguised contempt, while the other customers edge slowly away from the group.

If sentries still stand guard in S4, the sounds of combat here alert them, and they notify the officers and the quth-maren as described in the “Intruder Alert!” sidebar (page 20). The web team then moves as quickly as possible to assist in the bazaar.

Treasure: The mind flayer has a good deal of treasure on its person, including magic items it captured from another hapless party of adventurers and hopes to sell for gems. Its treasure is 90 pp, 2,000 sp, six gems (three 10-gp azurites, two 15-gp blue quartzes, and a 1,200-gp blue sapphire), a +1 greataxe, a potion of alter self, a potion of sneaking, a scroll of color spray and jump, a scroll of heat metal, delay poison, and chill metal, a scroll of charm person or animal, and a scroll of magic circle against evil (divine). The creature stores all this in a bag of holding (Bag 1).

The pack lizards are laden with a wide assortment of trade goods: raw fabric from all over the world, arms and armor (including some masterwork items, but no magic ones), large quantities of foodstuffs (cheese, dried meats, and fungus), and a few items of mundane equipment (some leather goods such as pouches, boots, belts, and backpacks, a small assortment of pottery, and tools useful for navigating the Underdark, such as climbing kits, picks and pitons, and rope). The armor and weapons plus a few bolts of rare silk bring the total value of these miscellaneous goods to 2,125 gp. The whole lot weighs 1,200 pounds.

In addition to their personal gear, the duergar carry various forms of cash. In total, the three merchants have 300 pp, 300 gp, 670 sp, and twenty-two gems (five 10-gp violines, four 50-gp tchazars, five 50-gp moonstones, two 100-gp waterstars, three 100-gp amethysts, a 700-gp violet garnet, a 700-gp deep blue spinel, and a 500-gp black pearl).

S13. ABANDONED WAREHOUSE

The doors to all six abandoned warehouses (the five marked S13 on the map as well as the one marked S15) are barred from the outside. Each building has a heavy wooden beam nailed to the door and to both sides of the doorframe. The beam can be pried off (Strength DC 20; +2 circumstance bonus if a crowbar is used) or simply broken through (Strength DC 25) to open the door.

The five warehouses marked S13 are virtually identical. Read the following should the characters enter any of them:
Dust swirls into the air and clings to the spiderwebs that hang everywhere in this large, clearly abandoned room. Sheets of cobwebs hang from the ceiling to the floor, and intricate networks of webbing cover the ceiling. Dozens of spiders are visible in the webs—some as small as peas, others as large as dogs. Some of these spiders are sitting still, others are crawling slowly around.

In Szith Morcane's heyday, these warehouses were home to goods traded by six wealthy merchant families whose power rivaled that of the priestesses of Lolth. Now the buildings stand vacant, infested with spiders and coated in dust.

The spiders, though plentiful, do not pose a serious threat to the characters. Most of them are ordinary spiders, but each abandoned warehouse holds 2d10 Tiny monstrous spiders and 2d6 Small monstrous spiders. None of them have treasure. Do not award experience points for destroying the spiders.

S14. ABANDONED MERCHANT RESIDENCE

It appears that this chamber once served as a residence. In one corner stands a bed with a crumbling frame, and beside it is a dresser with its empty drawers heaped on the floor. Against the opposite wall stand a writing table and a chair. Any creature comforts are long gone. Spiderwebs cover the ceiling and hang idly from the walls and furniture.

Like their warehouses, the residences of Szith Morcane's merchant families are deserted. All distinctions among them have been obliterated with the passage of centuries. Each residence now houses 2d6 Tiny monstrous spiders and 2d4 Small monstrous spiders, in addition to multitudes of ordinary arachnids.

S15. SPIDERLESS WAREHOUSE (EL VARIABLE)

As with the other five abandoned warehouses (S13), the door to this one is barred from the outside. However, a character examining this bar (Search DC 18) might notice that it is not actually attached to the door. In fact, the door swings inward easily with a push. Characters can enter by ducking under the bar, which remains in place across the door frame.

This large room seems completely bare and featureless, from floor to ceiling.

This warehouse has been purged of spiders (and their webbing) by the oozes that prowl its walls. Worshipers of Ghaunadar, the drow deity of oozes, use one of the inner chambers (S16) as a secret shrine. Their mindless allies lurk here in the darkness.

Creatures (EL 9): Two black puddings seep across the walls, ceilings, and floor of this room, eating any organic matter (except members of the cult) that dares intrude into Ghaunadar’s domain. The puddings tend to remain in the back of the pitch-dark room, so characters without a decent light source or the ability to see in the dark at long range may not spot them immediately.

\[\text{Trap (EL 7): } \text{The door to S16 is protected by a greater glyph of warding trap, which triggers whenever anyone who is not a worshipper of Ghaunadar stands in front of the door. This glyph was created by the cult's chief cleric, Tooman Thendrik.} \]

S16. SHRINE TO GAUNADAR (EL 11)

An unspeakably vile stench, combining the worst elements of decaying flesh, refuse, and waste, fills this small room. A fetid pool of slime glints in the center of the chamber, and a number of amorphous shapes twitch around it. Within the pool of slime, something glows with a sickly violet light.

This abandoned merchant residence has been appropriated for use as a shrine by the tiny, outlawed cult of Ghaunadar in Szith Morcane. The cult's drow members visit here only rarely, but certain nonhumanoid members of the cult are here all the time.

The pool of slime is strongly acidic. Any creature that touches it takes 1d6 points of acid damage; any creature that falls into it takes 10d6 points of damage per round of immersion. At the bottom of the pool, a permanent magical effect (a variation on the dancing lights spell) traces the holy symbol of Ghaunadar (an unblinking lidless eye) in dark purple light.

Creatures: The cult of Ghaunadar has some members who cannot move freely among the drow of Szith Morcane. These members, a roper and three ochre jellies, remain in the cult's meeting place as guardians. The roper looks for opportunities to pull or bull rush intruders into the acid pool.

| Roper: hp 86; see Monster Manual. |
| Ochre Jellies (3): hp 70, 67, 64; see Monster Manual. |

Ad Hoc XP Adjustment: Add a +25% experience point adjustment to this encounter because of the complication presented by the acid pool.

Treasure: Tooman Thendrik, the cult's leader, keeps a small amount of the cult's treasure here. Two large clay urns (one on either side of the primitive altar) hold a total of 4,400 sp, 290 gp, 20 pp, and a silk pouch full of gemstones—two 80-gp spodumenes, two 60-gp citrines, and three 12-gp greenstones.

S17. BAZAAR WATCHPOST (EL 10)

This cavern bulges out from the tunnel, forming a natural watchpost with a fine view of the tunnel leading off to the east. It is unfurnished and undecorated.

Three guards are posted here at all times to keep watch over the bazaar (S12) and the Commoners' level. They stand or crouch on the ground while on duty, keeping complete silence.

Creatures: Two of the guards are sentries in the livery of Irae Tsarran (white tabards bearing leering black skulls). The third is a spellguard in the traditional purple tunic and black trousers.

| Szith Morcane Spellguard: hp 16 (40 temporary); see page 133. |
| Szith Morcane Sentinels (2): hp 40, 31; see page 134. |

The guards react quickly to any disturbance in the bazaar or the immediate area. Allow each a Listen check (Listen modifier +4 for the sentries and +7 for the spellguard) to notice sounds in the Commoners’ level as well.

Commoners’ Level

On this level, an enormous, rambling cavern stretches for more than 1/4 mile from the chasm. This cavern is home to Szith Morcane’s hundred or so common drow, plus almost two hundred slaves.

The Commoners’ level produces many of the necessities of life for the Szith Morcane residents. A small herd of rothé provides milk and cheese, furs, and sometimes meat, and the various fungi cultivated here supply the bulk of the drow’s diet. A stream brings fresh, clear water to the community as well. The noble drow of the outpost—including all the members of House Morcane, the wizards and sorcerers of the Inverted Tower, and the officers of the guard—rarely set foot on this level. When they do, they surround themselves with armed guards and parade through in state as quickly as possible.

The scale of this map is much larger than the scale of the maps of the other Szith Morcane levels.

S18. Drow Cavern (EL 9 to 13)

The cave mouth in the chasm winds back deep into the rock, opening into a very large cavern. A faint green phosphorescence dances along the ceiling, which is easily 30 feet overhead at the entrance and rises sharply from that point. The cavern stretches for hundreds of feet to the east, its floor broken into a myriad of ledges and tilted slabs. Many of these are covered with weird fungal growths that appear to have been carefully cultivated; others sport bulbous houses or cottages that seem to have been grown from giant toadstools. Eerie green witchlight dances in the small, round windows of these dwellings. A few dark figures move about between the fungus patches and the houses.

A Common Drow Household

A commoner’s house in Szith Morcane generally consists of a decent-sized living room, a large workshop, a kitchen, a pantry, and several small, private alcoves that serve as sleeping quarters for the family members. Sometimes wooden doors divide these areas, but more often heavy curtains suffice for privacy. The typical home office had a small household shrine to Lolth, but the commoners of Szith Morcane have dispensed with these to comply with the edicts of the new regime. Lowborn drow do not enjoy much of the opulence and luxury that noble drow do, so the furnishings in a commoners’ house are generally plain, with pleasing lines but no extraordinary value.

Despite their humble station, low-level drow commoners are not nice people. They reap the benefits of enslaving weaker humanoids to do their hard labor, and they do not hesitate to lash out at these creatures, knowing that no goblin or orc dares raise a hand to defend itself for fear of the awful reprisals that would follow. They compete ruthlessly to place their daughters and sons in the service of the noble families, and they maintain generations-long vendettas against each other. Even the lowliest drow commoner is always plotting some way to grab a little more wealth, a little more respect, and a little more power. Jealousy, avarice, and long-nurtured grudges poison a drow commoner’s every waking thought.

Killing drow too weak to resist is not a particularly heroic course of action, but—truth be told—“freeing” the lower drow classes from the oppression of the nobles would only create a different set of tyrants a few years down the road. For the sake of the adventure, you may want to encourage the players to ignore the common drow (who really aren’t worth their time) and concentrate on beating the infinitely more dangerous and malicious noble drow elsewhere in the complex.

The western half of this level is home to Szith Morcane’s common drow. About one hundred nonnoble drow live in the twenty-one houses scattered throughout this area.

The escarpments (each 1d6+5 feet high at any given point) make it difficult to move quickly around the cavern. Unless the characters are following one of the cleared paths, climbing an escarpment requires a successful Climb check (DC 5).

Creatures: The nonnoble drow residing in this cavern include thirty-five 1st-level warriors (slave drivers and marauders), twenty-five 1st-level experts (craftspeople and artisans), twenty 1st-level commoners (farmers and herders), and fifteen 1st-level commoners (children).

At any given time, roughly one-third of the warriors are resting in their homes, one-third are out in the nearby stretches of the Deep Wastes or on the bottom of the chasm hunting and scavenging, and one-third are moving about this cavern engaged in various tasks. The experts spend most of their time in their homes, where their workshops are located. The farmers spend about half their time in their homes and the other half tending the mushroom fields and rothé pastures. The children generally remain in their homes. Any given toadstool house is home to 2d6 of these lowborn drow, usually with a mix of occupations.

One slave overseer is resting in his house (C) when the characters enter the Commoners’ level. He emerges at the sound of prolonged melee, but a brief scuffle is not enough to draw his attention.

Tooman Thendrik lurks near his house (B) when the characters arrive, pretending to be nothing more than an ordinary drow warrior. He fights only if he sees the characters systematically breaking into or destroying drow homes. Adding him to a general melee here raises the Encounter Level to 15.

- Common Drow Warriors (13): hp 3 each; see page 135.
- Common Drow Commoners (10): hp 2 each; see page 136.
- Slave Overseer: hp 57; see page 136.
Tooman Thendrik, Cleric of Ghaunadar: hp 77; see page 136.

Tactics: If the heroes are spotted or cause trouble, 1d4 common drow warriors from this area converge on the party each round until thirteen of them have engaged the characters. The rest remain in their homes and defend against attackers seeking to force their way inside. Drow commoners stay well clear of any fighting, but they may run for help, dashing up the ramp (A) or out to the chasm and shouting for sentries from nearby levels. In a pinch, low-level drow make aggressive use of their darkness ability to slow down dangerous attackers and buy themselves a chance to escape.

The common drow quickly recognize superior opponents and retreat to the safety of their homes. The toadstool houses are tougher than they look. (The walls are the equivalent of 6-inch thick wood, with hardness 5, 60 hp, and break DC 20.) If the characters clearly intend to root out and destroy every drow in this cavern, the residents flee for the Deep Wastes, the Bazaar Level, or the chasm by the most expeditious route.

The common drow and the rothé provide no real challenge for the characters. Do not award experience points for defeating them.

A. RAMP

This ramp curves up to the Bazaar level, about 50 feet above. It passes right in front of S17, so characters carrying lights or advertising their presence in some other manner may walk into an ambush.

B. TOOMAN THENDRICK'S HOUSE

Tooman Thendrick, the cleric of Ghaunadar who maintains the shrine in S16, lives here with five other drow—two warriors and three farmers, all of whom belong to his cult. The cleric is very slow to intervene against the heroes, figuring that the more of Irae's sentries and spellguards they kill, the more likely it is that he can find a way to advance Ghaunadar's worship in the city.

C. OVERSEEERS' QUARTERS

All of Szith Morcane's drow have some responsibility for overseeing the work of the outpost's slaves, but three very competent slave overseers are primarily responsible for making sure that the slaves stay in their place. Two are on duty at S21 during active hours, and one during hours of rest. Currently, one is resting here in his room, although he may come out to investigate any real disturbances in the area.

D. STREAM

A swift, cold stream drains from the lake (E) and flows toward the southwest in a rushing brook. The stream is about 10 feet wide and only a foot or two deep, and its bottom is rocky and very slick. A successful Balance check (DC 18) is required to cross the stream without falling. A character who slips and falls while crossing sustains 1d4 points of damage from the many stones. Sand has been poured across the bottom at the ford marked on the map to provide a safe crossing point.

E. LAKE (EL 11)

The still surface of the lake reflects the light of the phosphorescent fungus in the cavern, making it difficult to see what might lie beneath the surface.

Observant characters might notice that the rothé—like the drow and the bugbears—actually avoid the lake, drinking instead from the stream and staying at least 10 feet away from the lake itself. A successful Animal Empathy or Sense Motive check (DC 15) allows a character to discern that the rothé are afraid of the lake.

The depth of the lake ranges from 1 foot at the edges to 40 feet at the center.

Creatures: Two bizarre creatures dwell in the waters of the lake—giant octopuses that have been infused with spidery essence. Each has a rubbery body covered with chitinous plates, from the junctures of which sprout coarse black hairs. Its twelve tentacles are studded with barbs and sharp-edged suckers, and its mouth is a set of spiderlike mandibles capable of delivering deadly poison. These creatures fight with the merciless ferocity of hunting spiders.

The reflective surface of the lake gives the octopuses total concealment and one-half cover relative to creatures outside the lake. If the monsters extend their tentacles out of the lake to attack nearby creatures, they still have one-quarter cover against melee or ranged attacks from landbound opponents.

Arachnoid Giant Octopus (2): hp 59, 55; see page 136.

Tactics: The octopuses are mindless, but their instinct is to draw potential prey into the water. They use their improved grab ability to pull their targets into the water, but they always choose to take the –20 penalty on their grapple checks so as to keep their other tentacles free for attacking other foes.

S19. NORTHEAST PASSAGE

About 30 feet into the tunnel, a heavy, swinging iron grate bars the passage. A padlock holds the barrier closed. Beyond it, the tunnel continues to the northeast, stretching into the darkness.

The grate was intended to prevent the slaves from using this passage as an escape route into the Underdark, so it was built to resist even stone giant strength. Forcing it requires a successful Strength check (DC 30). Five keys to this padlock exist: One is held by each of the slave overseers in S18c and S21, and one by each of the guard officers in S7.

Iron Grate: 3 in. thick, hardness 10; hp 90; AC 5; break DC 32; lift DC 30; Open Lock DC 30.

The passage leads into the Deep Wastes, where Part 2 of this adventure takes place. See Map 7b: The Deep Wastes on page 7 of the map booklet.

If You Relocated Szith Morcane: If you placed Szith Morcane in another area of Faerûn, the tunnel leading out from this cavern leads to a portal. After 2 hours' travel, the characters arrive in a dead-end cavern. A portal is clearly marked on the wall, and the name “Maerimydra” is engraved on it in the Espruar script. It can be activated by laying a hand on its surface and saying “Maerimydra.” The portal leads to a nearly identical cavern some 100 miles northwest of Maerimydra, in the spot where Szith Morcane is shown on Map 7b: The Deep Wastes. A tunnel leads off to the southeast from this cavern, toward the Lake of Shadows and Maerimydra.

S20. SECRET CAVE

The stream crossing S18, the drow cavern, vanishes into a deep, descending crevice on the southern wall of the cavern. A little more than a hundred feet down, it drops abruptly into a chute that funnels it into Szith Morcane's great chasm, 100 feet below the bottom edge of the web. This cleft is just barely large enough for a Small character to squeeze through with a successful Escape Artist check (DC 30). A Medium-size character cannot pass through, since the crevice is smaller than such a character's head.

The corpse is that of a svirfneblin adventurer who hid in this cave, badly wounded, after the rest of his party was slaughtered while attempting to infiltrate the drow stronghold. He eventually starved to death, too afraid to venture back out into Szith Morcane. He has been dead for twenty-five years.

Since the body is far from the "mostly intact" state required for a speak with dead spell, this corpse is almost entirely beyond communication. However, it can answer yes or no questions by nodding or shaking its skull. In life, the svirfneblin was a neutral good 8th-level rogue; if the caster of the speak with dead spell is of a different alignment, the corpse receives a Will save (+5 bonus). Should the characters try to restore the svirfneblin to life, the result is yours to decide. If the party needs help or you want an excuse to bring a new player into the group, let him return—possibly with a different class, level, or race, as long as he is Small. Otherwise, he refuses to return.

The corpse's nonmagic gear is worthless at this area on alert, if it is not already.

Treasure:

- A +1 studded leather armor
- A +1 buckler
- Two potions of neutralize poison
- A potion of cure serious wounds
- A cloak of protection +1
- A bag of holding

S21. OVERSEER STATION (EL 12)

An 8-foot-high wall built of crudely mortared fieldstone divides the cavern in two here. One end extends out into a very large, dark lake to the left; the other is anchored in the cavern wall to the right. A strong iron grate stands open, allowing a glimpse of mushroom fields and broken cavern floor beyond. Two strong and cruel-looking drow males stand watch by the opening.

This station allows a pair of overseers to keep an eye on events in the slave cavern (S22), while remaining close to the relative safety the other dark elves provide. A wraith spider also guards this post, clinging to the ceiling of the cavern about 30 feet above the floor. Approaching characters may not note the undead spider's presence (see below).

Creatures: Two drow slave overseers and a wraith spider stand watch here, dealing with any disturbances among the slaves and the common drow on this level. They aren't supposed to keep watch on everybody passing in or out of the cavern, and they don't challenge drow with business in S22. If all the characters appear to be drow, the overseers and their ally barely give them a second glance as they go on through. However, if any of them are obviously surface-dwellers, the overseers make a concerted stand against them, hollering for help. Under no circumstances do the overseers venture within 20 feet of the lake to the north.

The wraith spider is difficult to spot on the ceiling. Its Hide modifier is +1 because of its dark coloration and unnatural stillness. Allow a Spot check if any character uses an action to look around for foes. The wraith spider was commanded by one of the T'sarran nieces (a 10th-level cleric) to stand watch here and attack any creatures indicated by the slave overseers. The goblins and bugbears in S22 are also after the undead spider, since it has killed more than one of their kind who tried to sneak over the wall.

The sound of a pitched battle in this area carries easily to the common drow in S18 (if any remain) and the slaves working in S22. If the web team is patrolling the chasm, that group responds quickly to the sounds of combat here. Otherwise, a disturbance here serves to alert the guards, as described in the "Intruder Alert!" sidebar (page 20).

Slave Overseers (2): hp 61, 52; see page 136.

Large Wraith Spider: hp 37; see Appendix 1.

This chamber is open to cavern S22. Combat here draws interest from the residents of that cavern, but no assistance. The slaves in cavern S22 are also too happy to see the overseers killed. The third overseer is meditating in his house (S18c).

If the characters fight the overseers while S18 and S22 are still populated, a small crowd of drow and bugbears gathers to watch the melee, with Thulk at its front. If the characters emerge victorious, Thulk invites them into S22 and tries to convince them to aid him in bid for control over Szith Morcane. A goblin eavesdrops outside and tells the drow what he hears if not intercepted and killed. They in turn report the conversation to Dorina T'sarran, who places the area on alert, if it is not already.

S22. SLAVE CAVERN (EL 13)

The ceiling of this vast cavern rises more than 100 feet from the uneven ground. Stalactites hang from the ceiling and stalagmites rise to meet them throughout the cavern, occasionally joining to form a solid column. Dense patches of phosphorescent fungus grow in various locations throughout the cavern, including on some walls, illuminating the whole area in a soft purple light. Several beasts resembling small cattle or yaks seem to roam about a stone-walled enclosure beside a large, dark lake. A number of side-caves are visible in the walls at various altitudes on the eastern end of the cavern.

Eight caves line the walls of the cavern, their entrances at varying heights off the floor. These caves provide shelter for any slaves that can stake a claim to them. As in the drow area to the west, the escarpments here make it difficult to move quickly around the cavern; each is 1d6+5 feet high at any given point. Unless the characters are following one of the cleared paths, climbing an escarpment requires a successful Climb check (DC 5). A character must make a successful Climb check (DC 20) to reach a cave entrance more than one-half of his or her height off the ground. Lower caves can be entered as a part of normal movement.

Creatures: This cavern is home to the slaves of Szith Morcane. The slave contingent here includes about sixty goblins, twenty bugbears, and a trio of stone giants. The slaves have learned not to attack drow, but they would welcome the chance to flex their muscles against surface-world intruders, hoping to win some small amount of favor in their cruel masters’ eyes.

The bugbear slaves are loosely ruled by a barbarian bully named Thulk, a goblinoid strong in both body and personality. He has cowed even the stone giants through sheer bluster combined with a cruelty that rivals that of the drow.

At any given time, half of the goblins and bugbears are scattered around the rothé enclosure and the mushroom fields working, and rest of the goblinoids are resting, malingering, or squabbling in their noisome, warrenlike caves. All three stone giants are engaged in refilling a big cistern at area B, since they don’t fear the monsters in the cavern’s big lake and can carry an enormous amount of water with each trip.

- Goblin Slaves (30): hp 3 each; see Monster Manual.
- Bugbear Slaves (10): hp 16 each; see Monster Manual.
- Thulk, Bugbear Boss: hp 84; see page 136.
- Deep Rothé (20): hp 13 each; see Forgotten Realms Campaign Setting.

The goblins, bugbear slaves, and rothé provide no real challenge to the characters. Do not award experience points for defeating them.

Tactical: News of fighting at the gate in S21 spreads like wildfire through the slave cavern, as goblins from all over the mushroom fields come running to see what’s going on. They view a band of ignorant surface-dwellers as a walking feast wrapped up in treasure, so they gather in a surly crowd and prepare to attack characters who force their way into the slave enclosure.

After the first assault is driven back, or at the first display of serious power on the part of the invaders, the goblins flee back to their bolt holes in the side caves, yammering in terror. The bugbears and giants are somewhat more determined, but even they know better than to take on a powerful band of surface heroes.

Thulk offers to parley once he sees that the slaves have no chance to overwhelm the heroes. He’s willing to agree to a challenge to the characters. Do not award experience points for defeating them.

Development: If the characters wish to extirpate everything in this area, they find that each of the side-caves is only about 10 feet in height. The interiors are squalid, fouled by the goblinoid slaves living therein. Of the six side-caves not marked as areas of special interest, two are home to about ten bugbears each, and the other four are occupied by about fifteen goblins each. Feuding over “good” caves is endless and deadly.

F. GIANTS’ CAVE

This cave is home to the three stone giants who are enslaved here. They were raised in Szith Morcane’s slave caverns after they were taken captive as young children. While they could probably escape if they wanted to, they simply don’t know anything other than their lives in the drow outpost. The giants are all too willing to curry favor with their drow masters by attacking surface dwellers who venture into this area.

G. CISTERN

This pool serves as the source of water for the slaves, most of whom do not dare venture within 20 feet of the big lake (E). impossible for Medium-size or smaller flying characters to enter S34. This effect is subject to spell resistance.

Alerted by the gust of wind blowing outside his private chambers, Solom Ned'razak casts clairaudience/clairvoyance to see who triggered the trap. If he decides that the heroes pose a real threat, he prepares for battle by casting his power-up suite of spells, as described in his entry on page 138. Sitting on his throne in S34, he continues periodically checking on S24 via clairvoyance for the duration of the spell (15 minutes) or until the characters either come to him or enter level three of the tower. Should the latter occur first, he follows the heroes.

None of the guards and wards effects are noticeable in this area, making it fully possible for the characters to trigger the trap without realizing they have done so.

S24. THE INVERTED TOWER (EL VARIABLE)

Glistening walls of smooth, black rock tower upward, forming an octagonal room that looks like a squat tower turned inside-out. A single archway leads to the northeast on the ground level.

The walls of the Inverted Tower are extremely hard to climb (Climb DC 30) because they are smooth and slope inward. A spider climb effect allows a character to move up the wall, but the preferred method of moving about within the Tower is to fly (or, in a pinch, levitate).

If the characters triggered the guards and wards trap, the doors set higher in the tower's walls are not visible to normal sight because they are covered by glamers to appear as part of the normal wall. If the characters avoided the trap, they can see the three doors higher in the walls.

Creatures (EL 10): Two guards are posted in S25 at all times. Unless the characters enter by stealth, the guards move to intercept them as soon as they enter the Inverted Tower. Triggering the guards and wards trap does not automatically alert the guards, since none of its effects are noticeable here.

The arcane guards are male drow wearing mithral shirts and purple tabards adorned with the crest of the Inverted Tower, a stylized spider atop a staff.

Arcane Guard (2): hp 33, 32; see page 136.

Treasure: In addition to their standard gear, each arcane guard carries one of the guardpost's two wands, a wand of web (20 charges), or a wand of dispel magic (10 charges), while on duty here.

The sounds of combat in this room travel throughout the Inverted Tower complex.

S25. ARCANE GUARDPOST

This small, square room is unfurnished and undecorated. It is completely unremarkable except for the door leading off to the left of the entrance.

Two arcane guards are stationed here at all times, operating in three daily shifts. If the characters entered in complete silence and invisibly, the guards do not immediately emerge, so they may be encountered in this room instead of in S24 (see their abbreviated statistics and additional equipment above).

S26. ARCANE GUARD BARRACKS (EL 12)

A large round table surrounded by chairs dominates one corner of this room. Across from it, a cupboard and counter unit occupies another wall, apparently serving as a minimal kitchen for this room's occupants. A heavy curtain hangs across the room beyond the cabinets.

Behind the curtain are four double bunk beds where the arcane guards rest while off duty.

The cabinets hold food supplies for the guards. These stores consist of dried meat and fungus, rothé cheese laced with green mold, dry crackers, and an urn of clean water.

Creatures: This room is home to the six arcane guards who keep watch over the entrance to the Inverted Tower. At any given time, two are on duty in S27, while the other four are in here. They rarely leave the Inverted Tower level, even when off-duty. Usually, two guards are meditating while the other two sit at the table eating or playing dice. Guards who are not resting wear purple tabards over their mithral shirts but not their tabards. They take 1d4 rounds to gather all their gear and join a fight in progress.

Arcane Guard (4): hp 41, 31, 30, 29; see page 136.

S27. HALLWAYS

These two hallways are unexceptional unless the guards and wards spell is in effect. If the characters did trigger the trap in S23, both hallways are filled with fog. The doors in the halls, as well as the doors leading into the halls, are secured by arcane lock effects and covered with glamers to appear as plain walls. The hallways are also warded by the spell's confusion effect.

S28. VACANT STUDENT'S QUARTERS

This small room has clearly been unoccupied for some time. Dust lies thick on the floor, cobwebs fill every corner and dangle from the ceiling.

The Inverted Tower is designed so that the archmage can train four apprentices at a time, but it has been some time since Solom Ned'razak has had that many students in his tutelage. Despite appearances, no monstrous spiders lurk in this room—just a number of ordinary ones.

S29. STUDENT'S QUARTERS (EL 9)

This is an austere chamber, reminiscent of a monastic cell. A simple pallet serves as the only bed, and a small chest, reading table, and stool are the only other furnishings. A leather-bound book lies open on the reading table.

The students of the Inverted Tower live ascetic lives, denied all but the most basic necessities. Solom Ned'razak believes that this austerity increases their discipline and, eventually, their mastery of the arcane arts.

Creatures: Filzaur, a student in the Inverted Tower, spends virtually every hour of his life in this room. He is an 8th-level wizard with a strong preference for spells that inflict curses or diseases. Filzaur is an average-looking drow male who favors greens and yellows in his clothing. He usually wears an emerald-green shirt, black trousers, black boots, and a yellow sash around his waist. On the rare occasions when he leaves the Inverted Tower, he also wears a voluminous black cloak.

- Inverted Tower Student (Filzaur): hp 31; see page 137.
- Treasure: Filzaur's spellbook, which sits on the reading table, is the only treasure here; its spells are listed in his entry on page 137. The trunk holds several changes of clothing and a silk pouch containing 15 pp, 95 gp, 43 sp, and three catseye agates worth 15 gp apiece.

S30. Student's Quarters (EL 9)

At first glance, this room appears identical to S29. The cover of the spellbook on the reading table is snakeskin rather than leather, but otherwise the rooms are almost indistinguishable.

- Creatures: A second student named Nobruzzal, an 8th-level wizard with eclectic magical tastes, lives in this room. He is a tall and gaunt drow male who dresses completely in black—black shirt, black trousers, black boots, and black cloak.

- Inverted Tower Student (Nobruzzal): hp 33; see page 137.
- Treasure: The spells in this student's spellbook are listed with his entry on page 137.

S31. Head Student's Quarters (EL 12)

Behind the door is a featureless stone wall.

The wall behind the door is an illusory wall designed simply to delay any intruders attempting to enter the head student's private study. The room itself is larger than the other students' quarters but not much more comfortable. The thin mattress that serves as a bed is covered with a linen sheet. Instead of a reading table and stool, a black sitting mat rests on the floor with a spellbook on a small stand beside it. Against one wall, a chest provides storage space for personal belongings.

- Creatures: The best student at the arcane academy gains the dual privileges of larger quarters and more freedom to move around Szith Morcane. Susztam Mar-Shinn has been the head student for eighteen years. He dreams of one day usurping Solom Ned'razak's position. Susztam is a specialist illusionist who uses the Shadow Weave to power his spells.

Susztam is unusually plump for a drow, displaying a definite roundness to his face and body. He seems soft and weak at first glance, but he is actually hard as adamantine—cruel, stubborn, and driven. He wears a dark gray shirt and black trousers, and he wraps himself in a cloak of arachnida.

- Susztam Mar-Shinn, Inverted Tower Head Student: hp 37; see page 137.
- Tactics: Knowing that his neighbors on this floor have every reason to want him dead and no moral qualms about helping that to happen, Susztam treats any intrusion as a threat on his life. When the door to his room opens, he first casts improved invisibility on himself. If he has time before the intruders find their way through the wall, he casts mirage arcana to make the room look dusty and vacant, much like S28. His use of the Shadow Weave makes both spells difficult to detect or dispel (see the Pernicious Magic and Tenacious Magic feats in the Forgotten Realms Campaign Setting).

If the characters leave quickly after entering the apparently vacant room, Susztam ignores the disturbance and lets them go. If they start searching the area (and thereby interact with the glamer), he casts haste on himself and phantasmal killer on the character he judges most likely to fail the saving throws (an apparent rogue is his first choice). He follows this tactic with displacement and stoneskin to protect himself, then launches into his offensive spells: greater shadow evocation (relicating a cone of cold at, if he feels very threatened, a wall of force), greater shadow conjuration (relicating a summon monster IV spell to bring a shadowy howler, a solid fog spell), enervation, ray of enfeeblement, and web.

Treasure: The head student's spellbook contains the spells listed with his statistics on page 137. The chest contains a few sets of clothing (all the same gray and black shades, except for a bright red shirt he saves for special occasions) and, buried under the clothing, a small devotional icon of Lolth (forbidden under Szith Morcan's new regime). A small leather pouch holds 38 pp, 35 gp, 55 sp, and a fine diamond pendant worth 660 gp.

S32. Conjury (EL 13-17)

A large arcane diagram fills most of the floor in this octagonal room. Traced in paint, powdered silver, and colored sand, the diagram is circular, with various shapes and stars circumscribed within. The odors of smoke and sulfur hang in the air as if a large chemical fire had burned in here recently. The room is otherwise featureless.

Characters who can see invisible creatures spot the nycaloth (see Creatures) immediately.

The door to this room is protected with a permanent alarm spell. When any creature passes through, a mental alarm alerts Solom Ned'razak. As soon as that occurs, Solom takes several rounds to cast some of his power-up spells in his own chambers, concluding with haste. He then teleports into the room, arriving 1d+2 rounds after the characters enter, to prevent them from freeing the creature within.

Creatures: Three days ago, Solom Ned'razak summoned a nycaloth—a creature from the infernal plane known as the Barrens of Doom and Despair—into a calling diagram in the center of this room. The nycaloth is invisible, but characters who can see invisible creatures can discern its true form. It resembles a large gargoyle with powerful batlike wings and thick, green skin. Its hands and feet sport razor-sharp claws, and its head is vaguely canine, with small webbed ears and horns. It stands in the middle of the arcane diagram on the floor.

So far, the archmage has not been successful in forging a bargain with the fiend, so it remains here, trapped in the calling diagram, attempting a difficult Charisma check (Charisma modifier +3 against a DC of 21) each day to win its freedom. At the time the characters arrive, it has just failed another attempt, so it is stuck in the circle for 24 hours more. If no one seems to see it, the nycaloth remains invisible, hoping the characters will free it by disturbing the diagram unwittingly. If the creature realizes that someone can see it, or it seems that no one will break the circle, it addresses the characters telepathically and makes whatever promises it must to convince them to set it free. All that is necessary is for someone to step over, mar, or lay any object across the containing diagram.

If the nycaloth is freed by chance or design, it is not particularly grateful to its rescuers. It makes 1 round of melee attacks on the nearest character, then teleports to Solom Ned'razak's chamber to attack him. (In that case, the wizard successfully casts dismissal on the nycaloth but sustains 10 points of damage from the creature before doing so.) If Solom Ned'razak appears in this room while the nycaloth is free, it makes a single round of attacks on the archmage and then vanishes, recognizing that Solom has readied himself for combat with numerous powerful spells.

- Nycaloth: hp 67; see page 137.

Tactics: If the players attack the nycaloth, it invokes its deeper darkness power and looks for an opportunity to grapple a weak character. If it is free, it simply mauls one character within reach before teleporting off in search of the archmage.

Development: If Solom Ned'razak arrives while the nycaloth is still trapped in the calling diagram, he politely invites the characters to join him in his audience hall (S34), trying to draw them away from the nycaloth before they can free it. If they reveal that they know of the creature’s presence and make any threat to free it, he attacks them immediately. Finally, if the nycaloth attacks the archmage before he’s ready to join battle in this chamber, he drinks his potion of cure moderate wounds and then teleports into this room to open negotiations with the player characters.

- Solom Ned'razak, Archmage of Szith Morcan: hp 55; see on page 138.

Solom Ned'razak is not necessarily hostile to the characters unless they threaten his life by releasing the nycaloth. If they peacefully accompany him to the audience hall, he is more than willing to negotiate an alliance with them. See S34 for more information.

Ad Hoc XP Adjustment: Since the nycaloth is interested only in causing a few rounds of mayhem before departing, award 70% of the normal experience for the encounter. Characters who actually kill the creature before it can leave of its own accord earn normal experience.

S33. Instructional Room

The eight walls of this room are covered with slate, whitened with chalk powder. Arcane scrawlings and diagrams in white chalk cover roughly half of the available surface. A high stool stands in the center of the room, with a reading table in front of it. A lectern faces the door.

This room is where Solom Ned'razak teaches his students every couple of days. The head student has the privilege of sitting on the stool, while the other students sit on the floor.
behind him. Solom stands at the lectern or the chalkboards and lectures or demonstrates spell techniques.

Casting read magic allows a character to decipher the scrawlings on the chalkboard. These reveal that the archmage has recently taught his students the intricacies of the detect scrying spell, as well as general information about scrying spells and the magical sensors they create.

S34. Audience Hall (EL 16 or 0)

If the characters triggered the guards and wards trap, the gust of wind effect blows from the throne to the door in this room. No creature can fly in through the door without first negating the effect.

An impressive throne made of heavy-looking black metal looms on a high dais on the far side of the room from the door. Rich tapestries with abstract designs hang on the wall behind the throne, flanking it and contributing to its air of impressive authority. Two doors, one on either side of the entrance, lead out of the room.

In outright rebellion against the dominance of female clerics in drow society, the archmage of Szith Morcane asserts his own power and authority as much as possible here in his inner sanctum. He rarely uses this room for actual audiences, since few visitors come to the top levels of the Inverted Tower. When he does hold audience, however, he enjoys perching high on his throne and looking down at the lesser beings who come before him.

Creatures: If the characters have triggered the guards and wards trap but have not yet entered the conjury (S32), Solom Ned’razak is here, powered-up and ready to fight if necessary. He does not attack immediately, however, because he would prefer to learn the reason for the intrusion and see whether he can use the PCs for his own purposes (see Tactics, below).

Solom is a middle-aged drow with a fine fashion sense and an air of hedonism. He is ruggedly handsome, though not especially muscular, and he wears a large gold hoop in his left ear. His garb consists of black trousers tucked into knee-high black leather boots, and a billowing purple shirt unbuttoned halfway down. A fine gold headband (his headband of intellect) holds his long white hair back from his face, and the sleeves of his shirt are tucked into elaborate gold bracers (his bracers of armor). A fine black cloak (his cloak of charisma) completes the ensemble. He smells of perfume and incense, particularly sandalwood.

Tactics: If given an opportunity to talk to the characters, Solom takes it. He has no love for the theocratic rulers of Szith Morcane—either the deposed clerics of Lolth or the new clerics of Kiaransalee—and he harbors dreams of establishing a magocracy similar to that in the distant drow city of Shammath, with himself at its head. If the characters show the potential to remove the clerics from power, he might offer his assistance—and a promise to halt the raids against the surface that drew the characters here in the first place—if they help put him into power.

S35. Archmage’s Chamber (EL 16 or 0)

This richly appointed room has an air of decadent luxury. A gigantic bed draped with soft silks and velvets fills one corner of the chamber. A low dresser next to the bed holds a smoldering brazier that sends thick smoke with a heavy odor of sandalwood into the air. A plush divan smothered with pillows stands against another wall, and on the floor beside it sits a short stack of books.

In stark contrast to the austerity he forces upon his students (and unbeknownst to them, since they are not permitted in this chamber), the archmage of Szith Morcane lives in comfortable luxury, saturating his senses with soft fabrics and heady incense.

Creatures: If the characters did not trigger either the guards and wards trap or the alarm in S32, they might surprise Solom Ned’razak here in his private chambers. If so, they find him draped across the divan with a book on his lap.

Solom Ned’razak, Archmage of Szith Morcane: hp 55; see page 138.

Treasure: The four books that lie beside the archmage’s couch represent the current thrust of his reading: an investigation into the historical precedents for current events in the Underdark, specifically Lolth’s silence. The books are a history of Maerimydra, a similar history of Menzoberranzan, a treatise on the worship of Lolth and her nature, and a planar tome on the Demonweb Pits, the Outer Plane where the drow pantheon resides. Each book weighs 3 pounds and could be sold for about 20 gp to someone with an interest in its topic.

A small secret panel in one wall (Search DC 20) conceals a niche where the archmage keeps his coinage and monetary wealth. The panel is protected by a fire trap spell.

Fire Trap: CR 5; 5-ft. radius (1d4+16 fire); Reflex DC 20 half, Search DC 29, Disable Device DC 29.

Within the niche are 55 pp, 40 gp, 125 sp, and a pair of rich purple corundums worth 400 gp apiece.

S36. Library

The walls here are lined with shelves. Books and scrolls spill over every available shelf surface in an apparently disorganized jumble. An aroma of cedar, combined with the faint odor of dry paper, fills the room.

This is Solom Ned’razak’s library, an extensive collection that covers much ground in the archmage’s areas of expertise, including arcana, history, Underdark local, the planes, and religion (particularly drow religion). He keeps his spellbooks scattered over different shelves to prevent a student or other interloper from easily stealing them all.

Treasure: The archmage’s library is quite extensive and fairly valuable. A character using the entire library for reference gains a +2 circumstance bonus on Knowledge (arcana) or Knowledge (Underdark local) checks, since those are the clear strengths of the collection. Characters hoping to loot the library and sell the books must contend with their bulk and weight. Each of the sixty books weighs 3 pounds and fetches a price of 3d6 gp.
In addition to the mundane books, Solom’s three spellbooks and his Bocobb’s blessed book are on the shelves. All four books are protected with fire trap spells (see below), and each bears a Nystul’s undetectable aura to keep it from being easily located with a detect magic spell. Solom renews these spells every fifteen days. One spellbook holds all the archmage’s cantrips and 1st- and 2nd-level spells (with twelve pages to spare), another holds all his 3rd-level spells plus enervation and ice storm (with twelve pages to spare), and the third holds all his 4th-level spells except enervation and ice storm (with four pages to spare). The Bocobb’s blessed book holds all his spells from 5th to 8th level (with room for eleven more spells).

Trap: Each spellbook is warded with a fire trap.

Fire Trap: CR 1; 5-ft. radius (1d4+16 fire); Reflex DC 20 half; Search DC 29; Disable Device DC 29.

PART I

House Morcane Level

Once the center of power for House Morcane—the family of Lolth-worshipping drow who ruled Sixth Morcane until recently—this level is now nearly deserted. The followers of Kiaransalee who have usurped power live here, but they hardly fill the space left vacant after they slaughtered the Lolthites. Many of the clerics who died in the coup remain here as quth-marens, while others inhabit different areas of the outpost. Like the guards on the Barracks level, the drow on this level actively respond to reports of intruders (see the “Intruder Alert” sidebar on page 20 for details of the guards’ alarm system). The creatures on this level do not move to other levels when an alarm is sounded; instead, they focus on protecting their leader, Dorina T’sarran.

If the characters reach this level without raising an alarm elsewhere in the complex, every creature they encounter here attempts to sound the alert on this level. Each inhabited area’s description includes information on how its residents try to spread word of the danger. Once the alarm is raised, all the inhabitants move into theirAlerted positions in 5 rounds.

Persistent Spell Effects: The entire House Morcane level is affected by two spells with lasting effects: forbiddance and unhallow. Dorina T’sarran (see page 139) cast both spells.

The forbiddance effect means that each character whose alignment is not chaotic evil must make a successful Will save (DC 21) to enter the House Morcane level. Any character who fails the saving throw is hedged out and takes damage: 3d6 points of damage for a chaotic good, chaotic neutral, lawful evil, or neutral evil character, or 6d6 points of damage for a character of any other alignment. In addition, the area is sealed off from all planar travel (including dimension door, teleport, plane shifting, astral travel, ethereal travel, and all summoning spells) that would bring creatures into the level. The unhallow spell has several effects. Every creature within the House Morcane level gets a +2 deflection bonus to AC and a +2 resistance bonus on saves against attacks made by good creatures. The spell also wards against possession or mental control. Subjects are likewise protected against bodily contact by summoned or conjured creatures, except for evil outsiders and elementals. Each turning check made to turn undead takes a –4 profane penalty, and each one made to rebuke undead gains a +4 profane bonus. Finally, an invisibility purge effect fills the entire level as part of the unhallow spell. Anything invisible becomes visible while in the area.

S37. House Morcane Entrance (EL Variable)

Dorina’s forbiddance spell (see above) is in effect when the characters attempt to enter this level.

A yawning hole in the chasm wall opens into a well-crafted room with smooth walls and floor. The far portion of this chamber curves in an octagonal shape. Two passageways lead out of the room through crafted archways, and a narrow tunnel seems to form an exit through the ceiling. A ladder that strongly resembles a spiderweb leads up to the tunnel mouth.

The spiderweb ladder leads up to S46 through a very narrow tunnel, which rises steeply for 10 feet, then ascends more gradually toward the fane above. The tunnel is only 3 feet in diameter, so Medium-size characters must either crawl up the ladder the entire way (on hands and knees for much of the distance) or fly headfirst along the tunnel. A Large creature must make an Escape Artist check (DC 30) to reach the fane. The ladder is trapped (see below).

Unaware Creatures (EL 11): Four quth-marens guard the entrance to the T’sarran domain. They embody both the new power in charge of the drow outpost and the fate of those who came before.

- Quth-Maren (4): hp 49, 70, 64, 64; see Appendix 1.

Unaware Tactics: If the characters enter this level without having previously alerted the inhabitants, two of the quth-marens flee the room immediately, moving at top speed out of the room through opposite doors. Each one is trying to reach Dorina T’sarran to alert her,
the Trouble with Forbiddance

The forbiddance spell is an excellent defense for an NPC spellcaster who wants to keep the wrong sort of people out of a temple or sanctuary, but it presents a serious problem in play because it divides the party. Some characters can pass through it, and others will fail their saving throws and be unable to accompany their companions. Fortunately, there's a way around this. Forbiddance, like most other spells, can be dispelled, though it takes a character of equal or higher level than the creator of the forbiddance to do so. This spell was cast by Dorina T'sarran, an 11th-level cleric, so a dispel magic spell cast by a character of at least 11th level defeats the forbiddance with a dispel check result of 22 or better. Of course, characters can cast multiple dispel-magic spells until they succeed, as long as the caster is of equal or higher level than the creator of the forbiddance.

You may need to drop a hint or two regarding this tactic if your players become stuck here. This same spell is also used later in the adventure by a much more powerful cleric (see Castle Maerimydra, in Part 3), but the characters need to use a different tactic to bypass that one.
S40. Guard Barracks

Three wooden coffins lie in state on the floor of this room. Behind them stands a row of counters and cupboards that has obviously been well ransacked. Some of its doors hang open; others have been broken off. There are cuts in the countertops, and most of the shelves have been pulled out.

When the T'sarran drow took over Sixth Morcane, they hurled the guards’ bunks, as well as the table at which they used to sit, into the chasm. Then they tore apart the cupboards and set up these coffins as resting places for the three guards who became vampires (the two posted in S39 plus the one in S41).

If reduced to 0 hp, the vampire noble guards flee to their coffins in gaseous form.

S41. Makeshift Temple (EL 13)

Enormous, lurid tapestries featuring grisly deaths and walking corpses line most of the walls of this large room. Near one wall stands a massive stone block draped with black silk and adorned with silver candelabras, silver bowls, and a silver-handled dagger.

This room used to be the audience chamber for House Morcane, but it has now been converted into a shrine to Kiaransalee. The drow and associates of House T'sarran now gather here to worship their dread goddess.

Creatures: The drow clerics of Kiaransalee actually spend most of their time in their own quarters (S42 and S44), leaving the shrine in the care of three vampiric creatures: a drow noble guard and two drider vampires.

The vampire noble guard, like its fellows in S39, wears no livery over his armor and serves Dorina T'sarran only because she created him. He wears a mithral shirt and carries a large steel shield and a rapier. Drider vampires are described in Appendix 1. These two are clerics, and their web nests (to which they must retreat if reduced to 0 hp) are located on the ceiling in the northwest and northeast corners of the room.

Cleric Spells Prepared: (5/5/5/5; save DC 14 + spell level): 0—detect magic, guidance, read magic, resistance, virtue; 1st—bale, bless, divine favor, obscuring mist, shield of faith*; 2nd—bull's strength, death knell, desecrate*, hold person, resist elements; 3rd—bestow curse, deeper darkness, invisibility purge, magic circle against good*.

*Domain spell. Domains: Evil (cast evil spells at +1 caster level), Retribution (strike of vengeance).

Vampire Noble Guard: hp 45; see page 138.

Treasure: The silver items on the altar are somewhat valuable. Each of the three silver candleholders is worth 200 gp, weighs 1 pound, and can hold eight candles. Each of the small bowls is worth 50 gp and weighs 1 pound, and the silver-handled dagger is worth 25 gp and weighs 1 pound.

S42. Daughters' Suite (EL 14)

This text describes only what is visible from the doorway, which is not much.

The door leads into a short hallway. Its only features are three archways leading out.

Read this text if the characters look into S42a or S42b.

Inside the archway is a well-furnished bedroom with a comfortable-looking bed, a bureau with a mirror, and what looks like an altar with an unlit brazier atop it.

Read this text if the characters look into S42c.

what the drow know

The drow on this level know more than any other drow in Sixth Morcane about what has happened recently, both here and in Maerimydra. If captured or charmed, they can provide a good deal of useful information. The details are likely to be more accurate if the informant is charmed. Captured drow lie to the greatest extent that they can get away with, or they simply keep silent if they are aware of some magical effect that would reveal the truth—for example, if they are within a zone of truth.

The drow of the T'sarran family (including Dorina in S44, Zedar in S43, and Velasta and Velina in S42) know everything in the Adventure Background. They do not discuss Irae T'sarran's plans with each other, nor do they share this information with the characters, even if charmed. Other spells might be able to wrest this information from the minds of Zedar, Velasta, or Velina, but the undead Dorina is immune to all such spells.

The vampire noble guards in S39 and S41 know nothing about the events in Maerimydra, but they know all about what has happened in Sixth Morcane. They are completely immune to mind-affecting spells just as she is.

Some other drow in Sixth Morcane came from Maerimydra, including the officers in S7 and a majority of the sentries on the Barracks level (enough to maintain loyalty to the officers among the troops). These drow all helped in the slaughter of the Lolthites and participated in the defense of Maerimydra before fleeing for their lives. They are not aware of Irae T'sarran's specific actions or plans, though they have heard their new leaders talk of a Great Day of Vengeance that is coming soon.

One of the most useful pieces of information a charmed drow can provide is a decent and accurate description of a locale within Maerimydra, which could theoretically allow characters to use teleport or teleport without error to reach the city. Any captured drow provides a false description, causing teleport spells to fail or malfunction (see Reaching Maerimydra Through Magic).
This bedroom is obviously deserted, and its furnishings look as though they have been intentionally ruined, though not utterly destroyed. The mattress on the bed has been ripped open, and the sheets lie on the floor, torn into rags. The mirror above the large bureau is broken, and the drawer handles have been snapped off.

This suite formerly housed the three lesser priestesses of House Morcane—the daughters of Alisannara. Dorina Tsarran, herself childless except for her vampiric spawn, has turned this room over to her two nieces, both of whom are clerics of Kiaransalee. The two women are twins and fierce rivals, so the largest of the three bedrooms remains vacant because the twins could not agree on which of them should have it.

Creatures: The two nieces of Dorina Tsarran, Velasta and Velina Tsarran, are identical twins and implacable enemies. Both are round-faced (by elven standards) and solidly built, and their manner is alternately imperious and charming. Both wear voluminous black cloaks over their dark-colored elven chain and display Kiaransalee’s holy symbol (a feminine drow hand with a silver ring on each finger) prominently around their necks.

Each of the nieces has two quth-maren bodyguards with her at all times.

Velasta and Velina, Tsarran Nieces (2): hp 70, 44; see page 139.

Quth-Maren (4): hp 78, 73, 50, 63; see Appendix 1.

Because of the mutual hatred the nieces bear one another, each is slow to respond to sounds of trouble from the other chamber, waiting 2d4 rounds before investigating a fight or other commotion. If either one can “accidentally” harm the other while attacking the characters (by catching her sister in the area of a flame strike, for example) she does so with little hesitation and no regret.

Treasure: Velasta, the occupant of S42a, has collected a fair amount of loot from the other portions of the complex, generally by commanding quth-maren to lead her to the caches they owned in life. Beneath her bed is a heavy trunk containing a layer of clothing and small personal belongings atop three sacks. In total, the sacks hold 14 pp, 337 gp, 680 sp, and a wooden case containing a set of thirty-two beautiful gold chessmen worth 550 gp collectively, or 10 gp apiece. Velina spent considerable time in the nearby Deep Wastes by order of her aunt, so she missed the chance to match her sister’s pillaging—a fact that only adds to the consuming hatred she feels for her twin.

Development: In Part 2 of the adventure, Velasta and Velina may return as revenants to exact revenge on the characters. Take notes on this encounter, including spells and tactics used by the characters, so that the revenants can adapt their tactics to suit the techniques used by their foes in this battle.

S43. PATRON’S QUARTERS (EL 14)

This large room is lavishly furnished. Fine leather couches are placed tastefully, golden lamps hang from the ceiling, and majestic tapestries of purple and gold decorate the walls. Several large armoires decorated with gold filigree stand along the walls.

Once the home of the most favored male of House Morcane, this room now has a new resident from House Tsarran. When Zedarr Tsarran moved in here, he decided to keep the furnishings of its previous occupant.

Creatures: Zedarr Tsarran, Dorina’s brother, now occupies this chamber, along with his cohort, a displacer beast known simply as Ripper. Zedarr is a blackguard and an unholy champion of Kiaransalee who embodies her doctrine of disproportional retribution (“answer any slight a thousandfold”). He bears an eternal grudge against the people of the Dales because their rangers once captured him during a raid on the surface. He escaped, of course, and has since killed every relative of the men who captured him. Nevertheless, his thirst for retribution still consumes him, and he is one of the main reasons the drow of Szith Morcane have resumed their raids upon the surface.

Zedarr is a terrifying figure, imposing in his black full plate armor despite his average drow stature. He wields a dire flail, and in combat he keeps both ends whirling too fast for the eye to see. His face is heavily scarred from burns he suffered while escaping from the Dales rangers, and as a result his dark gray skin is mottled with pink marks. Most enemies, however, never see his face, since he rarely lifts his visor (especially in combat).

Ripper is a huge displacer beast of fiendish descent. Unlike most displacer beasts, it stands as big as a dire tiger and has rust-red fur. The creature attacks anyone entering the room, fighting preferentially from the eastern corner of the chamber so that its master can move in from the western alcove and flank their common foes.

Ripper: hp 108; see page 139.

Tactics: Zedarr is resting on the bed in the western alcove when the characters enter. When he hears Ripper attack, he prepares to rush out and flank any enemy who is fighting the displacer beast, hoping to use his sneak attack. Zedarr leaps into any combat with a fierce joy, looking for opportunities to use his Sunder feat on enemies’ weapons if he can’t sneak attack his foes. If Zedarr drops to 30 hit points or below, he uses darkness to cover a dash for the chamber’s door. He knows the layout of the room well and can navigate surprisingly well without being able to see.

Treasure: Many of the furnishings in this room are valuable, but they’re exceedingly large and bulky. Each of the two leath worth 220 gp; the bed, mattress excluded, weighs 600 pounds and is worth 470 gp. Between them, the armoires hold more than a dozen ensembles of drow aristocratic finery. Each outfit weighs 5 pounds and is worth 20 gp but is covered with sinister spider designs. Each of the two gold lamps suspended from the ceiling is worth 170 gp and weighs 25 pounds.

S44. Matron Mother's Quarters (EL 14)
The door to this room is warded with a greater glyph of warding that holds a flame strike spell. The glyph is triggered when any creature that does not worship Kiaransalee opens the door.

Flame Strike Glyph: CR 7; 10-foot-radius, 40-foot-high cylinder (11d6 points of fire/divine damage); Reflex DC 21 half; Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31

The ceiling of this octagonal room rises 30 feet off the ground, and a pillar in the center stands fully half that height. On the pillar rests a throne made of bones, with a gaunt drow woman draped casually across it. The walls of the room are covered with majestic dark tapestries, and several long tables of gleaming black wood stand along the walls.

The needs of the undead cleric who now rules Szith Morcane from this throne are rather different from those of the living cleric who once held sway here, so the new resident has modified the room to her benefit.

The pillar, throne, and gaunt drow are all a permanent image cast by Susztam Mar-Shinn, the head student of the Inverted Tower. They were created with the Shadow Weave, so they are difficult for Weave users to detect or dispel. A Weave user who casts detect magic must make a successful caster level check (DC 22) to successfully detect the permanent image as magical. A Weave user who tries to dispel the permanent image must succeed at a caster level check (DC 26) to do so. The saving throw to disbelieve the illusion has a DC of 25.

A secret door leads into room S45. A successful Search check (DC 20) reveals the round door, but not how to open it. A second successful Search check (DC 18) in the same area reveals one of the four trigger stones that must be depressed in order to open the door. One of these stones is placed in each of four locations around the door: at the top, bottom, right, and left edges. When all four stones are depressed, the door sinks 4 inches into the wall, then rolls off to the right.

Secret Stone Door: 4 in. thick, hardness 8; hp 60; AC 5; break DC 28; Search DC 20.

Creatures: Dorina T'sarran, daughter of Irae T'sarran and current ruler of Szith Morcane, spends most of her time in this room—in fact, she is usually within the illusionary pillar. Like the image in the permanent illusion, Dorina is a gaunt drow vampire with deep black skin and yellowish-white hair. She wears black elven chain and carries a heavy mace, which leaves her off hand free to make slam attacks and drain energy from her opponents. Her face is beautiful but angular, with something of a feral look about it. She snarls like a wild animal while fighting, revealing her sharp fangs and conveying an impression of being less coldly calculating and strategic than she actually is.

Tactics: Dorina trusts that the greater glyph of warding on the door and the permanent image will keep intruders busy long enough for her to properly prepare for combat. As soon as the greater glyph is triggered, she begins casting spells on herself, starting with true seeing, then divine power. After observing the spells the characters are using (particularly any they are hurling at her decoy image), she casts spell immunity to protect herself against two of their lower-level (4th-level or below) spells. If she has time, she uses banishment to get rid of any planar allies or summoned monsters the party has before joining battle with the characters themselves. She casts spells from within the illusionary pillar for as long as possible, trying not to reveal her true location. When she is forced to reveal herself or she realizes that one or more characters can see her (by way of true seeing or simply disbelieving the illusion), she uses her domination gaze and sets party members against each other as much as possible.

Treasure: Dorina does not care as much for wealth as she did when she was alive, but she still has an eye for objects of beauty. On one table stands a large weirwood lyre inlaid with mithral; it is a masterwork instrument worth 1,400 gp. (Dorina does not play, but she admires the workmanship.) A small jewelry case sitting on one of the tables along the wall contains a dragonbone comb worth 300 gp, a gold hairbrush worth 120 gp, a silver brooch bearing the emblem of House Morcane (actually a drow house insignia with shield, which Dorina refuses to wear because of its association with a house of Loth-worshippers), and a silk pouch holding a dozen agates (worth an average of 8 gp each).

Thrust through Dorina’s belt is an elegant bone scrollcase containing a letter from her mother Irae, written in Elven:

> Daughter:
> Our Dark Lady favors my efforts, and my research proceeds well. Within five tendays, perhaps six, all will be ready for the Day of Great Vengeance. The Spider Queen is dead; we have already brought low the Spider-kissers and seized our rightful place in the realms of the dark. Now the Day draws near when we shall avenge ourselves upon those of the day-blasted lands, too, and achieve that ultimate triumph denied us so long ago.
>
> While I prepare my Great Revenance, it falls to you to make ready the way. Hallow the surface-dwellers, hunt them in their woods and fields, and take the measure of their strength. Do not concern yourself with putting them on our guard; our Lady desires their blood, their fear, and their dreadful anticipation of our ultimate act of revenge. With each slaying we grow in her favor and sow the seeds of our coming victory.
>
> If they come against you in Szith Morcane in irresistible strength, slay as many as you can. Withdraw from the fight if you must, and bring Zedarr with you, but as for the rest—they are to stand and die for the glory of the White Banshee. The battle for Szith Morcane will come to nothing when our Great Revenance comes to pass. If anything, our final vengeance is made ever sweeter by each fleeting, false hope our enemies entertain before it falls upon them.
>
> Work great slaughter for our Lady’s dark glory, my daughter. Soon I will come to you from Maerimydra with such dark and terrible might that all Faerun will tremble before us.

Mother
Irac T’sarran dispatches summoned demons to carry messages back and forth to Dorina on a regular basis, and this letter is her latest missive.

S45. HOUSE MORCANE TREASURY

This room is unusual for this area in that its walls are plastered white and the floor is tiled with flagstones. A stone sepulcher covered in gorgeous, shining copper leaf stands in the middle of the chamber, and copper bands securely fasten the lid to the rest of the coffin. The lid is carved to resemble a beautiful drow woman. The room is otherwise bare.

It has been many years since the treasury of House Morcane was filled with goods taken in surface-world raids and tribute paid by Underdark neighbors. When Dorina T’sarran seized power, she sent what little treasure remained here back to Maerimydra for her mother’s use. Then the vampire cleric of Kiaransalar had her coffin moved in here and cast several spells to protect it, including one that prevents the copper leaf from growing green with age.

The coffin is very difficult to open because the lid is not meant to be removed. A close inspection (Search DC 15) of the copper-covered figure on the lid reveals that tiny holes have been drilled in the eyes, nostrils, and mouth. These passages are sufficient for Dorina to enter or leave her coffin in gaseous form. A well-hidden hole beneath one of the copper bands (Search DC 30) provides her with a second means of egress should someone block the holes in the sculpture’s face.

Trap (EL 7): Dorina has prepared a greater glyph of warding as a final defense of her coffin. If even one copper band is burst or parted (a necessary step toward removing the lid), the glyph surrounds the coffin at a distance of 3 feet with a blade barrier effect that lasts for 110 minutes. Any creature that makes its saving throw must leave the area of the blades, which means it must be on the other side of the barrier from the coffin. Dorina figures that this tactic may buy her enough time to recover from whatever damage forced her to retreat to her coffin.

Treasure: Dorina’s gear accounts for most of her treasure, but she keeps some additional personal wealth in her coffin. Two small wooden coffers within the capacious sepulcher contain a total of 490 pp, 375 gp, and 440 sp, as well as a scroll of inflict critical wounds and a wand of searing light with 12 charges left. (Dorina does not like this device, but she keeps it around in case she needs to discipline one of the other vampires in Szith Morcane.)

Her coffin also contains one very useful item that can help lead the characters into the next part of the adventure and guide them along their way. She has a map of the Deep Wastes that clearly shows both Szith Morcane and Maerimydra, as well as much of the territory in between. However, many important locations are not labeled, and branches in the pathway are not marked. Give the players the handout on page 6 of the map booklet when their characters discover this map. The map labels Shadowdale’s Twisted Tower as “Azmaer’s Folly,” after the last drow ruler of Shadowdale, whose incompetence (in the drow history) led to the human triumph in the dale. A successful Knowledge (history) check (DC 23) allows a character to recollect this bit of historical trivia.

FANE OF LOTH

The former temple to Lolth is completely vacant, inhabited by no living being and but one undead creature: the ghost of the former high priestess.

The fane is built to look like a gigantic spider. Within its walls, the priests and servants of Lolth used to perform their prayers and sacrifices. The forepart of the spider’s body was called the outer fane. This section was the public area open to all drow, araneas, and other worshipers of the Spider Queen. The spider’s abdomen, separated from the outer fane by a heavy iron gate, was known as the inner fane, off-limits to all but Lolth’s drow clerics (all of whom were female nobles of House Morcane). In this inner sanctuary, the clerics performed secret rites ranging from mere blood sacrifice to fouler ceremonies involving demons called from the Outer Planes.

S46. OUTER FANE

The pungent smell of decaying flesh fills the stale air, giving this great hall the aura of a battlefield—but without the croaking of ravens. Indeed, most of the corpses strewn about the floor and slumped against the twin rows of columns look as though they fell in battle, since their weapons are close at hand. The flesh of the corpses has begun melting to slime, allowing the bones to show through—a fact that suggests this battle was fought long ago.

The walls of the chamber are carved to resemble an enormous spider, as if this room were the inside of its front portion. At one end, an opening leads to some kind of platform where the spider’s mouth would be. At the other end of the room, a heavy iron gate hangs loose on its hinges, battered and bent. Eight tunnels leading down converge, four on a side, near the wall separating the two parts of the spider’s body.

Don’t Miss This Clue

After defeating the outpost of Szith Morcane, the players may feel that they have dealt with Daggerdale’s problem. In fact, their adventure has barely begun. Make sure the players understand that they’re not done with the drow yet. The letter in Dorina’s belt is intended to be a “can’t-miss” clue to spur the characters into continuing their investigation of the drow-beneath the Dalelands. Make sure you place this clue someplace where the player characters are sure to come across it. If Dorina manages to escape the heroes, have the letter stored in her coffin in S45, along with the map and her other belongings.
The odor of death in this room is vile. Any creature that fully enters the room must make a successful Fortitude save (DC 15) or become nauseated for 1d6+4 minutes. Nauseated creatures are unable to attack, cast spells, concentrate on spells, or do anything else requiring attention. The only action such a creature can take is a single move (or move-equivalent action) per turn. A delay poison or neutralize poison spell removes the effects from one creature.

Seventeen corpses lie about the room. A cursory examination reveals that all of them wear symbols of Lolth. Many wear the vestments of her clerics (black robes trimmed with dark red and purple, or purple or red robes trimmed with black for lesser priestesses); others wear simple holy symbols of wood or silver. Though followers of Kiaransalee certainly fell in the battle here, their bodies have been removed and either burned or animated as some form of undead.

Careful examination of the room (Search DC 10) reveals many areas where corpses apparently lay for a while, but have been removed. Dorina T'sarran has used some of these corpses to create zombies that now serve as shock troops on raids against the surface.

No valuable items—not even magic armor or weapons—remain on the corpses.

S47. SACRIFICIAL ALTAR (EL VARIABLE)

The platform at the front of the spider is clearly a sacrificial altar. It is surrounded by walls carved to look like the sharp, venomous fangs of a spider. A female drow corpse lies on the altar, staring vacantly toward the ceiling, a hand crossbow bolt still protruding upright from its neck.

The entire altar radiates a strong aura of necromantic magic and a lingering aura of evil (see Trap).

Trap (EL 10): Any living creature that touches the altar, willingly or unwillingly, suffers the effect of an energy drain spell. Any creature killed by this energy drain attack rises as a spectre as soon as its body loses contact with the altar.

- Energy Drain Spell: CR 10; 2d4 negative levels; Fortitude DC 23 negates; Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.
- Creature (EL 7): If the characters remove the body from the altar, the slain drow rises as a spectre and attacks.

S48. SHATTERED GATE (EL 8)

This heavy iron gate has clearly been bashed in. It hangs crookedly on its hinges, open in the middle. About 8 feet behind it is a curving wall adorned with a tattered tapestry. Drow figures are visible in the foreground of the tapestry, but the figure before which they are prostrating themselves has been almost completely defaced.

Though the gate has been broken, it still holds the magic trap that warded it before the recent coup. It is open wide enough for characters to pass through in single file without touching it, but any contact with the metal triggers the trap. If the players do not specifically state that they are avoiding contact with the broken gate, assume that there is a 50% chance that any character passing through happens to touch it and set off the trap.

- Trap: Any creature other than a female drow worshiper of...
Lolth who touches the gate triggers a summon monster VII spell that brings a bebilith to attack the characters.

Summon Monster VII Trap: CR 8; summons bebilith for 13 rounds; Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 32.

Bebilith: hp 102; see Monster Manual.

S49. Inner Fane (EL 14)

Two short, curving walls loosely define this area as a distinct section of the temple. Inside the curve of the far wall is a long platform that looks like it might be a sacrificial altar. A plush carpet covers the floor, and a number of cushions and pillows are strewn haphazardly around the area. A lingering stench of death remains here. Bloodstains and weapons are scattered about the floor, but there are no corpses. The air feels thick and unusually cold.

Though many clerics died in this chamber, their killers animated the bodies immediately. Most of the fallen now serve their new masters as quth-marens. A scattering of ash in front of the altar is the only physical remnant of the former high priestess, who was consumed by a destruction spell.

Creatures: The ghost of Szith Morcane’s high priestess remains in the inner fane as a keening spirit (see Appendix 1). Its manifestation looks like the hazy outline of the living cleric—a stern drow woman of slight proportions, dressed in a black robe trimmed with purple and burgundy.

Alisannara’s spirit manifests when any character comes within 10 feet of the altar, and its first action is to use its keening. The only way to destroy Alisannara permanently is to cast desecrate on the altar, either before or after reducing the keening spirit to 0 hit points. If the altar is not so treated, the spirit’s rejuvenation power is likely to bring it back.

S50. Vestry

Behind the wall that forms the back of the inner temple, a large alcove holds clerical vestments and temple fixtures, all of which bear the spider symbol of Lolth. A pile of cinders and ashes on the floor seems to indicate that any other items stored here have been burned.

This vestry also held a small collection of sacred texts, which the T’sarran drow burned when they seized control. A successful Search check (DC 18) allows a character to find tiny scraps of charred paper that indicate the nature of the documents. Six complete sets of clerical vestments hang from pegs on the wall. Any character wearing these vestments in conjunction with a Disguise attempt receives a +2 circumstance bonus on his or her Disguise checks. Such a disguise does not, however, grant the wearer a warm reception in either Szith Morcane or Maerimydra.

Treasure: Gold adorns all the temple fixtures here. Each large brazier is worth 110 gp and weighs 160 pounds, each small brazier is worth 70 gp and weighs 60 pounds, each candleholder is worth 35 gp and weighs 2 pounds, and each censer is worth 1 gp and weighs 4 pounds. Additionally, there is a small stash of incense worth 35 gp that weighs 4 pounds. All of these items feature spider motifs, so the followers of Kiaransalee consider them worthless. The rest of the valuable trappings of this temple have been removed to Maerimydra.
In Part 1, the characters set out to stop the drow of Szith Morcane from raiding the surface. During their explorations, they certainly discovered that the cult of Lolth in Szith Morcane had been exterminated and replaced by a cult of Kiaransalee. The party may also have discovered a tunnel leading off toward Maerimydra and a map showing the route between that city and Szith Morcane. Self-motivated characters probably do not need any further encouragement to explore this situation and head toward Maerimydra via the underground tunnel.

Other groups, however, may need a nudge in that direction. How you deliver that nudge depends in large part on the hooks you used to draw the characters into the adventure in the first place. Certainly, if a higher authority such as Randal Morn asked the characters to stop the raids, that same authority might ask them to continue their investigations. Randal Morn, the Harpers, or Lord Mourngrym Amcathra of Shadowdale would all be rightly concerned to learn of such a major development in the Underdark as the fall of a drow city. With drow already active in Cormanthor and the recent raids in Daggerdale, surface dwellers can no longer afford to ignore the affairs of the drow.

Depending on how the characters have progressed on the timeline of the adventure, the Weave disruptions described in Part 3: Maerimydra may by now have expanded beyond the city’s cavern. If so, the characters notice the phenomenon the first time they attempt to cast one of the hindered spells during their travels through the Deep Wastes. Consult the timeline in the Introduction to determine how far the Weave disruptions have spread.

The most direct route from Szith Morcane to Maerimydra is along the tunnel leading out from the Commoners’ level (S19). This route is not by any means the easiest, since it involves a 150-mile journey through the Underdark and a number of hazards. If the characters return to the surface after finishing their work in Szith Morcane, they might decide to look for another entrance into Maerimydra from the surface, or they might use magic to get there directly.

The Way to Maerimydra

Maerimydra lies roughly 20 miles south of Ashabenford in Mistledale, and several miles below it. Characters can make use of related Knowledge skills (geography or local, either Dalelands or Underdark) to learn a bit about Maerimydra and how they might access it. Heroes without such skills might find it useful to employ a local sage to assist them, or to attempt spells such as contact other plane, legend lore, or vision.

A successful check (DC 20) with any of the specific Knowledge skills mentioned above unearths a connection between Maerimydra and the drow who ruled Shadowdale up until four hundred years ago. Drow from Maerimydra have been encountered in the tunnels under Old Skull in Shadowdale as recently as 1367 DR, and it seems clear that underground connections exist between Old Skull and Maerimydra. The lord of Shadowdale sealed off the Underdark connections under Old Skull after the incidents of 1367 DR, but other entrances to this complex of caverns and tunnels are thought to exist somewhere near the Elven Court in Cormanthor and beneath the hill of Hap in Battledale. At the time of the most recent encounters with drow near Shadowdale, the dark elves were buying or capturing dwarven slaves in the Moonsea region and ferrying them along a subterranean river to the caverns under Old Skull. This fact suggests that there may be a surface connection somewhere in the Moonsea region, though no record exists of its location.
(Even the most phenomenal Knowledge check result can't reveal that the drow purchased the dwarven slaves from duergar in the Underdark near Zhentil Keep. The duergar, in turn, had tunnels connecting their domain to the sewers under the keep.)

In summary, there are exactly four entrances into the Underdark in the vicinity of Maerimydra: one beneath the Dor-drien Crypts, one near the Elven Court, one under Hap Hill in Batteleale, and one in the sewers of Zhentil Keep. Because it involves passing through both Zhentil Keep and a thriving duergar community, the fourth option may be more of an adventure than the heroes are looking for at the moment. If you wish to customize this adventure by adding your own entrances, you could easily create dungeons beneath Old Skull or Hap Hill.

Magical Transport

A number of spells can help the characters reach Maerimydra, either through an underground route or more directly. Find the path can lead the characters from Szith Morcane to Maerimydra, and in fact use of this spell may become necessary along the way in order to choose the right tunnel at an intersection. If this spell is cast on the surface, it leads the caster to the Szith Morcane entrance (or the Hap Hill or Shadowdale entrance, if you've prepared for one of those options), and into the Deep Wastes from there.

Teleport spells might work, if a character gets a reliable description of the city by some means—for example, by casting charm person on a drow in Szith Morcane or by exhaustively researching the city and making a successful Knowledge (Underdark local) check (DC 30). Using teleportation magic in the Underdark does carry certain risks, particularly for someone trying to travel more than 1 mile (see Faerzress in the Introduction). Also, Castle Maerimydra is protected by a forbiddance spell that prevents teleportation into it (see Castle Maerimydra).

Spells such as phantom steed, shadow walk, or wind walk can make the Underdark trek faster and possibly bypass some of its dangers. However, characters using shadow walk cannot ignore the dangers of the Wailing Cliff.

Trekking through the Deep Wastes

The journey from Szith Morcane to Maerimydra is a long overland trek, even though it takes place entirely underground. Underdark terrain is equivalent to trackless barren/badlands terrain, since the course is seldom straight or unbroken for long. Characters move at half their normal overland speed along this route (see Chapter 9 of the Player's Handbook for details). The Deep Wastes are well and truly within the Underdark, so the area is subject to the full effects of faerzress (see the Introduction).

The trek can be divided into seven segments, each one ending at either an encounter area or a fork in the path. The route forks twice; each time one branch leads onward toward Maerimydra and the other leads several miles in the wrong direction before ending in a monster's lair. The segments are as follows, with alternate incorrect routes given parenthetically.

- From Szith Morcane to the first fork: 17.5 miles.
- From the first fork to the Lake of Shadows: 10 miles (or from the first fork to the Naga Crawls: 35 miles).
- Across the Lake of Shadows: 17.5 miles.
- From the Lake of Shadows to the Wailing Cliff: 18 miles.
- From the Wailing Cliff to the second fork: 15 miles.
- From the second fork to Vournoth's Mire: 37 miles (or from the second fork to the Yrthak Cavern: 40 miles).
- From Vournoth's Mire to Maerimydra: 40 miles.

This chapter details each leg of the journey and each encounter area, as well as general features of the caverns and random encounters with wandering creatures in the Deep Wastes.

Maps: Page 7 of the map booklet shows the Deep Wastes as a whole at a large scale. The maps on pages 8 through 10 show the three major encounter areas in the Deep Wastes: the Lake of Shadows, the Wailing Cliff, and Vournoth's Mire.

Deep Wastes Features

Most areas of the Deep Wastes are either natural Underdark caverns or long, winding tunnels. At any given time, there is a 50% chance that the characters are passing through a cavern and a 50% chance that they are following a tunnel. The typical cavern is 70 to 160 (1d10+6 × 10) feet long and 20 to 50 (1d4+1 × 10) feet wide. The typical tunnel is 100 to 1,000 (1d10 × 100) feet long and 5 to 20 (1d4) feet wide. Streams and lakes are very common, and travelers must occasionally wade through icy-cold water for hundreds of feet at a stretch.

Passages and caverns in the Deep Wastes share the features described below, unless noted otherwise in a specific area description.

Walls: Walls, for the most part, are unworked stone.

- Unworked Stone Walls: Minimum 5 feet thick, hardness 8, hp 900 per 5 feet of thickness; AC 3; break DC 65; Climb DC 20.

Floors: Floors in the Deep Wastes are natural stone. Running and charging are impossible on these surfaces, but no Climb checks are normally required to navigate them. In certain locations (specified in the area descriptions), the floor may be uneven enough to require Climb checks for moving from one elevation to another. Stalagmites are common throughout these caverns.

Ceilings: Ceilings in the Deep Wastes are natural unworked stone and range from 15 to 20 feet high—higher in certain areas, as noted in the area descriptions. Stalactites are common, just as stalagmites on the floors are.

Random Encounters

Each day that the characters spend journeying through the Deep Wastes, roll twice for a random encounter—one in the morning and one in the evening. There is a 20% chance of encountering a wandering creature or group. If an encounter occurs, roll d% on the chart below to determine the monster.

*Unique encounter. Do not use that same encounter again if the characters kill all the creatures involved in it.

In general, encounters such as the ones described below should be handled as noted in Encounter Distance in Chapter 3 of the Dungeon Master’s Guide. When both parties come within spotting distance of each other, permit each side a Spot check (usually at DC 20) to see if either side detects the enemy. If all members of both groups miss this first check, they all spot each other at half the encounter distance.

HALF-DRAGON (EL 15)

The characters encounter a drow half-dragon named Shumath Daerindra who haunts these tunnels. Shumath is both naturally inquisitive and supremely confident in his strength, so he opens the encounter with conversation rather than attacking. Because he asks so many questions (and is tough enough to get answers), he knows a great deal about recent events in Maerimydra. He’s more interested in getting information from the characters than in giving it to them, but he happily repays useful or interesting news (such as the destruction of the drow outpost at Szith Morcane) in kind.

Encounter Distance: 40 feet.

Shumath Daerindra: hp 71; see page 140.

Tactics: If the characters initiate combat, Shumath begins by casting haste and improved invisibility on himself. Then he attacks with his breath weapon, his area spells (fireball and Aganazzar’s scorcher), and finally his greatsword, alternating that with touch spells (vampiric touch, chill touch, and shocking grasp).

INFERNAL RAIDERS (EL 13)

The characters are assaulted by a group of devils on a slaughter-filled joyride through the Material Plane.

Encounter Distance: 100 feet.

Cornugon Devil: hp 88; see Monster Manual.

Hamatula Devils (3): hp 50, 51, 52; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: The devils can see perfectly in darkness—almost certainly better than the characters can even with light.
sources or darkvision. As soon as they have a clear line of sight and effect to the characters, they launch offensive spell effects from the darkness. The cornugon uses a fireball, one hamatula uses order’s wrath, and another uses unholy blight. (The two have a longstanding game to see which one can deal more damage with its favorite spell. Since these devils entered the Underdark, the one using order’s wrath is far ahead.) The third hamatula uses teleport without error to get behind the characters and cut off their retreat. After this initial volley, the devils close quickly to engage the characters in the melee they so thoroughly enjoy.

INQUISITION (EL 12)

A group of mind flayers is wandering this portion of the Underdark with two purposes. First, they want to determine the state of affairs in and around Maerimydra and whether an invasion of mind flayers from Ch’Chitl might be in order. Second, they are hunting for food and sport.

Encounter Distance: 60 feet.

Mind Flayers (4): hp 69 (with bracers of health +2), 56, 47, 34; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: If the mind flayers spot the party approaching (generally, this would occur if the party was carrying a bright light), they hide along the cavern or tunnel walls and prepare an ambush. They use their mind blast ability first, then suggestion on characters who aren’t stunned. They use plan shift to flee if combat goes against them.

Treasure: The mind flayers carry belt pouches containing the gems they use for trade. In total, they have the following gems: crowns of silver worth 5 gp, 8 gp, 15 gp, 15 gp, 10 gp, 10 gp, 10 gp, 10 gp, 10 gp, and 11 gp; hydrophanes worth 20 gp and 40 gp; waterstars worth 60 gp, 80 gp, and 100 gp; a violet garnet worth 500 gp; and red tears worth 800 gp, 900 gp, and 1,700 gp. In addition, two different mind flayers each carry a potion of invisibility and a potion of spider climb. The group leader carries (but does not use) a +1 dagger, wears bracers of health +2, and has 200 pp in its pouch.

INVAKER PARTY (EL 13)

Use this encounter only between the Wailing Cliff and Maerimydra, not earlier in the trek.

Unlike Irae T’sarran, whose goal is gaining and solidifying control over Maerimydra, Kurgoth Hellsspawn, the conqueror of the drow city, is more interested in finding the next target for his army. Most of his forces are spread throughout the nearby Underdark, but there are two areas of concentra-

REVENANTS (EL 16)

Kiaransalee is not known as the Revenancer for nothing. She frequently rewards her followers by raising them as revenants after their deaths. Such revenants may rise spontaneously from drow the player characters killed in Szith Morcane. No corpse is necessary for a revenant to appear.

Creatures: This encounter assumes that the revenants are Velasta and Velina T’sarran (from S42 in Szith Morcane) and the two officers (from S7 in Szith Morcane). This group results in an EL 15–16 encounter. The statistics presented on page 140 for these revenants assume that the characters removed all useful gear from the drow they killed and that the revenants were able to scavenge only a chain shirt and dagger apiece to re-equip. Adjust the statistics accordingly if the revenants still possess any of their magic items. Because they always know how close their killers are, they are not surprised and begin battle with key enhancing spells in place. These spells have been marked off from the clerics’ spell lists and calculated into the statistics given.

If you wish, you can choose other drow the characters have killed as base creatures for the revenants, but undead such as Dorina T’sarran or Alisannara Morcane can’t return again this way. If the characters dealt unfairly with any drow, or killed a drow in a treacherous fashion, he or she would be a good candidate for revenance. Apply the revenant template (presented in Appendix 1) to these other drow as you see fit, but try to keep the Encounter Level in the 15–16 range. Revenants are most effective when facing their killers, so round up when calculating EL.

The first leg of the journey from Szith Morcane is about 16 miles. Depending on the speed of the party, it takes anywhere from one day to almost three. Sometime on the second or third day of travel from Szith Morcane, the characters reach the first fork.

The branch to the west leads to the Naga Crawls; the branch to the east leads to the Lake of Shadows. The 37-mile journey to the Naga Crawls takes between three and six days, while the 10-mile trip to the Lake of Shadows lasts anywhere from 3 hours to a day and a half. The Naga Crawls area is a dead end; characters who go there must backtrack to the fork before they can continue on to the Lake of Shadows.

Naga Crawls

This is the lair of a trio of spirit nagas. They do not involve themselves with either the drow of Szith Morcane or the giants and kuo-toas of the Lake of Shadows. Refer to page 7 of the map booklet for this location.

N1. LAIR ENTRANCE (EL 8)

The tunnel comes to an end in a small cavern that shows no signs of habitation. Cold water showers down from a hole in the ceiling, puddles below it, and then flows off to a crevice in the south wall where it vanishes into the rock. A rusty iron ladder is propped up in the hole to give access to whatever lies above. There is a small side cavern to the north.

The ceiling here is only about 8 feet above the floor. The hole is the entrance to the nagas’ lair. The nagas are long enough to coil under the entrance and crawl up into the hole while avoiding the trap trigger (see below), but they often use fly to get up. The shower of water from above is frightfully cold, but it does not make the ascent difficult or dangerous.

Trap: The lair entrance is protected with a trap that makes intruders easier targets for the nagas’ Enchantment spells by sapping their Wisdom. Stepping on the second rung of the ladder releases a poisonous mist from hidden jets in the ladder itself. The mist fills the cavern in 1 round, but since it is heavier than air, it does not rise into the cavern above.

Insanity Mist Vapor Trap: CR 8; insanity mist poison, 1d4 Wis/2d6 Wis; Fortitude DC 15 negates; Search DC 25; Disable Device DC 20.

N2. DEAD END

This side cavern seems to be a dead end. A number of bones piled on the floor give that phrase new depths of meaning.

The nagas have piled a large number of bones here, most of which are from relatively weak Underdark creatures such as grimlocks, quaggots, and kuo-toas. Despite appearances, these creatures did not die in this area. The nagas bring their refuse here, both to keep their lair tidy and to warn off intruders who choose the wrong fork.

Szith Morcane Officer Revenants (2): hp 64, 57; see page 140.

Tactics: The revenants have complete and very vivid memories of their final battles against the player characters, so they adapt their tactics (possibly including the clerics’ spell selections) to best effect against the characters as they remember them.

Tsarran Scouts (EL 13)

While Irae Tsarran struggles to lay claim to Maerimydra’s ruins, she sends regular scouting patrols into the Underdark to keep an eye on movements and conditions in the surrounding area. Each of these patrols consists of a small undead horde (zombies animated from the fallen drow of the city), three rangers, and a cleric/ranger leading the patrol and controlling the zombies.

Encounter Distance: 60 feet.

Zombies (12): hp 12 each; see Monster Manual.

Drow Rangers (3): hp 43, 42, 38; see page 140.

Cleric Scout: hp 72; see page 141.

Tactics: As her first action, the cleric scout bolsters the zombies against a possible turning attempt. She then sends them forward into melee and casts flame strike to engulf as many of the characters as she can. The rangers lead off with their hand crossbows and poisoned bolts, closing to melee only after the zombies have fallen. If the combat turns against them, the drow flee, hoping to get back to Maerimydra and inform Irae Tsarran of the heroes’ presence in the Underdark.

Troglodyte Raiding Band (EL 14)

Latar, troglodyte cleric of Laogzed, leads two troglodyte barbarians, Skred and Theod, and a small group of regular troglodytes. This group is what’s left of a larger band that wreaked much mayhem. They’re keen on acquiring some booty before returning to their home settlement many miles from here.

Encounter Distance: 110 feet.

Skred and Theod: hp 115, 107; see page 141.

Latar: hp 78; see page 141.

Troglodytes (3): hp 13 each; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: Optimally, the troglodytes seek small or weak-looking parties. The barbarians use their tracking skills to find and follow likely targets. Latar is canny enough to insist that the group delay its attack until the targets have camped for the night and most of them are asleep.

Before initiating an attack, the cleric prepares by casting endurance and air walk on himself and the two barbarians, magic circle against law on Skred, magic circle against good on Theod, divine favor on himself, and deathwatch.

Just before the troglodytes attack, Latar casts bless. The following round, he casts silence on the area with the greatest concentration of PCs, then the barbarians drink their potions of haste, throw their javelins of lightning, and begin their rage. The barbarians enjoy fighting in melee. The cleric prefers to soften up the opposition by casting slay living and chaos hammer before engaging in physical combat. Because of the deathwatch, he can target fragile creatures and knows when his companions are in dire need of cure spells. If the fight goes poorly, he casts plane shift, taking his companions along if convenient.

This side cavern seems to be a dead end. A number of bones piled on the floor give that phrase new depths of meaning.

The nagas have piled a large number of bones here, most of which are from relatively weak Underdark creatures such as grimlocks, quaggots, and kuo-toas. Despite appearances, these creatures did not die in this area. The nagas bring their refuse here, both to keep their lair tidy and to warn off intruders who choose the wrong fork.
N3. UPPER CAVERN

The ladder ascends about 10 feet into a low, cramped cavern only 4 feet in height. A small, shallow rivulet of water no more than 2 feet wide and only inches deep winds down to the hole in the floor from a passageway leading to the south.

The low clearance in this cavern means that Medium-size characters cannot walk upright; they must stoop or crouch to move around. A crouching character is reduced to one-half normal speed and loses any Dexterity bonus to Armor Class.

N4. GIANT’S DEMISE

Lying across the stream is the enormous corpse of a stone giant. He could not have stood up in this room, or even crouched—he must have crawled into this place on his belly from some reason of his own. The corpse is in poor shape and seems to have been dead a long time. Great chunks of flesh have been stripped from the body in places, as if something has been feeding on it.

With some difficulty, characters can crawl around or over the corpse to continue toward the east. The body is the nagas’ latest meal, a hapless giant convinced by their suggestion spells to crawl up to his doom in their lair. The body is not dangerous to the characters, but it may be distracting.

N5. NAGA LAIR (EL 12)

A large, shallow pool of cold water lies in the mouth of a low-ceilinged cavern. A stream splashes down from a spring in the rock at the eastern end of the chamber, then trickles out to the west on the other side of the pool. The roof is no more than 4 feet above the floor, and in some places it is lower than that.

This room is home to three spirit nagas. Because they have very few guests in their lair, they are not particularly attentive, but they do notice any light or loud conversation in area N4 and come out to investigate. They also spot any characters splashing across the pool at the mouth of their lair. They can even detect invisible characters who move through the pool, since the displaced water marks their approach.

Creatures: The nagas are a malicious trio of murderous, deceitful, and hungry monsters. They’ve grown quite tired of stone giant meat, especially since it’s gone over a bit, and they would love to feast on fresher fare. A spirit naga looks like a giant snake banded in black and crimson, with a humanlike face. Its eyes are sickly yellow and have no visible pupils.

Spirit Nagas (3): hp 86, 84, 80; see Monster Manual.

Sorcerer Spells Known (6/7/7/7; save DC 13 + spell level):
0—detect magic, light, counterspell
1st—endure elements, feather fall, mage armor, magic missile, ray of enfeeblement
2nd—Aganazzar’s sorcehr, see invisibility, web
3rd—fly, suggestion.

Tactic: When the characters investigate the stone giant corpse or cross the pool, the nagas approach and confront them directly, hoping to charm one or more of them with a gaze attack. They subject characters who resist their gazes to repeated suggestion spells (“You’re very tired. Why don’t you put down that sword and go to sleep?” or “Your companions have been replaced by doppelgangers. Best slay them before they slay you!”). Finally, they resort to their less subtle spells (web, Aganazzar’s sorcerer, magic missile).

Treasure: The nagas’ treasure is piled in sacks along the eastern wall of the room. It amounts to 655 gp, 2,900 sp, and a bundle of ten sunrods. (The nagas prefer the dark, so they don’t use these.) In addition, under the stone giant’s crumpled body is his buckler: a +3 large steel shield.

Lake of Shadows

The Lake of Shadows is a large body of fresh water located beneath the Dagger Hills in the extreme northwest of Cormanthor. Its dark water is the domain of a kraken, which rules the lake as an iron-fisted tyrant. The kraken’s subjects include a small group of kuo-toas dwelling in the western portion of the lake and a brood of aboleths in the eastern portion. The characters do not encounter the aboleths unless they travel far out into the lake.

The Lake of Shadows is the home of the kuo-toas. They worship the kraken as a manifestation of Umberlee, and their leader is a half-fiend cleric/assassin called the Claw. They maintain a shrine on an island near the shore, where they live in uneasy proximity to a small tribe of stone giants.

The Flight from Maerimydra: When the drow fleeing Maerimydra came through the Lake of Shadows, they fought the kraken while hurrying the bulk of their party out of its reach, losing only a half-dozen of their number in the process. The kraken has since healed all the wounds the drow inflicted. The drow also fought the stone giants and killed several of them. The giants are still angry, so they attack any party that contains a drow unless that drow is obviously a prisoner.

Lower Caverns

The lower caverns are those areas that directly connect the tunnel from Szith Morcaine to the Lake of Shadows. The domain of the stone giants is directly above the lower caverns, and the giants keep guards posted here at A and B.

L1. CAVERN (EL 10–12)

The tunnel abruptly opens into a large, irregularly shaped cavern. Several natural stone columns make it hard to judge the exact size or extent of this chamber, but some openings are visible around the walls.

This is the entrance to the stone giants’ domain. A side cavern (labeled A) provides a watchpost for the giants to monitor creatures passing through the area.

Allow each character to make a Listen check (DC 12). Those who are successful hear the sounds of growling and laughter, both deep and guttural, apparently coming from... directly overhead. One of the stone giants in L4 is playfully wrestling with his pet dire bear.

Creatures: Two stone giants are on watch in the alcove cavern (A) at any given time. They stand guard near the entrances to the alcove with a ready supply of rocks to throw.

A stone giant stands about 12 feet tall and looks like a lean, muscular human. Its gray, smooth skin is completely hairless. It has gaunt facial features and deep-sunken black eyes. Stone giants are generally taciturn with strangers but playful among themselves. All the giants in this area speak only Giant and Undercommon, so the characters may need to use magic to make themselves understood.

Stone Giants (2): hp 118, 117; see *Monster Manual.

Tactics: Unless it appears that one or more unconfined drow are with the party, the stone giant sentries do not attack immediately—though it might seem as if they do, particularly if no one in the party speaks Undercommon. As soon as the characters enter the cavern (passing the southwestern entrance to the alcove), a boulder hurtles past them and shatters on the wall. An instant later, a rumbling voice calls out (in Undercommon), “I missed on purpose. What are you doing here?”

The stone giants despise the drow and warm quickly to the characters if the latter explain their mission in terms of opposition to the drow. Initially, the stone giants’ attitude is indifferent, but a successful Diplomacy check can change it to friendly (DC 15) or even helpful (DC 30). If the character making the check takes pains to explain the party’s hatred of the drow, he or she gains a +4 circumstance bonus on the check.

If the giants remain indifferent, they let the characters pass through to the lake but give them no advice, warnings, or directions. One of them does shout out a code word in Giant so the sentries in L3 will let the group pass. If the giants become friendly, they willingly point the characters toward Maerimydra and also warn them about the chuul, kraken, and kuo-toas in the area. Read the text below to the players:

“No tunnels circle the lake,” the giant rumbles. “From here you must sail, fly, or swim. A little more than 17 miles to the east, on the north wall of the lake cavern, you will find a passage that leads to the drow city. The lakeshore is down that way—but watch out for the little fish-people, they’re a bad lot. Stay away from their island.”

“Don’t go near the cavern just across from it, either,” the second giant adds. “A big lobster-crawler lives there, and it eats up little people like you.”

“One more thing,” the first giant says. “Don’t spend a lot of time in the water. There’s a great devil-kraken nearby. The kuo-toas worship the beast as a god. Good luck.”

If the giants become helpful, they add the following:

“Listen, we sometimes ferry travelers across the lake, and you seem like decent folk. Do you want to meet our elders and see if you can make a deal with them? The devil-kraken probably won’t trouble you if you’re with us.”

The giants don’t agree to take the party across until their elders have decided on a fair price, nor do they allow the characters to use the rafts in L3 without first speaking to the elders.

If the characters badly botch a Diplomacy check (check result below 1), the giants become unfriendly. They tell the PCs that to get to Maerimydra, they must wade through the lake to L9. The giants hope that this advice will result in the characters becoming a meal for the chuul.

If the characters attack the giants, or if the party contains at least one apparent drow who does not appear to be a prisoner, the giant sentries are hostile and choose to fight rather than talk. The sentries engage the intruders in melee, while the two giants from L3 hurry to the scene and throw boulders into the fight, making good use of their Precise Shot feat. The battle’s noise easily carries into L4, alerting the stone giants there, who ready themselves for combat.

Treasure: Each giant carries a bag with 2d12 throwing rocks and 1d4+6 mundane items (see the table in the Monster Manual). In addition, one of the giants carries half of a pair of gloves of swimming and climbing (the right glove).

XP Award: Award full experience points for defeating the giants here and in L3 if the characters use Diplomacy to talk their way through.

L2. Cavern

A large hole in the ceiling, about 20 feet up, is the only interesting feature in this cavern.

If the characters come here under escort from the sentries in L1, they find the hole ringed with four of the stone giants from L4. They are angry and hefting boulders. The fifth giant is guarding the entrance into L6.

L3. Cavern (EL 12)

At the far side of this large cavern, the dark waters of a subterranean lake lap gently at the rocky shore. A massive, natural stone column stands just in front of the water, and a second blocks most of a small alcove in the north wall. Near the lake on the north wall is another tiny alcove formed by the natural stone. Pulled up on the rocky shore are two enormous, ramshackle rafts, made from some strange, white, woodlike material. Huge lacquered bladders attached to the rafts provide for flotation.

The giants here keep watch for activity from the kuo-toan shrine just 50 feet out on the lake. They have a formal peace agreement with the kuo-toas, memorialized in the paintings that line the walls of alcove C. Nevertheless, they hardly trust the chaotic and insane kuo-toas to keep to their word, especially if the kraken commands them to attack.

The walls of alcove C are covered with paintings. Eight bands, each 1 foot high, run around the circumference of the alcove, progressively telling the story of the interaction between the giants and the kuo-toas. The scenes near the top show the construction of the kuo-toan shrine under watchful giant eyes, then what appears to be a kuo-toa invasion of the giants’ caves. This set of scenes also reveals the presence of the kraken to a character who makes a successful Search check against DC 9 (in a few of the paintings, the monster’s tentacles reach from the lake into the caves to attack the giants). Many scenes are devoted to the warfare between the giants and the kuo-toas, including a massive counterattack that reduced the shrine to rubble. Later scenes near the bottom show the two factions eating together, though the composition of the meal is not clear. Finally there is a scene showing the giants helping the kuo-toas rebuild their shrine.

Each of the rafts is nearly 20 feet wide and 30 feet long. Both are made from woody fungus stems that grow in nearby caverns plus the inflated bladders of some of the lake’s larger and more dangerous fish. The kuo-toas allow the giants to fish the lake as part of their peace arrangement, as long as they do so in the areas specifically designated by the kuo-toas. Characters thinking of stealing the giant rafts may reconsider when they discover that the rafts must be dragged into the water, and each weighs 4,000 pounds. A stone giant can drag one easily enough, but human-sized characters may find them hard to move.

Creatures: The giant sentries here hide in the alcove marked B. If the characters received leave to pass from the giants in L1, the sentries here do not even reveal their position, hiding behind the large column that blocks the opening of their alcove (Hide modifier +8). One of the sentries growls an angry warning if visitors begin poking around the rafts—permission to pass without molestation does not entitle the characters to take a raft.

Stone Giants (2): hp 114, 111; see Monster Manual.

Treasure: Each giant carries a bag with 2d12 throwing rocks and 1d4+6 mundane items (see the table in the Monster Manual).

Upper caverns

The stone giants live in these chambers. If pressed badly in the lower caverns, they retreat to this level and defend it to the best of their ability.

L4. LARGE UPPER CAVERN (EL 13)

This large, high cavern looks lived in. Huge furs are spread over the floor near the walls, and a number of paintings and carvings adorn the stone of the cavern. The smoke from a cookfire in one corner escapes up through a narrow crevice in the ceiling but also flavors the air with its crisp scent. Piles of rather large rocks lie here and there throughout the room. One great stone column rises from the floor to meet the ceiling far overhead, and a wide passage leads out to another cave.

This cavern is the main living area for most of the stone giants. A rope ladder, normally kept rolled up beside the hole leading down to L2, provides access to the lower cavern level.

Creatures: Five stone giants usually reside here, along with their two pet dire bears. The dire bears are not quite fully grown, but they have the same statistics as those presented in the Monster Manual.

Dire Bears (2): hp 97, 90; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: If the characters come here peaceably, the two giants with the most hit points escort the characters to see the elders in cavern L7, while the others watch from a distance, staying close to the piles of throwing rocks.

If the characters come in force, the giants strive to prevent them from entering the cavern, sending one giant to L6 to keep anyone from using the other entrance. If combat erupts at the entrance, the elders from L5 join in after 1 round.

Treasure: Each giant carries a bag with 2d12 throwing rocks and 1d4+6 mundane items (see the table in the Monster Manual). In addition, the toughest giant (the one with 131 hp) carries an emerald worth 220 gp, half of a pair of gloves of swimming and climbing (the left glove), and a potion of ghoulish touch.

L5. CAVERN (EL 14)

A natural stone column provides a bit of privacy for the cave beyond, which amounts to little more than two large alcoves. Furs are piled in one chamber to make a rather large bed, while the other alcove looks like a sort of rock garden, with large boulders arranged artistically around the space.

The two leaders of this giant community live here, sleeping on the furs and using the “rock garden” for furniture.

Creatures: The stone giant leaders are elders, each with four character levels as sorcerers. Their names are Ghunda and Thurrak. Though less shy than most of their kind, they are prone to long, thoughtful pauses in dialogue. Ghunda is considerably more pessimistic than her husband, particularly since their last encounter with the drow fleeing from Maerimydra toward Szith Morcane. She has a hard time believing that trouble for any race in the Underdark can be good for anyone else, but Thurrak tries to see how the difficulties among the drow could be used to the giants’ advantage. Thurrak speaks much less often than Ghunda.

If the characters persuade the elders to assist them by converting their attitude to friendly with a Diplomacy check (DC 15), the two agree to ferry the party across the lake for a suitable sum (goods, coins, or valuables worth at least 100 gp per traveler). If the elders become helpful, they not only offer to ferry the party across but also waive their normal fee for doing so.

Should the party fail to persuade the elders with Diplomacy, they can offer to earn passage across the lake with a service. In that case, the giants ask them to raid the kuo-toa shrine and destroy the creatures’ fiendish leader. This kuo-toa, known as the Claw, has been inciting his minions against the giants of late, and the stone giant elders see a chance to have the half-fiend removed without breasting the truce themselves. If the heroes destroy the Claw, the elders promise to see that they get across the Lake of Shadows safely.

Tactics: If the characters decide to fight their way through the stone giants at L4, the elders prepare for a fight by casting endurance and endure elements against whatever attack form the party’s spellcasters seem to favor. They fight fiercely, but if half the giants fall, the rest retreat down through the hole in L6 and stomp through the chuul’s lair as quickly as possible. They wade from L9 back toward L3 and flee by boat out onto the lake, trying to stay ahead of their attackers.

Treasure: While this small clan of giants is hardly wealthy, its members do occasionally collect handsome fees for their services. Beneath a large, round boulder in the rock garden (a 2,000-pound stone that the giants can roll aside with little trouble) is a hollow several feet deep. Inside are six sacks of coins (115 pp, 2,870 gp, and 5,900 sp in total).

L6. CAVERN

The large hole in the floor is this cavern’s only interesting feature. A wide tunnel leads away from it.

The giants do not like to live in close proximity to the chuul in L9, directly below this cavern. Nevertheless, they let the monster live there undisturbed, since it provides a useful guard for the rear entrance to the giants’ lair.

on the lake

The Lake of Shadows is huge, some 60 miles in its longest dimension. The cavern above arches from 50 to 100 feet above the lake at its highest point, and the lake itself reaches a depth of 100 feet. Its water is clear and fresh, and it is inhabited by a wide variety of eyeless fish, crabs, and less mundane creatures such as aboleths and kuo-toas. The unquestioned ruler of the lake, however, is a fiendish kraken that is served and worshiped by every intelligent inhabitant.

L7. THE LAKE OF SHADOWS (EL 14)

The waters of this lake are dark, a darkness so impenetrable that its surface reflects any light back to its source. Small waves and ripples zigzag across the water, suggesting that something, somewhere, is moving in the lake.

Two islands—a small one close to the shore, and a larger one farther out crowned by a sizeable building—break the surface of the water nearby.

The water of the lake is extremely cold. Any character in direct contact with it takes 1d6 points of subdual damage per minute of exposure to the water. A character who takes any damage from hypothermia in this manner is fatigued (unable to run or charge, –2 penalty to Strength and Dexterity).

It is possible for a Medium-size character (but not a Small one) to wade from the shore at L3 along the edge of the lake to L9, or as far as the small island (L8). Wading counts as direct contact with the water for the purpose of the hypothermia effect above, and the lake bottom along both paths is somewhat treacherous. A wading character must make a successful Balance check (DC 15) or slip into a crevice 10 feet deep. If the character can swim, he or she may return to shallow water and continue along the desired path with a single successful Swim check (DC 10), but a character too heavy to swim is at risk of drowning in the deeper water. A successful Balance check allows the character to wade carefully around the deeper areas.

Creature: The kraken that rules the lake, ever hungry, regularly patrols the shallow waters for prey. Each round that any characters are in the water (whether swimming or merely wading), there is a 10% chance the kraken appears and attacks.

A kraken resembles an immense squid, but with only eight tentacles, which are the only parts of the creature that characters on the surface can see. Its body is approximately 40 feet long and protected by layers of thick muscle. Six of the beast’s tentacles are short arms (each about 20 feet long); the remaining two are nearly 80 feet long and covered with cruel barbs. Its beaklike mouth is located where the tentacles meet the lower portion of its body.

Fiendish Kraken: hp 303; see page 142.

Tactics: The kraken attacks all the characters simultaneously, if possible, dedicating one tentacle to each opponent within its reach. It uses its long tentacles to reach characters with a single successful Swim check (DC 10), but a character too heavy to swim is at risk of drowning in the deeper water. A successful Balance check allows the character to wade carefully around the deeper areas.

jects away, taking the grappled characters with it. If the kraken takes more than 200 points of damage, it jets away even if its tentacles are empty.

L8. SMALL ISLAND
This barren and rocky island is roughly 25 feet long. Two heaps of rocks that appear to have been purposefully stacked up alongside each other both bear sturdy iron chains.

On the lake side of the island, not visible from the shore, lies a manacled corpse. The kuo-toas sacrifice an occasional victim to the kraken, but sometimes it pleases the monster to have the kuo-toas feed some of its other pets. This crude arrangement of and chains allows the fishfolk to shackle a surfacedweller close to the waterline, where he or she is at the mercy of whatever comes to partake of the meal.

The corpse here is a male drow. His arms are still secured in the chains, but his body missing from the waist down. He was a highly placed lord of House Chûmavh who escaped from the castle after Irae T'sarran's followers overthrew the ruling house. He intended to make his way to Szith Morcane and eventually escape to Cormanthor.

L9. OUTLYING CAVERN (EL 12)
A large stone column dominates the center of this cavern on the lake's shore. The floor by the lakeside is composed of tiny pebbles worn smooth by the unceasing motion of the waves. A number of bones—most of them fish skeletons, others ominously humanoid—are scattered about the cave.

Neither the stone giants nor the kuo-toas claim this cavern, regarding it as a sort of no-man's land between them. Thus, it has become the lair of an unaligned power—an oversized chuul strong enough to hold its own against the kraken.

Creatures: A chuul of tremendous size makes its lair in this cavern. Standing 10 feet high at the shoulder, this monstrous creature has huge pincerlike claws, four webbed legs, a wide tail, and a mandibled mouth surrounded by squirming tentacles. Its body is encased in an orange and black carapace.

The chuul attacks anything that enters its cavern. It has battled the kraken more than once and generally comes out the worse for such an encounter, so it ventures only into the shallows unless it is certain the kraken is nowhere nearby.

Advanced Chuul: hp 216; see page 142.

Treasure: Scattered among the bones of the chuul's victims and the tatters of their gear are a few valuables. In the detritus lie several shredded purses and pouches; their contents total 16 pp, 115 gp, 184 sp, and three 70-gp onyx gems. In one corner

L10. LARGE ISLAND (EL 4)
The building on this island has been constructed from granite blocks, and its exterior bears carved images of fish, squids, and fishlike humanoids. The structure is shaped like a large cube with a smaller square attached to one corner.
The entrance—a stone door flanked by statues of fishfolk—is on the smaller square, facing the caves on the shore.

This building is the shrine of the kuo-toas, built to honor the kraken and their half-fiend leader, the Claw. The statues are of kuo-toas; they have rounded bodies covered with fine scales, slender limbs with broad hands and feet, and bullet-shaped heads with bulging eyes and wide mouths.

Trap: The door to the shrine is inscribed with a glyph of warding set to go off when any creature other than a kuo-toa opens the door. The glyph holds a bestow curse spell.

Glyph of Warding: CR 4; bestow curse (–6 penalty to Constitution); Will DC 17 negates; Search DC 28; Disable Device DC 28.

L11. FOYER (EL 12 OR 14)
The door leads into a small room with another door on one side, presumably leading deeper into the building. Directly opposite the door is a statue of another of the fishlike humanoids, its head nearly brushing the ceiling 10 feet above.
The statue's features appear far more wicked than those of the carvings outside—its teeth protrude from its mouth, and a row of sharp spines runs down its back. It holds a staff with a clawlike attachment at the end.

The mosaic on the floor of this chamber is done in blue and green tiles that form abstract images of waves, seaweed, and fish.
The statue in the foyer demonstrates the reverence the kuo-toas hold for the Claw, their half-fiend leader. Though the sculpture is larger than life, it is a good likeness.

Creatures: The kuo-toa monk who guards the entrance hall is the shrine's first line of defense against outside attack. He looks more like the kuo-toas on the carvings outside the building than the one depicted by the statue here. He moves with a grace and fluidity that belies his gangly frame, swinging a pair of nunchakus—one flaming, one glowing blue with cold—with blinding speed.

Kuo-toa Monk: hp 81; see page 142.

Tactics: The monk attempts to stun enemies early and often, especially if he seems to be outnumbered.

Sounds of combat in this room attract the templars from L13 in 1d4 rounds. These two kuo-toas raise the Encounter Level to 14. The clerics in L14 do not leave that room.

L12. HALL

The mosaic tile from the entrance hall continues into this room, but here the design is of a squidlike creature, done in lifelike detail. This depiction of the creature’s body fills most of the odd-shaped room, while its eight tentacles snake around the corners. A large pair of doors carved with fishfolk stand closed near the creature’s eye. One door stands near one bunch of tentacles, another is situated near a second group of tentacles, and a fourth door is located at the top of the creature’s body.

A careful examination of the double door leading to area L14 (Search DC 25) reveals the very faint tracings of a sigil much like a glyph of warding. This pattern is deceptive—no trap actually wards this door, and it does not radiate magic.

L13. TEMPLARS’ QUARTERS (EL 12)

This small room features two narrow, shallow pools of water. Each is about the size of a humanoid body and just deep enough to cover such a body with water. The walls and floor are bare of decoration. Several large clay urns stand against the far wall.

The kuo-toas use the twin pools as beds. The water in them is saltier than the lake water, but just as cold.

Creatures: Two kuo-toa temple guards live in this chamber, sleeping in the bed-pools. They respond within 1d4 rounds to sounds of combat in L11 or L14, but it is also possible to surprise them in this room. These kuo-toas wear chain shirts and carry sticky shields and halfspear.

Kuo-toa Templars (2): hp 80, 75; see page 142.

Tactics: Both templars are fighter/rogues who attempt to flank opponents so that they deal sneak attack damage. They move frequently in combat (making good use of the Mobility feat) to avoid being flanked themselves and to gain the best advantage against their opponents.

Treasure: The clay urns contain a total of 860 gp and 3,250 sp—coinage skimmed from the offerings of other kuo-toas.

L14. SACRED POOL (EL 13 OR 15)

This large room is ornately decorated, with an elaborate mosaic on the floor and fine carvings covering every wall. The figure depicted in the mosaic resembles the spiny statue in the entrance hall, but here it is surrounded by a large group of fishlike humanoids battling creatures that look like stone giants. The carvings show various scenes involving a giant squidlike creature, the spiny humanoid, and still more fishlike humanoids.

The mosaic design on the floor artfully wraps around a large circular pool that occupies nearly half the room’s area. The pool glows dimly as if lit from below, sparkling in various shades of blue and green.

The ceiling above the door is about 8 feet high, but over the pool it rises to twice that height. A balcony on the upper level overlooks the pool.

This sacred pool is the center of religious life for this kuo-toan cult. Here the kuo-toas offer sacrifices and pay homage to both the half-fiend kuo-toa they call the Claw and to the fiendish kraken that rules the lake. The kraken often extends a tentacle or two up from the pool (through a magical portal in the cave below) to accept a sacrifice, and the Claw lives below the pool in a ‘cafe’ shaped, appropriately enough, like a crab’s claw.

Although the water in the pool is just ordinary lake water, the floor surrounding it is magical, and it imparts some of its magic to the water on a temporary basis. A cup of water drawn from the pool and drunk within an hour of its removal acts as a potion of cure serious wounds. A character gazing into the pool has a chance (Spot DC 20) of noticing a vaguely humanoid shadow (the Claw, see L15) pass briefly across the phosphorescent glow from the cavern floor below.

Creatures: Four kuo-toa whips (clerics) live in this room, tending to the sacred pool. All of them carry pincer staffs (but no shields) and wield them expertly.

Kuo-toa Lesser Whips (3): hp 62, 60, 58; see page 143.

Kuo-toa Greater Whip: hp 82; see page 143.

These whips prefer to act in concert against enemies, using their lightning bolt ability at every opportunity (every 1d4 rounds, as long as at least two of them remain alive).

Sounds of combat in this room bring the templars from L13 (if they are still alive) in 1d4 rounds. These two kuo-toas raise the Encounter Level to 15.

If the characters leave this room without entering the pool, the Claw follows them (see the Tactics section of L15).

L15. CAVE OF THE CLAW (EL 14 OR 16)

This cavern is entirely filled with water. The pool opening in L14 is the only place where a swimmer can raise his or her head above the water. The opening can be surprisingly hard to find from below, requiring a successful Spot check (DC 20) unless there is a bright light source in L14, such as a lingering daylight spell or a burning sunrod.
This water-filled cavern is eerily lit by softly glowing colored lights of green, blue, and purple on the walls, ceiling, and floor. The source of the light is not immediately apparent. In contrast to the well-lit surfaces all around, the middle of the cavern seems extremely dark. A number of clay urns lie along the walls, scattered more or less at random.

The lights come from naturally bioluminescent algae that grow on the cavern surfaces. They are harmless, and their light fades in 1d4 minutes if they are removed from the rock on which they grow.

The entire northeast section of the cavern wall radiates a strong aura of Transmutation magic. With a command word ("Kharak"), that section of wall opens as if by a passwall spell, allowing creatures to swim out to the lake or in from it. The passage is wide enough for the kraken to enter. This opening lasts until another command word ("Morthak") is spoken.

Creatures: The half-fiend kuo-toa called the Claw lives in this cavern, serving as the intermediary between the kuo-toas and the kraken they revere. The Claw looks much like the statue depicting him in L11, though he is no larger than an ordinary kuo-toa. The spines running down his back and his unearthly green-glowing eyes are a legacy of his hezrou father, but otherwise he resembles mostly other kuo-toas.

The Claw is consumed with hatred for air-breathing creatures, and particularly surface-dwellers. If he indulges in conversation, it is only to boast of his might and promise his opponents certain death.

The Claw: hp 62; see page 143.

Tactics: The Claw is aware of the characters if they bring any light source into the sacred pool room (L14) above this chamber. As soon as he notices them, he drinks a potion of invisibility and casts his longer-duration spells (endurance and shield of faith) on himself. He then moves near the pool and chooses one character to study carefully. If the heroes enter the pool, he attacks the character he has been studying as soon as possible, using his clerical smite ability (+4 to hit and +3 damage) as well as his assassin’s death attack (Fort DC 17 with his assassin’s dagger) and sneak attack (+4d6 damage).

The Claw opens the northeast wall as soon as he enters melee with the characters. If the kraken (see L7) is still alive, it comes to his aid in 2d4 rounds. The kraken raises the Encounter Level to 16.

If the characters leave the sacred pool area without entering the water, the Claw casts silence on the stones around the pool and slides out of the water, then follows them. He then studies a character for 3 rounds again before attacking in the same manner.

Treasure: The urns contain most of the shrine’s accumulated wealth. The cash portion amounts to 44 pp, 3,815 gp, and 8,970 sp. In one urn, carefully sealed against water damage and wrapped in scraps of cloth, lies an instrument of the bards—a lyre, to be precise. (This magic item is found in Magic of Faerûn; if you do not have that book, substitute a lyre of building.) Another sealed urn holds a scroll of control undead, globe of invulnerability, and wall of stone taken from a surface-dwelling wizard long ago.

L16. Balcony/Gallery (EL 8)

This 5-foot-wide balcony overlooks the pool some 8 feet below. A rail runs around the edge about 3 feet off the ground, supported by posts carved to resemble the fishlike humanoid that inhabits this place.

Opposite the railing, two walls formed of archways lead into a sort of gallery beyond. An elaborate mural covers the wall, but its subject is not discernable.

The mural defies description. Any character examining it carefully begins to hear soft whispers in his or her mind and must make a successful Will save (DC 22) or be struck by an insanity effect.

Insanity Trap: CR 8; insanity; Will DC 22 negates; Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31.

Across the Lake of Shadows

From the caverns of the stone giants and kuo-toas, the characters must travel 17 1/2 miles across the Lake of Shadows. This is the only distance marked on the map from Dorina T’sarran’s coffin. Find the path spell clearly leads the subject along the edge of the lake and toward the tunnel leading eastward from it.

The characters have several options for making this trip. They can persuade the stone giants to ferry them across with some artful diplomacy or a service, use the folding boat from L9, fly by some means (characters affected by a fly spell can cover 18 miles in 2 hours), or use some other spell, such as wind walk or phantom steed, to get across.

By boat, the trip is both slow and dangerous. The folding boat moves 1 1/2 miles per hour in its boat form, or 2 miles... per hour in its ship form. The stone giants’ raft travels 1 mile per hour with two rowers of giant stature and strength, or only 1/2 mile per hour if rowed by Medium-size creatures. If the kraken from L7 is still alive, it attacks the characters and their boat about halfway through the journey, using control winds as well as its tentacles in an attempt to sink or crash the boat. (The kraken does not attack if giants ferry the party across the lake.) Flying or using some other magic is a faster and probably safer method.

At the end of 17 1/2 miles, a large tunnel branches off from the cavern wall toward the east. (Again, find the path leads the characters into that tunnel.) This tunnel winds eastward for 18 miles before reaching the Wailing Cliff—a journey that requires between 9 and 72 hours to complete.

Wailing Cliff

The Wailing Cliff is the result of a powerful seismic incident (more likely magical than natural in origin) that sundered the passage between the Lake of Shadows and Maerimydra. Where once the passage ran smoothly, sloping gently downward as it headed east, a 300-foot-high cliff now divides the wide corridor. Three cavern mouths lead into the cliff face, two of them inhabited by groups of kir-lanan gargoyles and the third housing a shadow dragon.

A peculiar planar phenomenon exists here as well as a striking geological one. The borders between the Material Plane and the Plane of Shadow are thin at the Wailing Cliff—a condition that has several repercussions.

First, using shadow walk in the region of the Wailing Cliff is difficult. Any character attempting to move via that spell between Szith Morcane and Maerimydra must make a successful Will save (DC 20) or emerge from the Plane of Shadow 1/2 mile west of the base of the Wailing Cliff, ending the spell. Shadow walk cannot be cast anywhere within 1/2 mile of this spot, meaning that characters must pass the Wailing Cliff and travel at least 1/2 mile beyond it before they can use shadow walk again.

Second, spells cast around the Wailing Cliff may be altered by the proximity of the Plane of Shadow. Spells with the shadow descriptor are enhanced, always functioning as though they were prepared with the Empower Spell feat, though they don’t require higher-level spell slots. Shadow conjuration and shadow evocation spells are 30% (rather than 20%) as powerful as the conjurations and evocations they mimic. Greater shadow conjuration and greater shadow evocation spells are 60% (not 40%) as powerful, and a shades spell conjures at 90% (not 60%) of the original spell’s power. To determine the effect of such spells, first apply the effect of the Empower Spell feat, then the percentage above.

Finally, spells that use or generate light or fire may fail when cast in the Wailing Cliff region. A spellcaster attempting a spell with the light or fire descriptor must succeed at a Spellcraft check (DC 15 + spell level) or the spell fails and is ruined.

The Flight from Maerimydra: The drow of Maerimydra have an ancient pact with the shadow dragon Glouroth that allows them free passage past the Wailing Cliff, but only priestesses of Lolth know about it. When the refugees from Maerimydra passed through here, the priestesses of Lolth who led the party spoke to Glouroth and called upon the pact to guarantee their safety. If the characters have a drow captive with them who happens to be a surviving priestess of Lolth, she speaks a code word to Glouroth that means, “I am a captive, please destroy my captors.” Any other drow captive knows nothing about the ancient pact.

W1. Cliff Base

The tunnel opens into the floor of a chasm with no visible ceiling. The floor is covered with huge boulders and broken rubble. At the tunnel mouth, a little space has been cleared through the rubble, creating a passage that leads over to the opposite chasm wall—a sheer cliff of smooth rock that towers upward into the perpetual Underdark gloom.

Fighting in the Air

Player characters of 12th level or higher are likely to deal with the physical obstacle of the Wailing Cliff by flying. All the residents of the Cliff can fly as well, and they are quite comfortable engaging in either melee or ranged combat on the wing. This sidebar expands the information presented in Chapter 3 of the Dungeon Master’s Guide.

Characters under the effect of a fly spell (or a magic item that duplicates some or all the effects of that spell, such as wings of flying, winged boots, a broom of flying, or a carpet of flying) have good maneuverability, as do the kir-lanans. This means that they can do the following: hover in place or fly backward, lose only 5 feet of movement for reverting, turn 90° while moving 5 feet, turn in place at the cost of 5 feet of movement per 90° turned, fly up at any angle at half speed, or fly down at any angle at double speed. They also need not fly level for any distance between descending and ascending.

Glooroth has poor maneuverability, though this drawback is mostly offset by his aerial combat feats. The Hover feat means that he can hover in place, fly straight down, or fly straight up. Normally, he can turn only 45° while moving 5 feet and cannot turn in place, but the Wingover feat lets him change direction quickly (180° in place) once per round, though he can’t gain altitude while executing a wingover. He must fly level for at least 10 feet between descending and beginning a new ascent. These feats help him maneuver in the tight spaces around the Wailing Cliff.

Glooroth and all the kir-lanans have the Flyby Attack feat, an improved version of Spring Attack that lets a creature take any partial action (usually, but not always, an attack action) at any point during its move action.

While hovering, Glooroth can use his bite attack, four claw attacks (instead of two), and tail slap attack, or he can use his breath weapon or cast a spell.
The Wailing Cliff is a 300-foot-high sheer rock face (Climb DC 30). The south wall of the chasm is rougher and easier to climb (DC 25), but the tunnel continues at the top of the north wall. The bell is provided so that Underdark travelers who have negotiated passage with the shadow dragon can summon his kir-lanans and gain permission to ascend the cliff. The responses of the dragon and the kir-lanans to the heroes’ two possible approaches are described below.

The Characters Ring the Bell: Ringing the bell alerts not only the kir-lanans in W2 but also the other wing in W3 and the dragon in W4. The five kir-lanans from W2 answer the summons within 1d3+1 rounds. They are indifferent toward parties consisting of nothing but drow characters, unfriendly toward parties of familiar Underdark races, and hostile to all others. If the party consists of nothing but drow, the kir-lanans simply state, “You may ascend if you wish,” and watch the group closely. They do not attack unless the party does something to invite suspicion.

Other Underdark dwellers sometimes pass this way and pay a toll to cross Glouroth’s territory—usually goods or coins worth at least 20 gp per person. Extremely persuasive surface dwellers who succeed in modifying the kir-lanans’ attitude to unfriendly can buy some time to strike a deal for passage, but doing this is extremely difficult (requiring a Diplomacy check opposed by a kir-lanan’s Sense Motive check result). No check is necessary if the party includes at least one drow character.

The Characters Do Not Ring the Bell: Any noise in this area—even quiet conversation and spellcasting—draws the attention of the Howling Wing kir-lanans in W2, the entrance to which lies some 70 feet up. These guardians assume that any creatures advancing into the cavern without ringing the bell are enemies. They emerge to attack in 1d3+1 rounds, chasing flying characters on the wing if necessary. If the characters continue flying upward, the Screeching Wing kir-lanans in W3 emerge to fight them when they reach the altitude of that cavern. If they continue up, the kir-lanans shout to the shadow dragon in W4, drawing him out to fight the characters as well.

The best strategy is to deal with the monsters one group at a time. The two groups of kir-lanans do not get along well in general, so they do not cooperate to fight the characters. They never fly into each others’ lairs, so fighting the Howling Wing kir-lanans near the entrance to W2 does not draw out the Screeching Wing gargoyles from W3—though it does alert them that trouble might be on the way.

It is unusual for two groups of kir-lanans to occupy as small an area as the Wailing Cliff, but the Howling Wing and the Screeching Wing are essentially a single group sundered by the presence of two strong leaders who cannot reconcile with each other. Given the anarchistic nature of kir-lanans, it is not surprising that the membership of the two groups has shifted over the years, with some kir-lanans transferring from one wing to the other more than once.

W2. Howling Wing Cave (EL 13)

If these kir-lanans emerge from their cave to fight the characters, read the following text:

A strongly built humanoid with large black wings emerges from a cave in the cliff wall and takes flight, heading quickly in your direction. Two more step out behind the first, and there seem to be more on the way.

If the characters enter the kir-lanan cavern, read this text:

The darkness in this cavern almost seems to have substance, making the air feel thick and close.

This cavern is the lair of a group of kir-lanan gargoyles (see the FORGOTTEN REALMS Campaign Setting).

Creatures: The Howling Wing is a loose band of five kir-lanans led by a fighter/sorcerer called Ghindul—a maniacal tyrant who quashes any hint of rebellion or insubordination, usually with more force than is necessary. His physical strength and the force of his personality, however, demand the kir-lanans' respect. Ghindul has deep ebony scales and eyes of an unusually rich amethyst color.

- Ghindul, Kir-Lanan Ftr6/Sor3: hp 82; see page 143.
- Kir-Lanan Fighters (4): hp 67, 66, 64, 52; see page 144.

Tactics: The Howling Wing is somewhat notorious for its use of tanglefoot bags against flying opponents. Each member of the wing carries two tanglefoot bags, which it hurls at opponents with wings or (as a second choice) at spellcasters. Winged creatures that are entangled cannot fly.

Treasure: The Kir-lanans offer most valuable items they find to Glouroth as tribute, but they have hidden away a few items that the dragon does not know about. Concealed beneath a small pile of loose stones lies a belt pouch of drow manufacture containing 390 gp, 855 sp, and two potions of cure serious wounds. (The kir-lanans cannot make use of the healing potions.) Beside the pouch is a wand of invisibility with 11 charges remaining.

W3. Screeching Wing Cave (EL 13)

This natural tunnel penetrates only 25 feet into the cliff wall, but then turns sharply downward and opens into a cavern below.

This cavern is the home of the second kir-lanan wing, known as the Screeching Wing. The cave entrance drops down 20 feet to the floor of the main cavern. This layout is not a concern for flying characters, but it is for others, since there is no wall to climb down within easy reach of the hole in the entrance tunnel floor.

Creatures: The Screeching Wing consists of only four kir-lanans, though its leader, Phaikkul, is arguably more powerful than the leader of the Howling Wing. Several kir-lanans have drifted back and forth between the two groups, but most of Ghindul's followers are uncomfortable with Phaikkul because she is not a full-blooded kir-lanan. She is a half-shadow dragon, the daughter of Glouroth, whose lair is in the large cavern above (W4). Though her dragon blood undeniably gives her enough power to command the obedience of her wing, kir-lanans are naturally suspicious of other creatures, and that suspicion extends to halfbreeds such as Phaikkul in the minds of Ghindul's followers.

Phaikkul is an amazing physical specimen. Where most kir-lanans have very fine scales like those of a snake or lizard, the dark gray scales on Phaikkul's chest and back are large and thick, like a dragon's. The horns over her temples are long and sharply pointed, and her ears are large and frilled, like those of a shadow dragon. She has a spiny crest running down her back, with thin skin stretched between the spines like a sheet of shadows. Her tail is unusually long and thick, and it bears spines of its own. Her eyes glow emerald green.

Like Ghindul, Phaikkul rules her wing with an iron hand, though she is not prone to fits of unreasoning fury. Rather, she tends to speak quietly and with subtle statements, revealing the full force of her wrath only when directly challenged.

- Phaikkul: hp 100; see page 144.
- Kir-Lanan Fighters (3): hp 78, 79, 72; see page 144.

Tactics: If Phaikkul is badly injured (reduced to 20 or fewer hit points), she flies to W4 to shelter in her father's lair. The rest of her wing breaks off and flies to the remote reaches of the great cliff cavern if Phaikkul gives up the fight.

Treasure: Like her rival Ghindul, Phaikkul has profited from the refugees of Maerimydra who fled this way. In a hidden nook of her cave (Search DC 20) she has a cache containing 390 gp, 855 sp, and several pieces of jewelry—a copper bracer worth 60 gp, a fine mithral necklace of sapphires worth 1,100 gp, and a gold harnet worth 270 gp.

W4. Glouroth's Cave (EL 15)

A gaping hole in the cliff wall, fully 40 feet wide and half that high, opens into a still wider cavern. Shadows seem to pool on the floor and rise into mounds—or is it some trick of darkness that makes the shadows look like mounds of coins piled on the floor? Certainly, the shadows here seem alive, billowing through the air like clouds of dark vapor and slinking menacingly along the floor.

This cave is the lair of Glouroth, a mature adult shadow dragon and the father of Phaikkul. Though his long-ago dalliance among the kir-lanans produced a daughter (Phaikkul) who lives nearby, the dragon pays little attention to the gargoyles now, considering them hardly worth his notice.

Creature: Glouroth is a seething mass of hatred and fury hidden behind a mask of calm, well-mannered subtlety. He slinks in the darkness, using his shadow blend ability to make himself nearly invisible, and speak in a hissing whisper, murmuring quiet pleasantries while his thoughts are consumed with blood and murder. Whether these behaviors are all part of some game he plays with himself or signs of deep mental imbalance is unclear, but the overall effect is that he verbally plays with his food before devouring it.

When he tires of banter, he casts deeper darkness (since he can rely on his blindsight), then uses his breath weapon to affect as many opponents as he can. Next he literally leaps into melee...
(or uses dimension door to appear among a group of opponents) and uses his six melee attacks to wreak havoc on the party. He breathes as often as he can, knowing that every creature that succumbs becomes a significantly weaker opponent. He uses his spells primarily for backup support: true strike to help him hit opponents he’s having trouble hitting (or to maximize the benefits of his Power Attack), ray of enfeeblement against strong opponents who deal too much damage to him, and deeper darkness if his first use of it is dispelled.

Treasure: The heaps of treasure are no illusion or trick of the shadows. In proper draconic fashion, Glouroth has amassed quite a fortune in his cavern lair. The kir-lanans, knowing that Glouroth is quick to anger and unceasing in his vengeance, no longer try to steal anything from his hoard.

The foundation of the hoard is 7,700 gold pieces and 13,200 silver pieces. Scattered among the coins are eleven gems: two 75-gp crowns of silver, an 11-gp violine, a 40-gp moonstone, a 70-gp onyx, an 80-gp jet, a 300-gp black pearl, a 900-gp black corundum, a 1,000-gp black opal, a 1,000-gp black star sapphire, and a 6,000-gp jacinth. The pile also includes three potions: a potion of lesser restoration, a potion of endurance, and a potion of clairaudience/clairvoyance. A single scroll in a bone tube contains the arcane versions of summon monster V and teleport. Finally, the hoard includes a wand of cure light wounds (38 charges), a rod of thunder and lightning, and a quiver of sixteen +2 shocking arrows.

W5. Cliff’s Top

At the top of the cliff the tunnel stretches toward the east, continuing the passageway from some 300 feet below. Another large iron chime stands here, with a mallet beside it.

The residents of the Wailing Cliff do not pursue fleeing prey beyond the area shown on the map because they enjoy the local proximity to the Plane of Shadow. The bell is used as described under W1 to announce a traveler’s intention to pass, except that Phaikkul’s wing (the kir-lanans in W3) is first to respond.

The middle stretch

The next segment of the journey, from the top of the Wailing Cliff to the second fork, is 1 1/2 miles—another journey requiring 1 to 3 days. On the second or third day, the characters reach the second fork.

The eastern branch of this fork leads to Vournoth’s Mire and on to Maerimydra. The southern branch leads to the Yrthak Cavern, sloping steadily downward all the way. The 25-mile journey to the Yrthak Cavern takes between 1 1/2 and 4 days, while the 35-mile trip to Vournoth’s Mire lasts anywhere from two to six days. The Yrthak Cavern is a dead end.

Yrthak Cavern

This area is the lair of a clutch of subterranean yrthaks. Refer to page 10 of the map booklet, noting that the scale is different than the other maps.

The square cavern measures roughly 3/4 mile per side and supports a small ecological system all its own. Several herds of deep rothé live here, feeding on the abundant fungi and lichens that grow on the rocks. The yrthaks—a mated pair and their two young adult offspring—feed on the rothé. The birth of the twins has strained the ecology, and the yrthaks have begun to overhunt the rothé. They have already reduced the herd beasts’ population below a sustainable level.

The ceiling of the cavern rises to 300 feet at its highest point.

Y1. END OF THE TUNNEL (EL 11)

The tunnel abruptly comes to an end in a cavern so large that being within it feels almost like being outside on a starless night. The stone floor stretches out like a rocky hillside, dotted with stalagmites and loose stones and pocked with small pits and gullies. The ceiling rises out of sight, and the walls stretch out to either side beyond the range of vision.

An odd, deep thrumming fills the air, though it’s not so much heard as felt. From somewhere off in the darkness comes the sound of falling rock.

The two young yrthaks are out hunting in the cavern; their positions are marked on the map. The characters are likely to see or hear evidence of the yrthaks before actually spotting them. Most characters, even with true seeing, can’t see farther than 120 feet, which is also the range of the yrthaks’ blindsight. From a greater distance than that, the characters sense only a subsonic vibration that pulses in their inner ears—a sign that a yrthak is using its sonic lance within the cavern. The sound of shattering rock comes from a yrthak creating an explosion to injure a whole herd of rothé.

Creatures: Taking 10 on their Listen checks allows the yrthaks to hear characters talking up to 290 feet away. If they hear prey more interesting than a herd of rothé, they move to hunt it, swooping overhead and impairing the characters with sonic attacks before using their bites and claws.

A yrthak vaguely resembles a dragon—it is a reptilian creature with yellow-green scales, large wings, and a crocodilian head. It has a long tail and a large fin on its back, and hornlike protrusions on its head project focused sonic energy.

Yrthaks: hp 92, 88; see Monster Manual.

If either yrthak is reduced to 30 or fewer hit points, it breaks off and flies toward the lair (Y2) to warn its parents. The mated pair comes out to drive off the intruders 2d4 rounds after one of the young yrthaks flies the fight.

Y2. YRTHAK LAIR (EL 11)

A steep escarpment rises up into the gloom here. Several large, shaggy corpses of creatures resembling hair-covered oxen litter the floor. On closer examination, it appears that they have been dropped from some height.

The cliff leading up to the plateau is steep and rough, requiring Climb checks (DC 25) to ascend. It rises 45 feet to the plateau.

Creatures: The four yrthaks make their lair on the plateau. The monsters are not particularly protective about this nest. They have a sizeable cavern to hide in, so they do not defend their lair to the death.
Y3. MYSTERIOUS TOWER (EL 8)

In the remote eastern end of the cavern stands the battered wreckage of a lonely tower. The stones of its upper floors seem to have been blasted apart by a great force, and its empty walls rise no more than 20 feet into the air. In and around the wreckage, large shaggy beasts graze on lichens and fungi.

Many years ago, an eccentric archmage from the surface world raised this tower as a hidden refuge, but his stronghold was discovered by raiding duergar. In the ensuing battle, the place was destroyed and looted by the surviving gray dwarves.

Creatures: A herd of thirteen deep rothé, one of several herds that roam this cavern, grazes around the wreckage of the tower. The rothé are nonaggressive but may stampede if threatened. They resemble small musk oxen with shaggy coats and curling horns. These creatures are not a significant threat to the party, so characters do not receive any experience points for killing them.

Treasure: Few travelers come this way, but the monsters rooted through the ruins of the keep in Y3 and accumulated 115 gp, 890 sp, a +2 mithral breastplate, and a +1 keen dwarven waraxe. These items were taken from the skeleton of a duergar champion who died in the attack on the tower.

Yournoth's Mire

The region known as Yournoth's Mire consists of the intersection between the natural tunnels that connect Szith Morcane with Maerimydra and an underground river that eventually flows into the Lake of Shadows. The river cuts a deep gully through the caverns surrounding it, and changes in its path over the years have formed two small, stagnant lakes within the caves.

Yournoth's Mire has had many inhabitants over the centuries, but the most prominent of them was the lich Yournoth, who laired here before the founding of Szith Morcane. A drow champion from Maerimydra finally hunted down Yournoth in 800 DR, paving the way for the establishment of Szith Morcane four years later.

During the years when the drow of Maerimydra and Szith Morcane controlled the region now known as Shadowdale, Yournoth's Mire was a well-patrolled drow campsite. When Ashabâë drove the drow from the Twisted Tower and traffic to Maerimydra slowed to a crawl, other denizens moved into the Mire, and it has been a fiercely contested lair space ever since.

The latest inhabitants of Yournoth's Mire are an unlikely duo: an illithid sorcerer named Qathnorak and a beholder called Sekrîr. These two mostly leave each other alone, but they occasionally collaborate on some arcane project and often team up to defend their lair.

The Flight from Maerimydra: When the refugees from Maerimydra traveled through Yournoth's Mire, they hurried along the gully and past the lairs of its two inhabitants as quickly as possible. Sekrîr the beholder caught up with the rear of the party, killing three fleeing drow and charming three more. One of the latter made his saving throw when the first charm monster spell wore off, then became the beholder's meal. The other two still work for Sekrîr.

V1. GULLY CAVERN

The tunnel widens out as a stream flows through a crack in one wall and begins to run down the middle of the tunnel floor, forming a deep but narrow gully. Ahead, the tunnel narrows again to a width just slightly greater than that of the gully.

Just before the stream flows out of the cave, it runs around what looks like the lower half of a statue—a pair of legs captured in mid-stride, a little bit of torso, and then jagged, broken stone.

The stream gully ranges from 2 to 5 feet wide and averages about 2 1/2 feet deep. Any character below 5 feet tall who ends up in the gully for any reason must make a relatively simple Climb check (DC 15) to get out. A larger character can clamber out as part of a move action (using 5 feet of movement for the round). A character who falls into the gully takes 1d4 points of subdual damage from the rocks.

The exit from this cave is barely wider than the gully, offering roughly 1 foot of level space on the north side of the creek and none on the south side. Characters can try to creep along the narrow north side (Balance DC 10), or step down into the gully and wade carefully along in single file.

The partial statue is part of a drow who was hit by Sekrîr's flesh to stone eye ray. The upper half of it is in Sekrîr's lair.

V2. FETID LAKE (EL 11 TO 15)

Past the narrow tunnel the course widens again, opening into a cavern to the left, where a small lake lies some 20 feet from the stream. Between the stream and the lake is a field of mushrooms that forms a nearly solid carpet of fungus. The stream continues on through another narrow gap, though this one is not as narrow as the last.

In contrast to the solid rock found throughout most of the Underdark, the ground between the gully and the lake is soil—hard and rocky, but considerably softer and more fertile than most ground in the Deep Wastes. The lake used to be part of the creek, but as the flowing water cut a deeper and deeper swath through the cavern floor, it carved a more direct route. Sediment carried in the water eventually cut off the lake from the stream's course. This sediment now forms a fine bed for a mushroom farm.
The lake itself is shallow and smells foul, thanks to the variety of organisms that call it home. None of the lake's inhabitants are dangerous to the characters unless ingested, but drinking the water exposes a character to blinding sickness (see Disease in Chapter 3 of the Dungeon Master's Guide).

The hole in the ceiling that leads up into Sekrr's lair is difficult to see (Spot DC 15) unless a character is standing right beneath it and looking up (Spot DC 0). Climbing the cavern wall and the narrow stretch of ceiling between the wall and the hole requires a moderately difficult Climb check (DC 25).

Creatures: Sekrr charmed two drow from the fleeing party of Maerimydran refugees, and these two—once ranking officers in Maerimydra's army—now tend the beholder's mushroom bed. They consider Sekrr a very good friend, placing more trust in him than in any drow (including each other).

Both officers are strong drow women, solidly built by elf standards. They carry weapons and wear armor even when working among the mushrooms—the Underdark is a dangerous place, after all. Their hatred of surface-dwellers is undiminished by their charmed status, and they attack the characters on sight.

Maerimydra Officers (2): hp 60, 60; see page 145.

The sound of combat in this room quickly draws the attention of the beholder (V3), who floats down in 1d3 rounds to see what the fuss is about. His presence raises the Encounter Level to 14.

If battle rages here for more than 5 rounds, it draws the attention of Quthnorak, the mind flayer in V5. He emerges from V4 1d4+1 rounds after Sekrr appears. If Sekrr and the drow are still alive, his presence raises the overall Encounter Level to 15.

V3. Sekrr's Lair (EL 13)

This cavern looks like a bizarre parody of a trophy room or treasure vault in a human-built castle. Grotesque statues—probably petrified creatures—are arrayed around the walls, frozen in positions of horror or surprise and chipped or broken in ways that might be intended as artistic. Each has one or more gemstones embedded in some part of its face or body. Besides the statues, two suits of full plate armor stand as if on display, except that the helmets are turned around to face the back of the armor. A tigerskin rug is spread on the floor, but it too looks wrong somehow—the limbs are too long, the face is not completely feral, and there are visible bloodstains on the fur. A few sacks bursting with gold coins lie on the floor, mostly tucked behind the statues.

This is the lair of Sekrr, a beholder with an inventive and artistic mind—at least to his own way of thinking. The eleven statues have all been smashed to the point where a break enchantment or similar spell produces only a corpse. The suits of armor are magical and part of the beholder's treasure (see below). The tigerskin rug was actually made from a weretiger in hybrid form (skinned alive so the skin would retain its form when the weretiger died). It covers a pit trap.
Trap: The weretiger rug covers a 100-foot-deep pit trap with poisoned spikes at the bottom.

Poisoned Spike Pit Trap: CR 7; no attack roll necessary (1d6), +10 melee (1d4 spikes for 1d4+5 plus poison per successful hit); Reflex DC 20 avoids; Search DC 20, Disable Device DC 20.

The spikes are coated with giant wasp poison (DC 18, initial and secondary damage 1d6 points of Strength damage).

Creature: If Sekrr did not emerge from his lair to fight in V2, the characters find him here. He is a typical beholder, with a rich, maroon-colored, scaly hide and bright blue multiple eyes. He is missing several teeth from his bottom jaw.

Sekrr, beholder: hp 59; see Monster Manual.

Treasure: Sekrr has amassed quite a fortune during his stay in Vournoth’s Mire. Thirteen gems are embedded into the petrified bodies that line the walls: an 8-gp chunk of ivory, a 10-gp lapis lazuli, an 11-gp blue quartz, a 12-gp azurite, a 50-gp citrine, a 50-gp phenalope, a 60-gp sard, a 70-gp tchazar, a 90-gp amethyst, a 110-gp jade, a 110-gp malachite, a 13-gp azurite, a 50-gp citrine, a 50-gp phenalope, a 60-gp sard, a 70-gp tchazar, a 90-gp amethyst, a 110-gp jade, a 110-gp malachite, and a 130-gp violet garnet. The gems are exactly what they appear to be and contain a total of 2,900 gp and 250 sp. Also in the sacks are a +1 throwing axe, a potion of cat’s grace, and a potion of hiding. The two suits of full plate armor are magical—one is simply +1 full plate; the other is +3 moderate fortification full plate.

V4. OXBOW LAKE (EL 11 to 14)

The cavern widens and opens up on the right side of the stream, where there is another lake and also surrounded by a thick growth of mushrooms. A branch of the cavern extends around to one side, doubling back upstream. The cavern smells earthy, like freshly tilled soil.

This lake was formed in the same manner as the one in V2. Like that lake, it carries blinding sickness, though its water does not appear quite as vile.

Creatures: Quthnorak has but a single thrall of his own, but he considers that one a particularly fine specimen and easily a match for Sekrr’s newly acquired drow “allies,” should it ever come to a battle. Gok’lak is a grimlock barbarian, a massively muscular humanoid with thick gray skin and no eyes. He has a thick mane of black hair and extremely large ears studded with a variety of rings and gemstones.

Gok’lak: hp 183; see page 148.

The sound of combat in this cavern does not draw Quthnorak out, though it does alert him to the presence of intruders. He trusts the grimlock to defend himself and views Gok’lak’s death simply as evidence that he needs a better thrall.

Gok’lak: hp 183; see page 148.

V5. QUTHNORAK’S LAIR (EL 13)

This oddly shaped cavern is clearly inhabited, but the nature of that inhabitant is not clear. A massive circular platform covered with spongy gray moss stands in the center of the cave. Just behind it is a large abstract statue that mixes rather graceful curves with disturbing textures that seem to defy the solidity of the stone. In a small nook to the left of the entrance, a number of pillows are piled on the floor next to a strange device apparently assembled from bones, the purpose of which is not immediately apparent. A larger alcove opens to the right, but its contents are not visible from the entrance. A faint salty smell, reminiscent of the ocean but also mingled with less pleasant odors, fills the cave.

This is the lair of the mind flayer sorcerer Quthnorak. The round mossy platform is his bed, and a pool of briny fluid in the large alcove allows him to both bathe and moisten his slimy skin. The throw pillows mark his study area. He reclines on the pillows while contemplating magical mysteries or experimenting with the ebb and flow of the Weave.

The bone device beside the pillows radiates a lingering aura of Transmutation magic. A successful Spellcraft check (DC 20) made while examining the item with a detect magic spell reveals that it somehow channels magical energy, but no more details are evident. Quthnorak is currently experimenting—quite unsuccessfully—with effects similar to what Irae Tsarran has accomplished using the Undying Temple. The device is not inherently magical; the mind flayer simply uses it as a focus for channeling the experimental energies.

Quthnorak: mind flayer sorcerer: hp 102; see page 148.

If you are using the Psionics Handbook in your game, you can use Quthnorak as a psi-raven than as a sorcerer. Alternate skills and psiionic powers are presented in Appendix 2. In this case, his experimentation is psiionic in nature.

V6. END OF THE GULLY

The stream and its gullies wind across this cavern, then exit through a narrow crevice like the one three caverns back. A wider tunnel leads off from the left side of the stream, rising upward as it continues.

It is possible for a character to squeeze into the crevice where the stream returns to the rock. With a successful Escape Artist check (DC 30), a Medium-size creature can squeeze in to a maximum of 10 feet, and a Small one to a maximum of 20 feet. Nothing of interest lies in the streambed here.

LAST LEG

The last leg of the journey from Vournoth’s Mire to Maerimydra is about 40 miles. Depending on the speed of the party, it takes anywhere from 60 hours to almost 168 hours to traverse the distance. Sometime between the third and the seventh day of travel, the characters reach Maerimydra at last.

This part of the journey presents an excellent opportunity to introduce the player characters to Irae Tsarran if they have not yet run afoul of her. Review “Playing the Villains Smart” in the Introduction to see whether any of the events that might trigger Irae’s personal intervention have taken place.
Once the largest drow settlement in the north-central portion of Faerûn, Maerimydra was long past its glory days even before Kurgoth Hellspawn marched his army to its gates. Castle Maerimydra—home to the city's ruling house—has been no more than half full for centuries. Now, the mighty temple to Lolth that was the city's greatest pride lies in rubble, no stone left standing on another. The Shattered Tower, home to Maerimydra's renowned arcane college, now matches its name, lying in a heap of rubble. The large cavern that once sported abundant fungus farms and rothé pastures now burns with the campfires of its conquerors.

Kurgoth Hellspawn, the half-fiend fire giant who led the assault on the city, has clearly won his greatest battle. Most of the drow of the city were slain. Between the perfidy of the city's archmage and the powerlessness of its cleric-leaders, the populace fell like cattle before the marauding army. Some survived by fleeing the city, like the party of refugees that journeyed to Szith Morcane. Others sought sanctuary with the duergar who dwell under Zhentil Keep, but the gray dwarves put them to the axe.

The war is not over here; some drow still haunt Castle Maerimydra. The city had long housed a sect of heretics, worshipers of Kiaransalee led by Irae T'sarran. While Maerimydra fell, Irae T'sarran rose to a new height of power, destroying the Shattered Tower, transforming the Archmage of Maerimydra into an undead monster, and seizing the city's central castle for her new seat. Every drow, gooblin, or giant that fell in battle became a potential soldier for her cause, rising up as a revenant or a zombie to do her bidding.

The Burnin City

Moving through the cavern is a challenge in itself, due primarily to the two armies operating within it: the brutish hordes of Kurgoth Hellspawn and the undead legion of Irae T'sarran. Currently, Kurgoth's forces are clustered around the coliseum (M12) where he makes his camp, and Castle Maerimydra, where his siege lines surround the redoubt. Irae's forces hold Castle Maerimydra, although bands of undead reavers hunt the wrecked city and make life difficult for Kurgoth's warriors.

The two forces clash with some regularity in the cavern as Irae T'sarran seeks to drive the Hellspawn out of the city and Kurgoth tries to complete his conquest. From time to time, Kurgoth gathers his warriors and tries to storm the castle with the aid of his demonic allies. So far, the magical defenses of Irae and her followers have frustrated Kurgoth's attempts to take the castle by assault. A handful of spies and rogues prowl the ruins, avoiding the conflict as they search for means to survive and profit by the chaos in the city.

Features of Maerimydra

Maerimydra has been thoroughly destroyed in the long ten days of looting, burning, and pillaging since the city's fall. Virtually all the city's 11,000 residents died in battle or during the sack of the city. A few hundred have fallen into wretched captivity at the hands of Kurgoth's savage warriors, and still others managed to escape into the Underdark. Kurgoth holds the wreckage of the city and Irae the castle. Both sides avoid the Shattered Tower and the Courtyard of Lolth.

The Cavern

Maerimydra occupies a great cavern about 4 miles below the surface. From north to south the cave is almost 3/4 mile wide, and it is about 1/2 mile from east to west. As previously noted, this was formerly a city of about 11,000 inhabitants, although only half of these were drow—the rest were slaves, mostly goblins, bugbears, and ogres. Hundreds of these former thralls now swell the ranks of Kurgoth Hellspawn’s army.

The floor of the cavern is highest in the northwest corner, where several noble drow houses built their palaces on forbidden plateaus overlooking the city. Most of the city lies in a large middle tier, dominated at its center by the small plateau on which Castle Maerimydra stands. To the east, the cavern drops again in two large depressions. The Lake of Blood sits in the larger of these.

Many lesser caverns surround the city. In fact, player characters who marched to Maerimydra from Szith Morcane or one of the other surface accesses undoubtedly passed through some of these. The route through this mazelike network is clearly marked, and no sites of interest to the heroes are located in this region, so no maps of these outlying caverns are provided. They are significant only in that the fungi, lichens, and creatures found in them formerly supplied much of the city’s food, and some number of drow refugees shelter there, hiding from invader warbands. If the players want to find a secure place to camp or rest a mile or two outside the city, these outlying caverns can suffice.

BUILDINGS AND RUBBLE

All the city blocks indicated on the map are now a mix of standing buildings, piles of rubble, and burnt-out shells. Smoke and dust hang in the air, and destruction is everywhere. Dozens or hundreds of bodies, both drow and goblinoid, lie unburied in each block. The terrible stench is alleviated only slightly by the fact that many of the corpses were burned in the fires that swept over the city.

Furniture and personal belongings of a thousand different descriptions can be found in and around the ruined blocks—tables, chairs, couches, workbenches, tools, kitchen utensils, and so on. Most have been broken, ruined, or vandalized. Many basements lie beneath the ruined buildings, providing dozens of good hiding spots in each block.

THE CITY STREETS

The drow of Maerimydra did not sit idly by while interlopers from other drow communities started moving into lands they had long desired as their own. Before the fall of Maerimydra, scouts and raiders from the city were a constant presence in the forest and a constant thorn in the side of the interloper drow. These Maerimydra drow are numbered among the Spider-kissers and Underdark Raiders described in the Forgotten Realms Campaign Setting (page 125). The officer’s letter in S7 is intended for a Maerimydra drow living in Cormanthor.

With Maerimydra in ruins, any plans its leaders had for Cormanthor have become moot. The refugees from the city are too few to provide a significant challenge to the Auzkovyn drow or House Jaelre—at least not without clerical support. Irae T’sarran has not yet turned her attention to the surface, so the drow in Cormanthor are safe from her plotting for now.
Visibility: Visibility is unrestricted up or down a street, although buildings standing close on either side prevent characters from seeing what lies beyond the front row of buildings in any given block. Smoke and haze reduce spotting distances to 2d4 × 10 feet, and the prevalent light is about as bright as moonlight.

Movement: Movement on the streets is fast and easy, but it carries the greatest risk of detection (see Random Encounters, below).

Ceiling and Walls
The cavern ceiling is 600 feet high at its highest point, over the boulevard between the Courtyard of Lolth and Castle Maerimydra. Smoke from the burning campfires and the smoldering rubble fills most of the cavern's upper reaches. Any character more than 100 feet above the ground is surrounded by smoke thick enough to limit visibility to half normal and grant three-quarters concealment to creatures within it.

Maerimydra's fires would have fouled the cavern's air to a lethal point long ago, but the city's builders created a number of tiny, hidden portals to the Elemental Plane of Air in the upper reaches of the cavern. Fresh air enters above the noble palaces in the northwest corner, and a soft but noticeable breeze blows south and east, exiting through another array of tiny portals in the vicinity of the East Gate. Smoke and dust from the rubble are drawn up and carried along.

The walls of the great cavern, and the mighty pillars found within it, tend to be rough and steep (Climb DC 25).

Invaders' Bivouacs (EL 13–14)
Kurgoth's army is encamped throughout the city of Maerimydra. Almost sixty campsites are scattered through the ruins of the city, mostly clustered in two spots: the Coliseum (M12), where Kurgoth Hellspawn has his headquarters, and Castle Maerimydra (M8).

Each bivouac is marked on the map of Maerimydra. Over time the gangs abandon one site and choose another, so feel free to rearrange the camps. Most of the bivouacs are marked by smoldering, smoky cookfires, filthy bedrolls, and untidy heaps of assorted victuals, such as lichen flour, wheels of cheese, pickled mushrooms, casks of water, and so on.

In general, parties moving through Maerimydra need concern themselves with a bivouac only if they happen to enter the map square in which it is located. Each square is 100 feet, so parties passing only one square away from a bivouac are reasonably safe.

Creatures: Each bivouac is home to 3d6 ordinary goblins, 2d4 ordinary ogres (50%), or bugbears (50%), and 1d6–3 common drow thralls (captives taken in the fall of the city) in wretched condition. In addition, 1d3 ogre mages and an ogre champion (50%) or 1d3 fire giants (50%) occupy each campsite. It is not difficult to sneak past a bivouac. For convenience, assume that the goblins and ogres or bugbears take 10 on their Spot and Listen checks. Roll only for the ogre mages, ogre champions, and fire giants.

Treasure: Each giant's bag contains 1d4+1 throwing rocks, 3d4 mundane items (see the table in the Monster Manual), and a tinderbox. Common ogres and bugbears normally carry a handful of coins apiece, amounting to 1d10 gp and 2d10 sp. The goblins carry nothing worth looting.

Development: Each time surface dwellers skirmish with a bivouac or a patrol, Kurgoth learns of the fight 1d4 hours later unless every monster was slain and no one was close enough to hear the fight. In that case, Kurgoth's patrols stumble across the evidence and report 2d8 hours later. After three such reports reach the fiendish commander of the horde, Kurgoth orders his army to increase its vigilance. From that point forward, warriors in camps near a bivouac that is under attack seize their weapons and rush over to assist their comrades, making it much more dangerous to attack the encampments. The army's increased vigilance lasts for 1d3 days unless more attacks on bivouacs occur. Each new attack extends the army's vigilance by another day.

Random Encounters in Maerimydra
The cavern of Maerimydra contains two literal armies, one consisting of more than a thousand goblins, ogres, giants, and demons, and the other made up of zombies of all sizes, some skeletons, and a large number of revenants. Check once per hour to see if the characters stumble into one of... the encounters described below. The chance of an encounter depends on the characters' ability to move stealthily:

DROW SCOUTS (EL 14)

While Kurgoth's army claims most of the cavern, Irae T'sarran sends teams of scouts (supported by undead troops) out from the Tower on a regular basis, primarily to gather information about enemy activities but occasionally to perform surprise raids. Such a group consists of a single cleric/ranger and five revenants who were rangers in life.

- Revenant Drow Rangers: hp 46, 35, 33, 33, 26; see page 146.
- Cleric Scout: hp 76; see page 141.

ETHEREAL SCOUTS (EL 16)

A group of Irae T'sarran's followers regularly patrols the cavern of Maerimydra ethereally, avoiding all contact with Kurgoth's forces. These scouts likewise avoid the characters, but characters under see invisibility or true seeing effects can see the ethereal patrol and may choose to engage it.

Taharak, the leader of the ethereal scouts, is the ghost of a powerful drow fighter. He was a mighty force for the cause of Lolth in life, but he abandoned Lolth in favor of Kiaransalee after dying and becoming a ghost. He is an impressive figure in full plate armor with a helm crafted to resemble a leering skull. He wields a spiked chain but uses his withering touch for any disturbance among the camps, since large groups of mostly chaotic evil monsters tend to get along poorly, and brawls erupt quite often. A heavy patrol may arrive on the scene if the characters attack a bivouac (see above).

A heavy patrol consists of two fire giants and three ogres, led by a hezrou demon. A hezrou resembles a massive, roughly humanoid toad with arms in place of forelegs. Its wide mouth has rows of blunt, powerful teeth, and long spines run the length of its back. Unlike the fire giants at the broken gates (M1), those on patrol wear ordinary chainmail.

- Fire Giants: hp 143, 127; see Monster Manual.
- Hezrou Demon: hp 74; see Monster Manual.
- Treasure: Each giant's bag contains 3d4+1 throwing rocks, 3d4 mundane items (see the table in the Monster Manual), and a tinderbox.

THE HIDDEN (EL 13)

From their secret hideout at M4, the Hidden creep out to spy on the forces of both Kurgoth Hellspawn and Irae T'sarran. They keep their eyes open for suspicious activity, including drow moving around. They also respond (though often slowly) to any disturbance among the camps, since large groups of mostly chaotic evil monsters tend to get along poorly, and brawls erupt quite often. A heavy patrol may arrive on the scene if the characters attack a bivouac (see above).

- Abyssal Ghouls: hp 111, 83; see Appendix 1.
- Ghasts: hp 31, 27, 25, 19; see Monster Manual.
- Heavies: hp 111; see Monster Manual.

GHUL PACK (EL 13)

Abyssal ghouls prowl among the ruins of the city in search of corpses to devour. This encounter is with two of these creatures, accompanied by five ghasts. Summoned to Maerimydra to aid Irae T'sarran, the vile, corpse-eating undead harry the forces of Kurgoth Hellspawn. They eagerly attack any surface-dwellers they encounter, although they do not trouble a party that is apparently composed entirely of drow.

- Abyssal Ghoul: hp 108; see Appendix 1.
- Ghast: hp 31, 27, 25, 19; see Monster Manual.
Weave Disruptions

The presence of the Undying Temple at the top of Castle Maerimydra and the growing influence of the orb of negative energy at the temple’s heart is beginning to corrupt the fabric of magic in the vicinity of Maerimydra. Consult the timeline in the Introduction to determine how far the Weave disruptions have spread. These disruptions are similar in some ways to the wild magic and dead magic zones that have plagued Faerûn since the Time of Troubles, but their effects are dependent on the type of magic used. The field of Weave disruption enhances spells that use negative energy while impeding spells that use positive energy.

Enhanced Magic: Necromancy spells (except those that use positive energy), all other spells and spell-like abilities that use negative energy, and spells with the death or evil descriptor (as well as spell-like abilities that mimic those) are empowered as if the Empower Spell feat had been used with them, though spells so affected don’t require higher-level slots. Spells and spell-like abilities that are already empowered are unaffected by this benefit. Spells cast from wands, staffs, or scrolls are likewise impeded, but other magic items (such as potions) are unhindered. The Weave disruption also imposes a –4 penalty on Fortitude saving throws made to remove negative levels if such are attempted while within its area.

Effects on Undead: The Weave disruption is similar to a detect spell in its effects on undead. Charisma checks made to turn undead within a disruption take a –3 penalty, while Charisma checks made to rebuke or control undead gain a +3 profane bonus. Undead within the area gain a +1 profane bonus on attack rolls, damage rolls, and saving throws.

Detecting the Weave Disruption: A character who views the Weave disruption with a detect spell detects the presence of magic on the first round and the existence of some kind of disruption on the second round. A character who studies the area for 3 rounds can attempt a Spellcraft check (DC 30) to determine its effects and its exact borders.

Weave Disruptions and the Shadow Weave: Shadow Weave spellcasters are unaffected by these disruptions in the Weave. Such characters can detect a disruption normally (even if they have the Insidious Magic feat), since it is essentially necromantic in function.

Part 3

Tactics: Wisp, Logala, and Guk are all quite stealthy, and they normally move about the cavern at half their normal speed in order to Hide as they move. If they spot the characters before the characters spot them, Logala and Guk hide and ready attacks from concealment, while Wisp creeps up to determine whether the party is interested in talking. “Posset! Want to trade some food for information?” she says, “We can tell you everything that’s going on in this city, humans.”

If the party attacks, Wisp uses her shadowdancer abilities to disengage while Logala and Guk cover her escape with crossbow fire. If the characters agree to hear her out, she asks them to follow her to M4, the Hidden’s hideout. Wisp wants the characters to deal with Hamadh (see M3), the leader of the Hidden, while he has the group to protect him. She simply gives up and leaves if the party refuses to follow.

Walking Dead (EL 12)

As in Szith Morcane, Irae’s followers in Maerimydra subjected some of the captured Lolth-priestesses to the gruesome process of transformation into quth-marens. A small number of these creatures roam the city cavern in the company of other undead, slaughtering bands of Kurgoth’s soldiers and dwelling, but if one of them is downed in combat, the other chooses the better part of valor. The survivor teleports away to warn Kurgoth that a powerful band of adventurers is wandering the city. Kurgoth does not order his army to full vigilance until he is convinced that the heroes are a threat.

Winged Terror (EL 18)

A single balor patrols the air above the cavern floor, generally staying close to the top of Castle Maerimydra. He pays little attention to the ground, but characters flying above the city may attract his notice. This demon is called Badrazel, and he is Kurgoth’s chief lieutenant and personal “fixer.” He is hot-tempered enough to press a fight against almost any foe, and he breaks off to report to Kurgoth only if reduced to 20 or fewer hit points.

A balor is a towering humanoid (about 12 feet tall) with Large Zombies (4): hp 29 each; see Monster Manual.

Winged Patrol (EL 17)

Several pairs of vrock demons circle around the cavern in the air, scouting for Kurgoth. They descend to investigate anything suspicious. A vrock resembles an 8-foot-tall, humanoid vulture with strong limbs covered in fine gray feathers and a long neck topped with a vulture’s head. All four limbs end in wickedly sharp claws, and its beak is made for tearing flesh.

Vrock Demons (2): hp 61, 60; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: The vrocks would love nothing more than to win glory for themselves by dealing with an incursion of surface-dwellers, but if one of them is downed in combat, the other chooses the better part of valor. The survivor teleports away to warn Kurgoth that a powerful band of adventurers is wandering the city. Kurgoth does not order his army to full vigilance until he is convinced that the heroes are a threat.

All four limbs end in wickedly sharp claws, and its beak is made for tearing flesh.

VROCK DEMONS (2): hp 61, 60; see Monster Manual.

TACTICS: The vrocks would love nothing more than to win glory for themselves by dealing with an incursion of surface-dwellers, but if one of them is downed in combat, the other chooses the better part of valor. The survivor teleports away to warn Kurgoth that a powerful band of adventurers is wandering the city. Kurgoth does not order his army to full vigilance until he is convinced that the heroes are a threat.

Msterreich (EL 12)

As in Szith Morcane, Irae’s followers in Maerimydra subjected some of the captured Lolth-priestesses to the gruesome process of transformation into quth-marens. A small number of these creatures roam the city cavern in the company of other undead, slaughtering bands of Kurgoth’s soldiers and avoiding contact with more powerful groups.

CReATURES: The composition of these undead bands varies widely, but a typical one is presented here. Feel free to create different groups if this encounter happens multiple times.

dark red skin and massive, clawed hands. He has huge wings, and his body is wrapped in dancing red flames.

Balor Demon: hp 122; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: Badrazel makes use of his unholy aura ability early in the fight to fortify himself against enemy attacks. Against flying foes, he uses two tactics. First, he attempts to entangle winged creatures with his whip, releasing the weapon to fall with the entangled victim. Second, he targets creatures flying through magical means with greater dispelling.

Badrazel was called, not summoned, so he can use his gate ability to bring in demonic reinforcements if necessary.

Sites in Maerimydra

There are hundreds of different structures in the ruined city, ranging from the hovels of goblin field slaves to the palaces of the great nobles. Only a few are described in detail in this section. Feel free to add more sites if you wish, but keep in mind that the more time the characters spend exploring the ruins, the less time they have to stop Irae T'sarran from having her Great Day of Vengeance.

M1. BROKEN GATES (EL 14)

Two massive iron gates, twisted off their hinges and crumpled on the ground, mark the end of this long tunnel and the entrance to Maerimydra. Four hulking figures block the path to the city, their features lost in shadows cast by burning fires behind them.

The once-mighty gates to the city of Maerimydra were crushed under the onslaught of Kurgoth Hellspawn’s army.

Creatures: Four fire giants, elite troops from the Hellspawn’s army, stand guard at the city gate. They prevent anyone from entering or leaving the city.

The fire giants are typical for their kind, standing 12 feet tall and resembling immense dwarves. Their skin is coal-black and their hair flaming red or orange. These four wear blackened steel full plate armor, which increases their Armor Class and reduces some skill modifiers compared with the standard giant in the Monster Manual.

Fire Giants (4): hp 147, 144, 141, 138; AC 24, touch 8, flat-footed 24; Climb +10, Jump +10; see Monster Manual.

Treasure: Each giant’s bag contains 1d4+1 throwing rocks, 3d4 mundane items (see the table in the Monster Manual), a tinderbox, 1d6 × 100 gp, and a potion. The first giant’s bag also contains a potion of bull’s strength, the second giant’s bag has a potion of cure light wounds, the third giant’s bag has a potion of vision, and the fourth giant’s bag holds a golden yellow topaz worth 400 gp.

M2. THE FIELDS OF WAR

Dust and smoke hang heavily in the air, but for a brief moment the sluggishly roiling clouds part, permitting a glimpse of what lies beyond the gate. In stark contrast to the ever-present darkness that shrouds most of the Underdark, this enormous cavern is alight with fire. Immediately in front of you lie extensive fields of fungus and a paved road leading south into the wreckage of a mighty city.

Campfires are scattered throughout the city, most concentrated around a large, oval structure on the far side of the cavern, more than 1/2 mile away. To your left, larger fires burn in a ring around a towering fortress of dark elegance. The castle rises from a steep plateau in swooping ramps and great landings. Arching bridges connect the main towers to additions built into the massive stalactites that hang down beside them. Faerie fire in hues of green, blue, and violet dances along the structure’s swirls and curves.

Opposite the great castle, on your right, stands a squat building that resembles a gigantic stone spider. It is lit by softly glowing globes of magical radiance, and it seems to have been heavily damaged. Close before you, beside the road leading to the city, figures move around a camp or bivouac by a large, smoky fire.

Far above, the cavern ceiling is shrouded in roiling clouds of smoke. In fact, it looks like there are fires burning even in the air overhead—the clouds of black smoke are occasionally lit from within by a lurid red light. After each such flash, billowing clouds of smoke descend again, blotting out the city.

This is the great cavern of Maerimydra. The fields around the northern gate once provided sustenance for the city’s population with fungus farms and rothé herds. Smoke and haze generally reduce spotting distances to $2d4 \times 10$ feet, and the reflected firelight is about as bright as moonlight. Randomly appearing clear spaces in the smoke give travelers occasional glimpses of the true size and grandeur of the cavern.

M3. THE SHATTERED TOWER (EL 14)

The air here crackles with magical energy that seems to spark from the rubble strewn across the cavern floor. A ring of stones in the shape of an oval marks the rough outline of a destroyed building. Countless loose stones, ranging from huge blocks of marble to tiny pebbles, are the only other remnants of whatever structure used to stand here.

The tower of Maerimydra’s archmage was always called the Shattered Tower because its walls were cracked like broken glass—a purely aesthetic effect. The name took on new meaning after Irae T’sarran stormed the tower and killed Duneth Wharreil. Now, no stone remains standing on another.

Creatures: Two undead creatures haunt the wreckage of the Shattered Tower. These former apprentices of the archmage became silverraiths (see Appendix 1) after losing a spell duel against their former master, who had already been

Politics in Maerimydra

The situation in Maerimydra lends itself to a different style of play than most of the rest of this adventure. While it is certainly possible for characters who have attained 15th level or higher to storm in and start wreaking some havoc of their own in the already-chaotic ruined city, a subtler approach is also feasible. Two warring factions control the ruins: the armies of Kurgoth Hellspawn (the goblins, ogres, demons, and fire giants) and the legions of Irae T’sarran (revenants, ghosts and other undead, and drow cultists). In addition, a few survivors hide in Maerimydra (see the Hidden) and are no friends to either faction.

Clever and diplomatic parties can play these factions off against each other, or use one (likely Kurgoth’s gang) to help them defeat the other. Kurgoth certainly has nothing to lose by helping a group of adventurers stop Irae T’sarran. If the characters prove their usefulness to him, perhaps by intervening in a skirmish, he may commission them as assassins and infiltrators to help him bring his army inside the castle.

Bargaining with Irae T’sarran to remove Kurgoth from Maerimydra is likely to involve a great deal more plotting and scheming on both sides of the negotiating. Such a deal is also likely to end in betrayal, one way or another. Alliance with Irae is a dangerous course for the players to pursue, but it is still feasible (particularly if the characters are evil drow). Irae T’sarran is desperate to rid herself of the fire giant fiend, which makes her willing to listen to a proposal from a band of adventurers.

Political maneuvering of this sort relies heavily on role-playing and off-the-cuff decisions by the Dungeon Master during play—much more so than straightforward combat does. All of the potential variables cannot be anticipated and adequately covered in a published adventure, even one of this scope. Use the following guidelines in combination with the adventure background and individual NPC descriptions to steer you through a complicated encounter like this.

- Make extensive use of Diplomacy checks to modify NPC reactions (see Chapter 5 of the Dungeon Master’s Guide), and Bluff checks opposed by NPC Sense Motive checks.
- If players roleplay their interactions with the NPCs particularly well, freely assign circumstance bonuses of +2 or even higher.
- Try to make a diplomatic encounter at least as exciting as a combat one. Keep all the players involved, not just the ones whose characters have the best Charisma scores or the most ranks in Diplomacy. If characters aren’t actively participating, you can still ask them to make Sense Motive checks to pick up on something the charismatic character might miss, for example. Look at the Encounter Level for each encounter, and don’t let the characters get off any easier for talking their way through than for fighting.
- Finally, if you succeed in making diplomatic encounters as difficult as combat ones, make sure you award as many experience points for them as you would for combat, using NPC Challenge Ratings as a guide.
so transformed. They rise up from the ground whenever any creature approaches within 60 feet of the ruins and fight until no living creatures remain within that distance. They do not leave the area of the tower themselves. Silveraiths are incorporeal undead creatures that glow with pale blue energy (like that created by a chill touch spell). Their forms are vaguely skeletal but suggest the flowing robes they wore in life. A silveraith is illustrated on the back cover of this book.

Apprentice Silveraiths (2): hp 74, 51; see page 147.

M4. LAIR OF THE HIDDEN (EL 16)

A large inn stands at this intersection in the ruined city. Its upper stories seem to have been destroyed by fire, but its ground floor is more or less intact, even if the broken windows and smashed furniture out in the street indicate that it did not escape the attention of looters.

Refer to the map on page 12 of the map booklet. This inn once served various Underdark merchants visiting Maerimydra. It is now the home of a band of skulking drow rogues and spies who are neither followers of Kiaransalee nor undead minions of Irae T’sarran. The Hidden, as they have taken to calling themselves, are shapechangers, shadowdancers, and minions of Irae T’sarran. The Hidden, as they have taken to calling themselves, are shapechangers, shadowdancers, and other “invisibles” who have managed to escape detection since the fall of the city, dodging both Hellspawn patrols and T’sarran scouts.

The primary goal of the Hidden’s members (beyond mere survival) is to find allies to help them overthrow both Irae T’sarran and Kurgoth Hellspawn and drive their respective armies out of Maerimydra. The group’s ultimate aim is the restoration of the status Maerimydra held in the days before the city was taken over by Kurgoth and his followers. The group’s ultimate aim is the restoration of the status Maerimydra held in the days before the city was taken over by Kurgoth and his followers.

 Creatures: While three of the Hidden (Wisp, Logala, and Guk) roam the city, spying out new developments, the rest of the band (Hamadh, Kâras, and Chiirikk) hides out in a large, safe cellar reached either through a narrow stairway in the inn’s kitchen or via a secret trapdoor in the building next door (a ruined clothier’s shop). Chiirikk and Kâras stand watch in the ground floor of the inn, keeping an eye on the nearby streets from the gloom behind the broken windows. Their position grants them three-quarters cover and a +7 circumstance bonus on Hide checks to remain unseen from the street outside.

Wisp, Logala, and Guk are normally away from the lair. If they are all together, the Hidden are an EL 18 encounter.

Hamadh the Unseen: The leader of the group, Hamadh is a drow shadowdancer. He dyes his white hair black and keeps it cut short, and his skin is as inky black as the shadows he lives in. He dresses stylishly in black and dark gray, wearing shadow studded leather armor. He moves very gracefully, even in combat, swaying his greatsword in both hands like an extension of his lithe body. Hamadh is chaotic neutral, and he has grown uncharacteristically fond of the other members of the group (except Kâras).

Wisp: The other shadowdancer in the group, Wisp is a very small half-drow with a childlike appearance and demeanor. She wears a mithral shirt under her piwafwi (cloak of elvenkind) and carries a keen short sword. She is prone to babble when not trying to be stealthy, and even while she works her mouth moves silently in an endless internal monologue.

Logala Thenduk: This drow wererat rogue avoids detection by spending most of her time in rat form. She has a number of dure and normal rat allies, from which she gleans information about what’s happening in the city. Her personality resembles that of her animal form: inquisitive, sneaky, and always hungry.

Kâras: A divine seeker of Vhaeraun, Kâras is undeniably Hamadh and his followers can assist the party in four ways. First, they can explain the situation in Maerimydra—-Irae T’sarran and her Kiaransalee cult hold Castle Maerimydra, while Kurgoth Hellspawn’s army has sacked the city and besieges the castle. They volunteer this much even if their attitude becomes indifferent, since it demonstrates the potential usefulness of their information.

If their attitude becomes friendly, the Hidden point out routes by which the party can approach the castle without passing directly through the siege lines. A party circling around through the Slave District (M9) can stick close to the north wall of that part of the cavern and scale the nearby escarpments to come up behind the castle without being seen. The Hidden also point out that a flying party could pass over the siege lines undetected, but they warn the characters about the flying demons in the vicinity.

Third, and perhaps most importantly, Hamadh can provide the password that defeats Castle Maerimydra’s forbiddance spell. (He learned it from a cult cleric he captivated while scouting in the city.) Hamadh is slow to part with the password, because he suspects that Irae will cast a new forbiddance and change the password once her castle comes under attack. He reveals it if his attitude becomes friendly and a suitable deal is struck.

Finally, if the party changes Hamadh’s attitude to helpful, he not only gives them the password but offers to use his band to create a diversion so that the party can more easily slip past the siege lines. Treacherous parties might be able to use the Hidden to gain access to Kurgoth or Irae in another way—by betraying them to their enemies. Both the half-fiend and the priestess of Kiaransalee would look kindly upon anyone who delivered the Hidden into their hands, although this is hardly a good act.
Kâras and Chiirikk keep an eye on characters who spend more than a few rounds in the vicinity of the inn. If they are impressed with the characters (particularly if they happen to see the party defeat a random encounter) and believe they might be amenable to an alliance, Chiirikk disappears to fetch Hamadh the Unseen, the leader of the group.

If the characters detect the Hidden spies and attack, Kâras and Chiirikk flee immediately to set up an ambush with Hamadh in their cellar. They flee through their trapdoor and escape into the city if pressed hard. (The band members have prearranged meeting places with their scouts in case they are forced to abandon their lair.)

If the sentries summon Hamadh to meet the characters peaceably, he approaches them cautiously while making it quite clear that he wants to parley. Hamadh's approach to negotiation is simple. He suspects that he and the characters share a common goal—the overthrow of Maerimydra's new masters—and suggests that he can help them achieve that goal. He begins with an attitude of indifferent, but he is willing to strike a deal to sell them information. Hamadh is unlikely to volunteer his band as followers for the heroes; he is not looking for entanglements of that sort.
The Hidden are most interested in magic items, gems, and other small items of high value. Spells cast for their benefit suffice, too. Each 700 gp worth of items offered by the player characters gives them a +1 bonus on their Diplomacy checks to win the assistance of the Hidden, to a maximum of +20 for 10,000 gp worth of goods or services.

Development: If the heroes fight the Hidden, or even fail to strike a deal, Hamadh leads his band to a new hiding place among the ruined palaces (M5).

M5. Noble Plateau

This plateau is dominated by a number of large, fortresslike palaces and citadels. All seem to have been overrun by the invading army. Smoke billows from great breaches in their walls, and the rotting bodies of well-dressed drow swing from crude gibbets atop the palace battlements.

Kurgoth’s soldiers garrison this level only on the orders of their fiendish master, since the powerful drow who resided in the plateau’s palaces seem much more likely to rise as undead than the common drow of the city’s lower districts. The more isolated palaces (such as the compound at the northernmost end of the plateau) might make good hiding places for the heroes.

M6. The Courtyard of Lolth (EL 16)

A gracefully sculpted archway beneath the stony fangs of a great building in the shape of a spider marks the entrance to this large courtyard. Glowing orbs of magical light are set into the sides of the arch, shedding a pale, blue-green light into the entryway. The walls are decorated with an arachnid motif, though the spiders portrayed look distorted, alien, and definitely evil.

Beyond the archway, the courtyard itself is a blasted ruin. There may once have been a building in its center, but now there is only a blackened crater, still emitting wisps of acrid smoke into the unusually cold air. A dead fire giant lies in the courtyard, its eyes fixed and staring, with an expression of utter horror on its face.

Refer to the map on page 12 of the map booklet. The orbs in the archway create an invisibility purge effect. Any invisible creature passing through the arch becomes visible for an instant while underneath it. When the temple of Lolth still stood here, this effect was an important security measure, but now it is little more than a curiosity. The temple of Lolth here fell in two stages. During the initial assault by Kurgoth Hellspawn and his army, it was quickly cleared of its spell-robbed clerics and battered heavily in the process. Sometime later, Irae Tsarran leveled the temple after seizing Castle Maerimydra. The crater radiated a lingering aura of magic for a full six days after the temple’s destruction, but that aura has now faded. The fire giant was killed by the nightwalker (see below) while poking around in hopes of finding more loot.

Creature: The many deaths that occurred in this place, combined with the powerful negative magic energy that now suffuses it, have drawn a powerful undead monster to dwell near the blackened crater. This nightwalker—a 20-foot-tall humanoid figure composed of featureless darkness—lurks in the shadows around the crater, using invisibility and hiding skillfully (Hide modifier +20) despite its great size.

When the characters enter the courtyard, the nightwalker uses its summon undead ability to bring forth a spectre, then sends it forward to do battle with the characters in order to study their tactics. Then the nightwalker uses first haste, then one attack spell each round (cloudkill, confusion, hold person, and finger of death), followed by invisibility as its free partial action. When the characters dispatch the spectre, the nightshade emerges from hiding to battle them in melee, again using invisibility as its free partial action each round.

Treasure: The temple’s vaults were looted thoroughly during the attack on Maerimydra, so little remains here. The nightshade, however, has accumulated some wealth from its victims. Purses, pouches, and weapons lie in disarray in the small alcove behind the courtyard. The following treasure can be found in the pile: 44 pp, 1,650 gp, a pair of 120-gp chrysoberyls, a drow stole of cloth of gold worth 570 gp, a suit of +2 elven shadow chainmail, a +1 large steel shield, and a +2 flaming heavy mace.

M7. The Grand Boulevard

Almost 150 feet across, this grand avenue bisects Maerimydra into its northern and southern halves. At the east end, glimpsed occasionally through the drifting clouds of smoke, rises a great castle, its upper spires merging with the mighty stalactites of the ceiling. Many campfires burn near the castle. At the west end, a black spider-shaped building crouches atop a plateau overlooking the city. Great sweeping staircases lead up to each of these impressive buildings.

Once the busiest street in the city, the Grand Boulevard is a dangerous place to linger. The normal chance of a random encounter doubles for any party passing through this area.

M8. Castle Maerimydra (EL varies)

A plateau nearly 100 feet in height rises at the eastern end of a great avenue bisecting the city. A steep set of stairs leads up to the gates of the dark, elegant castle at the heart of Maerimydra. Its graceful curves and fluted battlements are weirdly beautiful, the very summation of drow aesthetics. Encampments of goblins, ogres, giants, and other creatures surround the castle. The monsters gather around their cookfires, squabbling, bickering, and conversing in a dozen different tongues.

The soldiers here are no more vigilant than those camped elsewhere in the city, but their sheer numbers present difficulties for characters trying to slip by without being noticed. When the party reaches the castle, continue with Castle Maerimydra.
unknown intruders of any sort from getting inside. The creatures lurk near level five of the castle, staying clear of the wraith spider there but watching the doors on either side of the bridge. They are easily 270 feet above the cavern floor and can be encountered only by flying or climbing characters.

Vrocks (3): hp 60 each; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: A vrock has no ability to see invisible or ethereal intruders, but it can detect the presence of invisible creatures within 30 feet with a successful Spot check (DC 20). If alerted to the presence of invisible creatures, the vrocks use detect magic to locate the general vicinity of their foes and then move about with teleport, searching for the intruders. If they cannot locate the invisible intruders within 3 rounds, one vrock teleports off in search of the balor (see Winged Terror, under Random Encounters above), returning with it in 2d4 rounds.

M11. LAKE OF BLOOD

Two small streams flow in from the cavern walls to fill this small lake. The water is murky and smells vaguely like blood. Splashes sound at odd intervals.

The Lake of Blood earned its name long before the sack of Maerimydra. Drow legends attribute the water's red-tinged color and acrid smell to a failed coup shortly after the city's founding, after which the rebels' bodies were heaped in the lake. The drow, and now the followers of Kurgoth, get their water from the streams, where it flows clean and pure.

The giants at M10 pitch rocks hundreds of feet out into the lake to alleviate their boredom, causing the splashes.

A. PUBLIC ENTRANCE

The main entrance to Maerimydra's coliseum lies along the northeast side, facing the city, but a smaller one can be found on the opposite side of the arena. Read the following if the characters advance through the main entrance.

The open doors allow access to a large public gallery beneath the coliseum's stands. This chamber is almost 200 feet long and 40 feet wide. The ceiling is close to 70 feet high at the outer wall and 20 feet high at the inner wall. Three magnificent staircases lead up to the seating areas above, and two small doors at either end lead to other areas of the coliseum's lower level. Flickering continual flame torches suspended from the ceiling illuminate the chamber. Several goblins lie against the back wall.
The six goblins are thoroughly drunk, having found a cask of good brandy during their looting of the city. The stairs lead up to the stands (M12).

B. KURGOTH'S QUARTERS (EL 0 OR 18)

These rooms were obviously the suite of an important drow. They are lavishly decorated with murals depicting cruel arena scenes, and old weapons are artfully arranged for decoration along the walls. A narrow window slit looks inward toward the arena floor.

This apartment was the home of the Master of Games, a drow official entrusted with the administration of the arena. Kurgoth Hellspawn has appropriated the suite for his own personal quarters until he succeeds in taking Castle Maerimydra.

A secret door (Search DC 20) leads from the inner room to A. The door is located behind a very large mural of a marilith demon and can be opened with a hidden catch.

If anyone looks out the window, refer to I for a description of the action in the arena.

Creatures: The first time the heroes visit the Coliseum, Kurgoth is in the stands above, watching with sadistic delight while his fiendish elephant Tusk kills ogres. After that, he can be found here. Two ogre champions stand guard in the outer room, while Kurgoth rests or schemes in the interior chamber. He has found the secret door, leading back to A, and he may flee through it to gather reinforcements if badly pressed by an attack on his person.

Tactics: Kurgoth may seem like nothing more than a bruiser, but he has a formidable array of spell-like abilities. He creates an unholy aura to protect himself if suddenly attacked, then uses his summon monster IX spell to conjure 1d4+1 fiendish dire tigers, which he directs to keep the attackers busy. He wades into melee after his spell-like abilities and guards have softened up the opposition.

Treasure: Kurgoth has the pick of the city’s plunder, so this room is filled with a marvelous array of valuables. Three large chests bulge with a total of 710 pp, 5,600 gp, and 15,400 sp. Fifteen fine chalices, platters, cases, and statuettes of various precious metals lie scattered about, each worth an average of 300 gp. The half-fiend’s favorite piece so far is a large crystal skull of exquisite workmanship, worth 3,600 gp.

In a locked iron chest (Open Lock DC 30) lie several magic items that Kurgoth has not yet distributed, including a carpet of flying (3 ft. by 5 ft.), bracers of armor +4, a ring of wizardry I, a +3 short sword, and a +2 mithral shadow breastplate.

C. ARENA ACCESS (EL 0 OR 16)

Two small portcullises block the passage circling the arena’s outer wall, and a large double door leads outside. On the inner wall, a 20-foot wide portcullis—now closed—leads out to the arena floor.
The portcullises guarding the interior passages are open, but the one sealing the arena presents a formidable obstacle.

Iron Portcullis: 3 inches thick, hardness 10; hp 90; AC 5; break DC 20; lift DC 28.

If anyone looks through the portcullis to see what's going on inside the arena, refer to I for a description.

Creatures: The rest of Kurgoth's personal guard—three fire giants and two ogre champions—quarter in the northernmost of these rooms, close to their leader's suite. When Kurgoth retires to his rooms, these loyal guards take up their stations here, ready to respond at an instant's notice. They leave the portcullis leading to the arena floor open because Tusk doesn't fit very comfortably in this room.

A surface dweller who suddenly appears in this room is likely to be set upon at once, but someone who forcefully demands an audience with Kurgoth Hellspawn has a small chance (Diplomacy DC 35) of being heard out and escorted. The source of the battle sounds is now clear. An enormous elephant decked out for war stands near the center of the arena. Chainmail barding covers its scaly-looking hide, and metal blades adorn its fearsome tusks. It trumpets loudly as its adversaries—three frightened-looking ogres—circle its enemies. Its allies roar and gesticulate wildly. In the center of the front row, an oversized fire giant cheers loudest of all. While the other fire giants have fiery red or orange hair, this one's hair and beard seem quite literally to be made of fire. He wears black full plate armor, and his eyes smolder like embers. He seems to be rooting for the elephant.

G. Kitchen

This room, evidently a kitchen, contains several large hearths. A huge cauldron rests in each fireplace, and pots and pans hang from hooks on the walls. A huge bugbear bullies several simpering goblins as they prepare a meal in one of the kettles. Meals prepared here were fed to the captives in the various holding cages, but Kurgoth has conscripted a few goblinoids to fix his meals now.

Creatures: The kitchen boss is a bugbear named Stamkk. Despite his size and utter brutality toward his goblin underlings, Stamkk is a coward of epic proportions who flees at the first sign of danger. The goblins follow in a yammering horde.

Bugbear: hp 23; see Monster Manual.

Goblins (4): hp 4 each; see Monster Manual. These goblins are unarmored and armed only with cleavers and kitchen knives.

H. Guard Quarters

These two rooms housed the guards who worked at the arena and looked after the slaves held here. All the drow formerly stationed here met bad ends in their own arena.

I. Arena Floor

The source of the battle sounds is now clear. An enormous elephant decked out for war stands near the center of the arena. Chainmail barding covers its scaly-looking hide, and metal blades adorn its fearsome tusks. It trumpets loudly as its adversaries—three frightened-looking ogres—circle cautiously.

Characters looking through the portcullises or windows on the west and south sides of the Coliseum can see a little more.

In the gallery above, a number of ogres and giants are watching the battle, cheering loudly and gesticulating wildly. In the center of the front row, an oversized fire giant cheers loudest of all. While the other fire giants have fiery red or orange hair, this one's hair and beard seem quite literally to be made of fire. He wears black full plate armor, and his eyes smolder like embers. He seems to be rooting for the elephant.

Characters looking through the portcullises or windows at the northern end of the stadium can't see Kurgoth, but they can hear him.
Narrow galleries rise high above the arena floor, but they seem deserted. Out of sight directly above you, however, several creatures are shouting quite loudly in response to the fight.

Creatures: The elephant is Kurgoth Hellspawn’s fiendish companion, Tusk. Kurgoth enjoys punishing disobedient or unruly soldiers by forcing them to fight his elephant in the arena. He does not hesitate to intervene if such a combat goes poorly for Tusk. At the moment, Tusk is fighting three ordinary ogres.

Tusk, Fiendish Elephant: hp 180; see page 149.

Ogres (3): hp 26 each; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: If anyone else suddenly appears in the arena, Kurgoth and his minions in the stands (J, below) instantly take notice. The half-fiend leaps into battle (using his spell-like abilities first) against anyone unwise enough to take a shot at his favorite pet.

J. THE STANDS

A steeply inclined, 40-foot-wide seating gallery circles this great building. The arena edge is 20 feet above the floor, and the back wall is at least 60 feet above the ground outside the structure. Four large stairways descend from the gallery into the depths of the stadium—three on the eastern wall, and one on the western.

The stands are mostly empty, except for a knot of figures at the northern corner. A number of ogres and giants are watching a pitched battle on the arena floor, cheering loudly and gesticulating wildly. In the center of the front row, an oversized fire giant cheers loudest of all. While the other fire giants have fiery red or orange hair, this one’s hair and beard seem quite literally to be made of fire, and his eyes smolder like embers. He wears black full plate armor, and large batlike wings stretch behind him, twitching as he cheers. In the center of the arena, a huge, armored elephant battles three frightened-looking ogres.

This area is not shown on the map. The stairs lead down to A, the public entrance to the Coliseum. The seating area of the stadium can hold almost four thousand drow-sized spectators. The arena’s walls are extremely smooth and steep (Climb DC 30), because the drow did not want condemned prisoners to escape by climbing up to the relative safety of the crowd.

Creatures: Kurgoth and his retinue sit in the front rows at the north end of the stadium. Characters who loudly proclaim their desire for an audience with the Conqueror of Maerimydra may be heard out, but Kurgoth sets his minions to attack characters who approach in any other manner.

Kurgoth Hellspawn, Conqueror of Maerimydra: hp 218; see page 149.

Ogres (7): hp 26 each; see Monster Manual.

Ogre Champions (4): hp 127, 119, 111, 103; see page 146.

Fire Giants (3): 154, 126, 121; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: The fire giants hang back to pelt spellcasters and archers with thrown boulders, while the ogres and ogre champions charge forward to engage attackers in melee. Kurgoth watches for a round or two to gauge the seriousness of the threat. The half-fiend prefers to use his powerful spell-like abilities to blast away at surface-dwellers impudent enough to attack him, especially while he has a cordon of guards to engage the enemy in melee.

Treasure: Each giant’s bag contains 1d4+1 throwing rocks, 3d4 mundane items (see the table in the Monster Manual), a tinderbox, a gem, and in some cases an additional item. The first giant’s bag holds a 40-gp bloodstone and a potion of aid. The second giant’s bag has a 700-gp black pearl and a 9-gp moss agate. The third giant’s bag contains a 70-gp sard and a +1 longsword.

Development: If the characters leave Kurgoth and his lackeys in the coliseum and return later, they do not find the same scene. Kurgoth retires to his quarters (M12B) between bouts in the arena. The characters are most likely to encounter him there on a return visit, surrounded by the same ogres and giants, with Tusk standing guard.

M13. WEST GATE

A roadway leads through the fungi fields to a great iron gate, which is closed and barred with a mighty bolt. Three fire giants sit by the closed gate. One is asleep, but the other two keep an alert watch.

Like the east gate, this portal was not destroyed in Kurgoth’s attack. The passage beyond leads through 60 miles of tunnels to the Underdark beneath Old Skull, in Shadowdale.

Creatures: Three fire giants, elite troops from the Hellspawn’s army, stand guard at the city gate. Since the gate is sealed and has been sealed for many days, they have reached an agreement—one sentry can sleep while the others watch out for any authority figure who might take umbrage at guards sleeping on duty. These giants wear blackened steel full plate armor, which increases their Armor Class and reduces some skill modifiers compared with the standard giant in the Monster Manual.

Fire Giants (3): hp 147, 144, 138; AC 24, touch 8, flat-footed 24; Climb +10, Jump +10; see Monster Manual.

Treasure: Each giant’s bag contains 1d4+1 throwing rocks, 3d4 mundane items (see the table in the Monster Manual), a tinderbox, and 3d6 × 100 gp.

castle Maerimydra

Castle Maerimydra was the seat of House Chûmavh before its fall. This enormous castle rises 270 feet, from the floor of Maerimydra’s cavern to its ceiling. Its seven floors housed hundreds of drow, from the exalted priestesses of Lolth to the common guards and servants who served the rulers of the city.

After the Archmage Duneth Wharric betrayed the city and brought Kurgoth Hellspawn’s horde within Maerimydra’s defenses, the surviving loyalists of House Chûmavh shut their castle’s gates and barred themselves within, content to allow the city to burn. But Irae T’sarran did not permit House Chûmavh to escape the city’s doom. Gathering her followers, she slipped in past defenses that had stymied giants and demons. In a long day of terrible slaughter, Irae’s forces destroyed House Chûmavh and took the castle for their own.
Kurgoth Hellspawn’s army still besieges the castle. The half-fiend hungers for complete victory, and as long as the castle is held by drow, that victory is denied him. Castle Maerimydra is warded with a potent forbiddance spell that prevents Kurgoth’s forces from entering, and to date the half-fiend has not found a way to breach the castle’s physical and magical defenses.

Even though Irae’s cult lacks the numbers and discipline of House Chûmavh, Irae’s living and undead followers have held the castle for more than two months in the face of Kurgoth’s siege. The high priestess of Kiaransalee has created many undead servants from the remnants of House Chûmavh. Her words to the surviving drow of the city are simple: Abandon the worship of Lolth and claim Kiaransalee’s protection to join her army alive, or die in futile opposition and join her forces as revenants.

The Castle Design

The maps on pages 13 to 16 of the map booklet show the floor-plan of Castle Maerimydra. The castle consists of three basic structures (the Great Tower, the Lesser Tower, and the South Column), to which Irae T’sarran has recently added a fourth component, the Undying Temple. The Great Tower is about 100 feet in diameter at its base, narrowing to a little more than 60 feet at its top, near the roof of the cavern. The Lesser Tower is 60 feet in diameter at its base, narrowing to 50 feet at the top. The two towers are joined by large halls and thick walls of stone on their lower two levels, but from the third level on up they rise as separate structures, linked only by three slender, arching bridges hundreds of feet above the cavern floor. These towers house the bulk of the castle’s inhabitants.

The South Column is not really a column; it is a gigantic stalactite hanging down from the ceiling. Its lowermost chambers are on level five of the castle, where it is about 40 feet in diameter. The South Column widens as it climbs, reaching a diameter of 80 feet at level seven. Its most notable feature is on the seventh level, where a shrine to Lolth has been converted into a temple to Kiaransalee. In this temple lies the only access to the fourth part of the castle, the Undying Temple. The Undying Temple is described in Part 4 of this adventure. It lies in a high, narrow cavern above the castle, in the roof of Maerimydra’s mighty vault.

Castle Maerimydra Features

The following features are common throughout Castle Maerimydra, unless specifically indicated otherwise.

Doors: The doors in the castle are neither locked nor stuck unless otherwise noted. Interior doors come in two varieties: wooden single doors (actually, wood from a particular type of tough, fibrous giant fungus) and stone double doors. Doors leading to the exterior of the castle, where enemies might conceivably arrive by flying or scaling the walls, are made of magically reinforced iron. Some special doors (the main gate in C18, for example) have special properties described in the appropriate location.

- Strong Wooden Door: 2 inches thick, hardness 7; hp 20; AC 5; break DC 25; Open Lock DC 30 if locked.
- Stone Double Doors: 4 inches thick, hardness 8; hp 60; AC 5; break DC 35; Open Lock DC 40 if locked.
- Iron Doors (exterior): 2 inches thick, hardness 15; hp 90; AC 5; break DC 35; Open Lock DC 40 if locked.
- Walls: Walls within the tower are made of magically treated superior masonry. Exterior walls are 5 to 10 feet thick and also magically treated. The walls have a hard, smooth finish and cannot be climbed by means of the Climb skill.
- Magically Treated Superior Masonry Walls: 1 foot thick (interior) or 5 to 10 feet thick (exterior); hardness 16; hp 180 (interior), 900 (5-foot thick exterior), or 1,800 (10-foot thick exterior); AC 3; break DC 75; Climb DC 50.
- Windows: The walls of Castle Maerimydra above the first level are dotted with narrow, slitlike windows. These apertures are specifically designed to make entry by flying creatures difficult, if not impossible. Each opening is only 6 inches wide and 4 feet high. A Small creature can enter a window with a successful Escape Artist check (DC 20), but a Medium-sized creature is too big to squeeze in.

Each window has a sliding iron shutter that can be easily lowered into place to seal the opening. There is a 70% chance that any particular window is shuttered. The iron shutters have the following characteristics:

- Iron Shutters: 1 inch thick, hardness 10; hp 30; AC 5; break DC 20.
- Floors: The floors within the towers are all smooth, polished stone. Many areas are floored with high-quality marble block.
Ceilings: Ceilings in the towers are 30 feet high. Each level of a tower occupies a total height of almost 40 feet, including the stone floors and ceilings. Powerful drow expect to use the height of the ceilings to their advantage in battle with levitate, fly, and similar spells.

Levitation Shafts: Several hollow shafts run through portions of the Great Tower and the Lesser Tower. These devices allow creatures to move from floor to floor within Castle Maerimydra without physical effort, simply by entering the shaft and concentrating on moving up or down. A constant levitation effect fills each shaft, with no limit to the amount of weight that can levitate in a given shaft at one time. A character can easily enter a shaft, rise or gently fall to the desired level, then step back out.

If two creatures are grappling or otherwise bound together within a levitation shaft and seek to travel in opposite directions, make opposed grapple checks for the creatures but substitute each creature’s Intelligence modifier for its Strength modifier when calculating its grapple check result. The winner of the opposed grapple check can move both creatures 20 feet in the desired direction (up or down one level). Flying creatures can move at their normal fly speeds in the shafts. The levitation effect does not slow them down.

The main shaft in the Great Tower is capped at level five by a grate in C38. The Lesser Tower’s levitation shaft does not begin until level four. The drow builders designed chokepoints in the castle’s accesses to slow down the movement of any attackers who breached the walls.

Magical Defenses

The entire castle is protected by a powerful magical defense—a forbiddance spell that Irae T’sarran cast soon after unseating the drow of House Chûmavh. It is not keyed to alignment (after all, most of the demons and monsters outside are chaotic evil) but to a password: “Isztava morthaum.” Because the capture of someone with knowledge of the password could give Kurgoth the edge he needs to mount his final assault, Irae has been extremely careful about whom she allows to leave the castle. Her undead minions are immune to most forms of torture of someone with knowledge of the password could give Kurgoth the edge he needs to mount his final assault, Irae has been extremely careful about whom she allows to leave the castle. Her undead minions are immune to most forms of torture and compulsion, so she has few concerns about sending them out into the city. Living drow are permitted to venture out only after Irae has assured herself that they will not allow themselves to be captured alive.

The forbiddance spell bars all planar travel into Castle Maerimydra, so it is impossible to teleport into Irae’s stronghold (or, for that matter, to cast summoning spells once inside it). The spell also prevents the entry of any creature that does not speak the password—even if Irae threw open the castle gates, not one monster in Kurgoth’s horde could set foot through the open door. A creature with spell resistance, however, may succeed in ignoring the forbiddance. (Roll 1d20+22; if the result is equal to or greater than the creature’s SR, it cannot pass.)

Getting past the forbiddance is difficult, but not impossible. Some good tactics include the following:

• Strike a deal with the Håkken (M4) to learn the password.
• Capture a living drow in a random encounter in Maerimydra (for example, the cleric scout in the Drow Scout encounter) and gain the password from her.
• Cast spell resistance on the characters and attempt to pass.

Once within the boundaries of the area guarded by forbiddance, creatures may resume planar movement. Irae’s spell prevents an ethereal character from crossing the threshold, but once inside a character may become ethereal, use dimension door to move from point to point within the castle, or teleport to a point outside the castle. Only the outer border bars planar movement, and it only prevents creatures from using such means to move into the warded area. The ethereal patrollers Irae sends out into the city can leave the castle easily, but they must manifest and use the password to reenter through one of the castle’s physical entrances.

Getting Inside

Presuming the characters have found a way to get rid of or pass through Irae’s forbiddance, they find several possible entrances to Castle Maerimydra.

The Main Gate: In front of the castle a grand staircase sweeps up and around from C1 to C18, on the castle’s second level. The gates at C18 are closed and locked, but a resourceful party armed with powerful magic can defeat the gate and walk in the front door.

The Postern Gate: On the castle’s east side, facing the cavern wall, stands a postern gate at C2. Like the main gate, this ground-level entrance is closed and locked, but it is somewhat less sturdy than the main entrance on the second level.

Flying: Flying characters have several additional options available to them. First, they may be able to squeeze inside a window. Second, several landings and bridges high up on the castle have doors leading to the interior. The battlements at C24, the balcony at C25, and the bridge at C42 are all potential landing spots; the other bridges are completely covered. Finally, the Observation Hall (C47) boasts windows wide enough to enter easily, but the windows are barred.

Making a Door: A disintegrate or passwall spell can breach the exterior walls of the castle in all but a few places, permitting entry at virtually any point on the map. (If the forbiddance is still in effect and the characters don’t know the password, it still bars their entry.)

Random Encounters

Irae’s forces do not aggressively patrol the castle, although they guard several of the key chokepoints described in the Key to Castle Maerimydra section. The denizens of the castle do have business in various spots around the structure, so they may be encountered away from their normal lairs.

The chance of a random encounter is 10% per 10 minutes. If an encounter occurs, roll d% and consult the table corresponding to the level of the castle being explored.

Levels 1 through 4

01–20 Abyssal ghouls
21–30 Assassin strike team
ABYSSAL GOULHS (EL 15–16)
Irae’s horrid allies from Kiaransalee’s domain, these vile creatures do not attack cult members. Instead they slake their hunger by slipping out of the castle to hunt whenever Irae allows it. These creatures are detailed in Appendix 1.

Three distinct gangs of abyssal ghouls roam the castle. The first normally lurks near C15 by the postern gate, the second can be found in C28, and the third frequents the levitation shaft at the top of C33. If a gang is wiped out or weakened in a random encounter elsewhere in the castle, make sure you record the effects in the appropriate room descriptions (and vice-versa).

Abyssal Ghoul Gang 1 (6):
- hp 115, 112, 107, 102, 91, 86; see Appendix 1.

Abyssal Ghoul Gang 2 (7):

Abyssal Ghoul Gang 3 (7):
- hp 120, 116, 116, 114, 98; see Appendix 1.

ASSASSIN STRIKE TEAM (EL 16)
Irae’s tsarran transformed four House Chumav monk/assassins into revenants, and they now serve as the favored troubleshooters within her stronghold. Their primary task is to defend the castle by neutralizing any intruders. The assassins wear black knee-length trousers and wrap their bracers of armor in strips of black cloth. Their chests are bare and show visible signs of the wounds that killed them. Their shaved heads are likewise bare and visibly injured. Each assassin carries a single dose of deathblade poison with which he coats his siangham blade before entering combat with a living foe. The assassins try to hide while studying potential targets, then kill them as quickly as possible with poison and death attacks. If that approach fails, they fight until obviously outmatched, taking full advantage of flanking in order to deliver sneak attack damage as often as possible. If they are unable to kill or incapacitate a single character in their first assault, however, they retreat and try again later.

The assassins patrol tirelessly. They have no lair as such in the castle.

Revenant Maerimydra Assassins (4):
- hp 75, 69, 68, 32; see page 149.
JHORGANNI (EL 16)
Jhorganni, the drider vampire, is one of Irae’s chief lieutenants. She spends a lot of her time roving the castle, making sure that everything is as it should be. Unlike some of the living denizens of the castle, or even the intelligent corporeal undead, Jhorganni has nothing to fear from fighting to the death; she figures that the odds of enemies discovering her nest before she can recover are almost nonexistent.

Jhorganni can be found in C32 when she is not taking care of business elsewhere in the castle.

KHUMARR (EL 18)
The most fearsome martial champion of Kiaransalee’s cult, Khumarr is the commander of the castle’s defenses. He delegates most of the supervisory duties to the officers (C13), but he does spend a fair amount of time checking the security of the place and challenging the vigilance of his subordinates. Khumarr is normally encountered in C51, accompanied by 1d2 abyssal ghouls from the same area.

LAEREKH (EL 15)
The cult’s chief necromancer stays close to his rooms and rarely walks in the castle, except to visit with the dracolich Ice Ghost, his main ally. He spends most of his time mending the fabric of the world and preparing for the day he can break free from his prison. Laerekh is undoubtedly the most craven. He flees at top speed to any place that seems to be the most vulnerable.

LAEREKH (EL 15)

GHOSTLY PATROL (EL 16)
Among the castle’s other defenses, Irae has created a team of six former Maerimydraan captains, all of whom are now ghosts. Though they are fighters by training, they are stealthier than the assassins and better at finding stealthy intruders. In addition, they can walk through walls (or ceilings), vanish into the Ethereal Plane at will, and blast living beings with a glance. They move throughout the castle in ethereal or incorporeal form, keeping a watchful eye on the adventurers. While ethereal, they often space themselves out. When an encounter begins, two of them manifest in the first round, then the other four do so over the next two rounds.

GHOSTLY PATROL (EL 16)

WYRRUTH (EL 18)
The Ambassador of Shade frequently walks the castle halls, strolling little but observing much. He is not necessarily hostile to a band of surface dwellers; he views them as an unexpected new development that merits more investigation. He is not looking for a fight, but he is not interested in allying himself with a band of invaders, either. When not wandering the castle, Wyrruth can be found in C57.

WYRRUTH (EL 18)

KEY TO CASTLE MAERIMYDRA
The following pages list sixty locations in- and around the castle. Unnumbered hallways are simply hallways, some with a modest amount of decoration such as tapestries or murals, others made of bare black stone. Rooms that are not numbered tend to be linen closets, pantries, privies, storerooms, and other mundane enclosures one would expect to find in a large castle.

C1. THE GRAND STAIR
A mighty castle of dark stone rises before you. You are standing at the foot of a very large tower, perhaps 100 feet in diameter, that rises several hundred feet in height and scrapes the cavern ceiling overhead. A smaller, more slender tower rises up beside the first, meeting the mighty stalactites of the cavern. To your right, the castle’s lower walls stand easily 60 or 70 feet in height, and you catch a glimpse of spikelike ramparts at the foot of the small tower. To your left, a great staircase of gleaming dark stone winds up around the larger tower.

No arrow slits pierce the castle walls—on the ground level—a design feature intended to reduce its vulnerability to picks, augers, and similar siege engines. Irae’s followers do not keep a close watch on this spot; they devote their attention to more vulnerable points, such as the doors leading in from the battlements (C24).

C2. THE POSTERN GATE
On the east side of the castle, facing the nearby cavern wall, stands a curved wall sheltering a large, sturdy door of iron. Two small loopholes pierce the iron door, but it would seem that the field of fire from the other side is restricted by the arrangement of the sheltering wall.

This back door was intended to allow small raiding parties to slip out and harry anyone besieging the castle. Irae’s followers have put it to good use.

POSTERN GATE: 4 inches thick, hardness 15; hp 180; AC 5; break DC 40.

The postern gate is locked and barred, but the lock can be picked from the outside (Open Lock DC 40). Success does not remove the bar—the outside lock was provided so that noble drow wishing to slip in and out of the castle discreetly could do so, provided there wasn’t an enemy at the gates.

If the characters have not dispelled Irae T’sarran’s forbiddance spell or learned the password to get through, they cannot enter the castle regardless of whether or not they manage to open the door.
Creatures: The drow guards in C3 keep a close watch on this gate and make good use of the loopholes to pepper intruders standing in the postern alcove with crossbow fire. The guards in C3 have 90% cover against any characters trying to return fire through the door. See C3 for details.

Development: If the villains discover that the party entered Castle Maerimydra through the postern gate, Cabrath Nelinderra places a symbol of insanity on the outer door, triggered by the approach of any nonevil creature.

C3. POSTERN GUARDPOST (EL 12)
This small guardroom protects the castle's postern gate. The room is about 20 feet wide and 30 feet long, although the back wall curves sharply. The door is made of exceptionally sturdy iron, with two loopholes side-by-side for firing out at anyone standing on the other side. A large double door leads out to the north. Four living drow and one clearly undead one stand guard here.

Irae's forces guard this room carefully, since Kurgoth's troops have tried to storm it on more than one occasion.

Creatures: Four drow guards and a revenant Maerimydra spellguard stand guard here. They have strict orders not to open the gate to anyone except drow or undead who know the password.

C4. REFECTORY (EL 12)
Several huge stone tables with plain benches beside them dominate this large, curving hall. Two large double doors exit to the south and the west, while at the north end of the room, well around the curve, is a light wooden swinging door.

The more powerful dark elves do not care to eat together, and the undead do not eat at all. Principally it is the drow guards of the nearby barracks who dine here, although from time to time one of the cult clerics decides to come down for a meal.

Creatures: Six off-duty drow guards are seated around one of the tables, sharing a meal in what passes for a companionable manner among the dark elves. If attacked by overwhelming forces, the drow guards use darkness and try to slip out through the kitchens and go for help.
C6. GREAT TOWER LEVITATION SHAFT (EL 15)

Four large pillars dominate this small room, surrounding a strange, glowing shaft of light 10 feet in diameter. The glimmer of light comes down through a hole in the ceiling 30 feet above, and it seems to go much higher than that. The same column of light links several more chambers above this one together. The whole shaft seems to go up hundreds of feet into the castle.

As noted under “Castle Maerimydra Features,” the levitation shaft carries any creature stepping into it to the desired level with a simple act of will. This particular shaft rises from level one all the way up to level five, but a heavy iron grate blocks access to level five (see C38).

Creatures: While this shaft is safe enough for the cultists to travel, a guardian makes it a perilous place for intruders. A doomsphere—the ghost of a beholder—drifts the length of this shaft from level one up to level four. The creature can most often be found on level three, lurking around the pillars and keeping an eye on who's traveling up or down.

When it manifests, a doomsphere appears as an incorporeal version of itself in life: a Large spherical creature with ten eyes on stalks and a large central eye above its gaping maw. The only way to destroy this doomsphere permanently is to kill a drow in the levitation chamber on level three, near where the beholder itself was killed many years ago. This appeases the twisted sense of vengeance that keeps the ghost lingering in the mortal world.

Doomsphere (beholder ghost): hp 83; see page 150.

Tactics: The doomsphere has a nasty trick to play on characters coming up from below. By coming up to the edge and tilting forward to look down the shaft, it can use its antimagic eye to cut off the levitation power. Any creature suspended in the shaft plummets to the bottom, a fall of 40 feet per level (or 120 feet from the beholder's favorite hiding place on level three). The doomsphere would like to catch several characters at once with this tactic, so it waits to open its central eye until it sees a good opportunity to drop more than one character down the shaft.

Development: If an alert has gone out, the drow guards in both areas marked C10 come out from their rooms to guard the lowest level of the levitation shaft. The doomsphere remains above and does not join this fight, although any loud or prolonged battle at the bottom of the shaft certainly attracts its attention.

C7. THE LOWER KITCHEN

Huge hearths against the walls, large iron cauldrons, and a bewildering variety of pots, pans, and dish cupboards make this room's purpose clear. A large stack of dried-out fungus stems looking suspiciously like firewood stands against the west wall. It seems that no one has been cooking much in here—only one small fire burns in a hearth along the east wall, and no one is present at the moment.

Alert on level one

The drow soldiers on this level have a plan for dealing with enemies who force the postern gate. If a drow guard escapes from C3 to sound the alarm, the forces inside prepare as follows:

Round 0: Guard leaves C3.
Round 1: Drow in C4 alerted.
Round 2: Drow in C4 turn over tables for cover and prepare to hold the intruders in the refectory.
Round 3: Vampire officers in C13 alerted.
Round 4: Drow guards in C12 alerted.
Round 5: Vampire officers from C13 reach C4, the refectory, and supervise the defense of that room.
Round 6: Cleric scouts in C9 alerted.
Round 7: Drow guards in C10 alerted.
Round 8: Drow guards from C12 muster in the hallway outside (C7) and prepare to join any nearby fight.
Round 10: Cleric scouts from C9 reach C7 and join any nearby fight.
Round 11: Drow guards from C10 take up positions in C6 and defend the levitation shaft.
C8. PANTRY

Fortunately for Irae's troops, the soldiers of House Chûmavh had spent years stocking their larders against the possibility of a siege. The gray flour is made from ground mushroom spores and bakes into odd-tasting but nourishing bread.

C9. CLERIC SCOUT QUARTERS (EL 14)

Four comfortable bunks occupy this small barracks room. A small footlocker stands next to each. The chamber is about 30 feet wide and 20 deep, but the back wall curves sharply.

This room is the home of the cult's four cleric scouts, multiclass ranger/ cleric of Kiaransalee.

Creatures: At any given time, two are out in the city leading a band of revenant drow rangers to harry Kurgoth Hellsawn's forces, while two are resting here. Since deadly danger is never far, even within Castle Maerimydra, the cleric scouts keep their armor on and their weapons close at hand.

Cleric Scouts (2): hp 79, 66; see page 141.

Tactics: Given a chance, these clerics prepare for a fight by casting their divine power and resist elements spells. If faced by invisible foes, the clerics make use of their invisibility purge spells early on. Otherwise, one hangs back to strike at intruders with attack spells while the other engages in melee. The two cleric scouts switch roles after a few rounds.

Treasure: Each footlocker is protected by an average padlock (Open Lock DC 25) and contains several changes of clothing and various personal belongings. The footlocker by the bunk on the northern wall also contains two potions of cure serious wounds.

Development: If the cleric scouts have responded to an alert, or have been encountered elsewhere through a random encounter, they aren't here.

C10. SMALL BARRACKS (EL 9 OR 15)

While the drow soldiers quartered here are no match for Kurgoth's giants and demons, they can hold their own against twice their number of bugbears and ogres, and they fear no goblins that walk Faerûn.

Creatures: Six drow guards are quartered in each of these rooms, but two from each chamber are on duty at the Main Entrance (C18). Off-duty guards keep their armor on and their weapons close at hand. Only two in each room are actually in their bunks resting.

T'sarran guards (4): hp 39 each; see page 150.

Tactics: If badly outclassed by intruders, these guards use darkness to try to escape to better fighting ground. They fight to the death if cornered, resigning themselves to continued existence as revenants in Irae T'sarran's service.

Treasure: A simple lock (Open Lock DC 20) secures each footlocker. The footlockers contain several changes of clothing and various odds and ends of no great value.

C11. THE CASTLE DUNGEONS

A dusty stairway winds down into darkness here. The air is cold and smells damp.

Several levels of dungeons lie beneath Castle Maerimydra, providing a vast amount of storage space for fresh water and foodstuffs—the living denizens of the castle are in no danger of starvation, despite Kurgoth's siege. There is nothing of particular note in the castle's subterranean levels, so they are not described in any detail here.

C12. LARGE BARRACKS (EL 14)

Row on row of double bunks and a variety of martial accoutrements hanging from the walls identify this room as a large barracks. At a quick count, there appear to be no less than twelve double bunks in here, and most are neatly made.
More than half of Irae’s surviving footsoldiers are quartered in this room. Four are on duty in C3, four are upstairs watching the Great Hall (C19), and six are relaxing in the refectory, but that still leaves ten soldiers in this room.

The small room to the south is a large washroom and privy for the barracks.

Creatures: Of the ten drow guards in this room, three are resting in their bunks. They require 3 rounds to rouse themselves and ready weapons. The remaining seven are dressed for battle and vigilant. (Knowing that an army of giants and demons is camped just outside tends to keep one’s senses sharp.)

T’sarran Guards (10): hp 39 each; see page 130.

Tactics: Like the guards in C10, these drow use darkness to try to escape to better fighting ground if confronted by foes who are out of their league. They fight to the death if confronted.

Treasure: Each double bunk has two footlockers tuckered under it. A simple lock (Open Lock DC 20) secures each footlocker. The footlockers contain changes of clothing and personal belongings of no great value.

C13. Officers’ Quarters (EL 14)
The door to this room is locked from the inside (Open Lock DC 25). Trying the lock or forcing the door warns the room’s denizens that they are about to come under attack. When the heroes open the door, read the following:

The furnishings in here—comfortable bunks, large trunks, and small writing desks—have been shoved into the corners to make room for three large coffins. The air seems cold and musty.

Formerly the residence of three minor officers of House Chûmavh’s army, this room has been taken over by three of Irae’s officers—vampire noble guards, to be precise.

Creatures: Three vampire noble guards lair in this room.
They leave the door locked and come and go by streaming under the door in gaseous form. If warned by someone trying the door, the vampires use their spider climb ability to scale the walls and take up positions on the north wall, about 10 feet above the door. They have an excellent chance of surprising anyone entering the room.

Vampire Noble Guards: hp 61, 55, 46; see page 138.

Development: If the level is alerted as described in the sidebar above, two of these vampires proceed to C4 to set up a defense of the castle’s interior, while the third rallies troops in C5 and directs them where needed. Any of these officers slain elsewhere should be removed from the encounter in this room.

Treasure: The vampires carry most of their treasure in the form of their equipment, but not all of it. In the middle coffin lies a large leather belt pouch containing a potion of neutralize poison (useless to a vampire), 55 pp, 160 gp, a fine deep-blue spinel worth 700 gp, four pink tourmalines worth 90 gp each, and a citrine worth 60 gp.

C14. Practice Hall
This round chamber is 40 feet in diameter, but almost 80 feet high. A globe of dim blue light wreathed in mist illuminates the ceiling far above. A stairway on the southern wall leads around to a balcony on the north side of the chamber, 40 feet above the floor. Doors lead out from the ground floor to the east and west, and a grand double door to the north.

The chamber is outfitted as a sparring area, with a thick canvas mat covering most of the floor. The walls are lined with iron racks that hold practice weapons, including six wooden swords and several quarterstaffs.

This room extends through two levels and comprises the bottom two levels of the Lesser Tower. The drow prefer to avoid it because an unusual undead creature haunts the room: a hezrou from Kurgoth’s demon army that has been transformed into a silveraith. The hezrou managed to slip inside the castle with a lucky check of its spell resistance and encountered the archmage in his new form. The demon destroyed itself when it attacked Duneth Wharreil with its spell-like abilities.

The glowing orb is simply a sphere of colored glass in which a continual flame burns. The dark glass mutes the light of the flame to a level the drow find pleasing. The practice weapons are not remarkable in any way.

Creature: The demon silveraith lurks in the vicinity of the light-globe at the ceiling (Hide modifier +22). Since the illumination cast by the light-globe does not extend to the floor of the practice chamber, the silveraith does not perceive intruders on the chamber floor until they ascend halfway up the steps leading to the balcony on the second level, unless they’re carrying light sources of their own or making some noise below (Listen modifier +31, with a –1 penalty per 10 feet).
The silveraith has reached a shaky agreement with the Kiaransalee cultists to guard this chamber against intruders, so it does not attack drow.

Silveraiths are incorporeal undead creatures that glow with pale blue energy, like that created by a chill touch spell. The demon silveraith’s form is vaguely skeletal, but it also suggests the hunched, froglike shape it had in life.

Demon Silveraith: hp 45; see page 151.

Tactics: The demon silveraith prefers to lurk at the top of the chamber and blast away at intruders with chaos hammer and unholy blight. It may also use an action to cast animate object on the practice weapons. It can animate all eight at once as Small animated objects. The weapons are unlikely to cause any harm to the intruders, but they may add to the chaos of the situation. At an appropriate moment, the demon silveraith reads an action to use its magic absorbing power, hoping to create more of its kind.

C15. Ghouls’ Nest (EL 15)
This small antechamber is a horrific sight. Bodies and parts of bodies, all gnawed and chewed upon, lie scattered about the room, and the place stinks of death. One door exits to the south and another to the west.
Before Irae's followers stormed the castle, this room served as quarters for the Master of Training, a highly skilled drow warrior who instructed others in the nearby practice room. The Master is dead, and this room has been claimed by some of Irae T'sarran's followers.

Creatures: This room is home to the first of the abyssal ghoul gangs described under Random Encounters. An abyssal ghoul looks similar to a common ghoul—a warped humanoid figure with bestial features. A foot-long tongue dangles from its mouth, trailing into smoky incorporeality at its tip.

Development: If these abyssal ghouls are encountered elsewhere in the castle, make sure to account for any damage or losses they have suffered.

C16. CISTERN ROOM

A large, stone-walled well or cistern of water sits in the northern corner of this small room, and doors lead out to the east and south. The room is otherwise bare.

The well in this room is periodically renewed from the huge water-caverns beneath the castle's dungeons. The cistern is a full 10 feet high, so it contains a large amount of water. There is nothing else of interest here.

C17. ARMORY

This room is littered with toppled weapon racks of iron. Dozens of weapons of all descriptions lie scattered about the room or jut into the air from the wreckage of the overturned racks, but many seem to be damaged and useless.

A slow and careful examination of the weapons in the room reveals four masterwork short swords, two masterwork hand crossbows, and three masterwork light crossbows among the ruin and disorder. No magic weapons have been left here, and a great many mundane weapons of no great value lie alongside the masterwork weapons.

C18. MAIN ENTRANCE (EL 15)

The grand stairs that ascend around the curve of the castle's great tower end at a great gate here, almost 40 feet above ground level. The gate is made of iron reinforced with bands of some other metal, and it is pierced by a pair of shattered loopholes.

The main gate is made of two magically strengthened doors of iron plate, reinforced by bands of adamantine. It has no external lock to pick and, once locked, can be opened only from the inside. At the moment the main gate is both locked and barred.

- Main Gate: 8 inches thick, hardness 20; hp 320; AC 5; break DC 40.

While a knock spell can undo the lock, it cannot raise the bar. If the characters have not dispelled Irae T'sarran's forbiddance spell or learned the password to get through, they cannot enter the castle regardless of whether or not they manage to open the door.

Creatures: The drow guards do not open this gate for anyone, since parties slipping in and out of the castle have been instructed to either use the postern gate or fly from the battlements or balconies above. They fire at enemies outside through the loopholes in the great gate. The guards have 90% cover against foes trying to return fire through the door.

- T'sarran Guards (4): hp 39 each; see page 150.

- Revenant Maerimydra Spellguard: hp 66; see page 170. The revenant has a mage armor spell in effect.

Development: If the heroes succeed in getting past the gate or come up on this room from the other side, continue with the following text:

Behind the castle's main gate is a large antechamber. At the northeast end of the room, a mighty double gate of iron and adamantine seals the castle entrance, while a large double door of stone emblazoned with a golden spider seal leads to the west. Four drow in white tabards with black skulls stand guard here, along with a gaunt undead creature dressed in the purple robes of a drow wizard.

Tactics: The guards fire through the loopholes at characters on the other side. Once every 2 rounds, the revenant spellguard moves up to cast a spell through the loophole at anyone who happens to be in the line of sight. If intruders get past the main gate and the forbiddance, one guard dashes off to C19 to alert the castle's denizens.

C19. GREAT HALL (EL 14)

Beyond the door lies a grand chamber, a magnificent hall lit with a double row of glowing green globes of light on the ceiling. The floor is black polished marble, and rich tapestries of gold and russet decorate the walls. In the center of the floor lies a gold inlay of a spider design. Large double doors lead to the north, south, and east, while three smaller panels lead to small rooms on the north and south. Several of the wall-hangings along the curve of the western wall are badly burned, and the room smells faintly of smoke.

The rulers of House Chûmavh hosted great banquets and receptions in this room, but Irae T'sarran has found no such use for the place yet. The cult posts guards here because the room is centrally located and easily accesses both the Greater and Lesser Towers nearby.

- Creatures: Four guards and a cult champion are posted here to keep an eye out for intruders. The guards are drawn from the barracks in C10, while the cult champion normally bunked in C29.

- T'sarran Guards (4): hp 33 each; see page 150.

- Cult Champion: hp 76; see page 171.

Tactics: The champion begins this encounter with her endurance and bull's strength spells in effect, since she casts them before going on watch. If alerted to approaching trouble by a guard from C18, the guards in this room prepare to ambush anyone coming through the east door. Two guards rake up positions flanking the east door, and the other two duck back into the nearby closets and close the doors to just a crack to gain 75% cover while they prepare to attack with their ranged weapons. The cult champion casts shield of faith and divine power and takes up a position by the doors leading to C14. She plans to unleash a couple of her ranged spells first, then close to melee with intruders.

If attacked without warning, the cult champion orders one guard to go spread the alarm as described in the sidebar. The guard runs for the northern door.

Treasure: The spider design inlay on the floor of this chamber contains almost 5,000 gp worth of gold. However, it requires several hours of painstaking work to rip out the gold wire, which weighs 100 pounds.

The cult champion on watch here carries two keys, which open the doors leading out to C24. These keys are passed from watch to watch.

Development: If the drow on this level are alerted to the presence of attackers, the denizens of C21 and C20 begin to trickle in to reinforce the Great Hall. Refer to the sidebar.

C20. Soldiers in Waiting (EL 16)

A deathly silence hangs in the air, in striking contrast to the press of bodies that fills the room. Row upon row of undead soldiers stands at the ready, completely motionless and utterly silent. A clear path through their ranks leads across the room to a door in the northern wall.

This room is a holding pen for Irae T’sarran’s lowliest troops, a horde of zombies. Every day she adds a few more animated corpses to the ranks here, building a force to be reckoned with throughout the nearby Underdark.

Creatures: Most of the zombies here (twenty-eight of the thirty-five) were formed from drow corpses and are Medium-size; the rest are fire giants (Large zombies). Though their numbers are impressive, their threat level is minimal. The party earns no experience for destroying them.

Three other creatures here provide some threat and challenge to the characters. Three revenant fighter/rogues (former slaves overseers like the ones in Szith Morcane) command the zombies. The revenants look like decaying drow corpses, but they are well equipped with magic chainmail, magic rapiers, slippers of spider climbing, hand crossbows with poisoned bolts, and other gear.

- Medium-Size Zombies (28): hp 13 each; see Monster Manual.
- Large Zombies (7): hp 29 each; see Monster Manual.
- Revenant Slave Overseers (3): hp 67, 50, 47; see page 171.

In the small room just to the north of the larger chamber lurk two other villainous drow. Two cult necromancers keep an eye on the revenant slave overseers, although they spend their guard watches here closeted together in the small antechamber, plotting the overthrow of Lareckh, the Chief Necromancer of Kiaransalee’s cult. These two fighter/wizards emerge from their room 2 rounds after any serious disturbance in the large outer room, flinging spells left and right.

The cult necromancers are male drow fighter/wizards in mithral shirts and billowing black breeches and cloaks. They wield keen rapiers.

- Cult Necromancers (2): hp 67, 63; see page 171.

Tactics: The necromancers prepare for a fight by casting stoneskin and shield. They have few damaging area spells prepared, so they can cast spells without fear of wrecking Irae’s undead troops. The revenants skulk behind the mindless zombies, trying to pass as drow zombies until they get close enough to flank and sneak attack any unwary characters who think they’re fighting mindless opponents.

C21. Upper Barracks

This is a barracks room fitted into the curve of the tower wall. Five double bunks line the walls. A faint stink of rotting flesh permeates the room.

Most of the rooms on this level of the Great Tower formerly housed soldiers, but this is the only one that still houses living troops—Irae T’sarran’s, of course.

Creatures: Six drow guards are quartered here, although they are none too happy about the fact that the rest of the level is packed with Irae’s mindless undead. These guards replace the soldiers on guard in C18 and C19 every few days in order to provide a break in the watch rotation.

- T’sarran Guards (6): hp 39 each; see page 150.

Tactics: If pressed hard, the guards bolt through the door to C22 and head for the levitation shaft. They know that the undead in the room next door will not attack drow, and they hope to join more of their living comrades on the lower level, believing that safety lies in numbers.

Treasure: As with the other barracks rooms, each soldier is assigned a footlocker and given a lock and key for it. In one of the empty, unlocked footlockers beneath an unused bunk, one soldier has stashed a small sack of dark cloth containing two 80-gp garnets, a drow house insignia (with levitation), and a ring of protection +2. One of the guards stole them from the corpse of a spellguard who was soon raised as a revenant, and he has decided that he’d rather not find out what the revenant might do if it spotted him wearing its former possessions.
C22. Ranks of the Dead (EL 6)

This room is an utter shambles, to the point that it’s hard to determine its former purpose. Several large workbenches stand along the walls, and an oversized hearth indicates that this chamber might once have been an armorer’s workshop. The room reeks of death now, and several large figures lurch aimlessly around the wreckage.

About a tenday before the characters arrived on the scene, a Hellspawn warband clashed with some of Irae T’sarran’s forces before the main entrance and suffered an ignominious defeat.

Creatures: Irae T’sarran ordered the corpses of the slain giants animated as zombies, since giants cannot become revenants, and they remain in this room. They attack any living nondrow that enter, as commanded, but they do not present a significant threat to the characters. Defeating them earns the characters no experience points.

Large (Ogre) Zombies (3): hp 29 each; Spd 30 ft.; AC 14, touch 8, flat-footed 14; Atk +4 melee (2d6+4, Huge greatclub); see Monster Manual. The ogre zombies still wear their hide armor and carry their greatclubs.

Large (Fire Giant) Zombies (3): hp 29 each; Spd 30 ft.; AC 16, touch 8, flat-footed 16; Atk +4 melee (2d8+4, Huge greatsword); see Monster Manual. The fire giant zombies still wear their chainmail and carry their greatclubs.

C23. Revenants’ Chamber

The door to this room is locked (Open Lock DC 30). Each of the revenant Maerimydra spellguards carries a key. When the characters breach the locked door, read the text below:

Two large couches marred by sword-slashes and axe-cuts lie overturned in this room, in the midst of other simple furnishings similarly damaged. A large wooden reading table sits near the window slit, and a cold hearth lies against the west wall. Several empty bookshelves line the other walls, but three large, heavy tomes rest on the reading table.

This room was formerly a lounge for the House guards. It is now used from time to time to study and prepare spells by the revenant Maerimydra spellguards under her command. One watches the postern gate, one guards the main entrance, and three attend Laerekh as bodyguards. None are here now.

Most of the revenants posted in various places around the castle have no assigned chambers. Unlike living guards, the undead are sleepless, tireless, and never need to be anywhere except on watch. Still, revenant spellcasters require a quiet place to prepare their spells, and so the revenant Maerimydra spellguards periodically retire to this room to study.

Treasure: One set of three spellbooks holds all the spells described in the revenant Maerimydra spellguard entry (see page 150). Irae’s agents bothered to retrieve only one of the wizards’ spellbooks, but the other four have had sufficient opportunity to decipher the arcane writings and make use of it as a borrowed spellbook.

C24. The Battlements (EL 0 or 16)

A long, crenellated rampart encircles the lesser tower like the prow of a great stone ship. The roof level is perhaps 40 feet above the ground outside the castle walls. On the west side of the battlements, an impressive staircase winds up along the tower’s face to a balcony 40 feet above. Two sturdy iron doors lead into the small tower, one on the west side, and one on the east side.

This is a dangerous place to linger, since it is outside the bounds of the forbiddance spell protecting the rest of the castle and thus exposed to the attention of the three vrocks who patrol the castle exterior (see M8 in the preceding section). The doors leading into the castle from the battlements are typical exterior doors. They are locked (Open Lock DC 40); the cult champion in C19 has the keys to both doors.

Creatures: The vrocks tend to watch the higher portions of the castle and are usually 100 to 170 feet above the battlements, but any light, loud noise, or unusual activity down here may attract their attention. Even if the party does nothing noteworthy, a vrock circling the castle may swoop low enough to come within 60 feet of the battlements and see characters skulking about out here (10% chance per minute).

Vrocks (3): hp 60 each; see Monster Manual.

C25. The Balcony (EL 0 or 16)

The stairway ascending the Lesser Tower reaches a small balcony on the south side of the structure, 40 feet above the battlements below and 80 feet above the plateau outside the castle walls. The view, though hardly unobstructed, is striking. In the eternal darkness of the cavern, the ring of watchfires outside the castle walls stands out dramatically. Another large concentration of watchfires burns near a great stadiumlike building far off in the southwest corner of the city’s immense cavern.

Like the battlements on the level below, the balcony is a dangerous spot. The door leading into the tower from the balcony is a standard exterior door and is locked (Open Lock DC 40). One of the cult clerics in C26 has the key.

Creatures: The vrocks are even closer, and there is a 25% chance per minute the characters loiter at the top of the stairs that one of the circling vrocks comes close enough to see anyone standing here.

Vrocks (3): hp 60 each; see Monster Manual.

C26. Cult Clerics’ Chambers (EL 10 to 12)

The doors to both of these areas are protected by glyphs of warding.

Glyph of Warding: CR 4; 5-foot radius (5d8 sonic); Reflex DC 16 half; Search DC 28, Disable Device DC 28.

Once the characters are past the glyph, read the following:
This room seems to be a minor officer's quarters. It is somewhat small, only 20 feet by 30 feet, and features a window slit, a hearth, two bunks, and a small privy nearby. A drow woman in heavy armor is here, brandishing a morningstar with a head of black iron and spikes of silver. She wears a white tabard with a black skull emblem.

Each of these two rooms is home to two cult clerics. However, one of the clerics from each room is serving with the ghost Taharak on the ethereal patrol, scavenging the city for bodies suitable for reanimation in Kiaransalee's service.

Creatures: The cult cleric in each room goes about her duties armed and armored, resting only four hours per day. These clerics are some of Irae's most trusted mortal minions, since they have served Kiaransalee of their own volition for many years.

Cult Cleric: hp 45 (east), 44 (west); see page 146.

Tactics: The cleric is warned of the approach of trouble by the detonation of the glyph on her door. Thus alerted, she prepares for combat by casting fire shield and divine power. The sound of combat in one of these rooms is very likely to be noticed by the cleric in the other. In a rare show of dark elf solidarity, the cleric in the room that isn't under attack casts her own power-up spells and emerges to join the fray 3 rounds after the glyph on her neighbor's door goes off (or she hears the first sounds of combat).

Treasure: The cleric in the east room carries a key to the exterior door leading out onto the balcony (C27). The cleric in the western room possesses a small wooden jewelry case, which she keeps under her bed. The case is protected by a glyph of warding identical to the one scribed on the door. It contains a set of silver and diamond earrings worth 650 gp, a silver choker set with diamond chips worth 200 gp, and a silver bracelet set with emeralds, worth 880 gp.

C27. LOWER BRIDGE

A short, slightly arched bridge joins the large tower to the smaller one here. It stands only a few feet above the sharply pitched roof of the hall between the two buildings. The covered bridge is about 10 feet wide, and its sides are lined with narrow windows open to the smoky air of the cavern outside.

The windows of the lower bridge are the same size as windows in the rest of the castle, making it very difficult to get inside. However, the bridge walls are no thicker than interior walls, so determined characters might be able to make their own entrance here, provided, of course, that they have already bypassed the forbiddance.

C28. DESPOILED LIBRARY (EL 16)

This dizzying chamber is illuminated by several green-glowing globes, suspended at different levels among monstrous bookcases that tower close to 30 feet in height. The room itself seems to be a full two levels tall, its ceiling almost 80 feet above. A slender staircase ascends along the curve of the outer wall to a wide balcony halfway up. Two large, grand doors lead to the south, and a smaller door painted with an odd hydra symbol leads to the west.

The books on this library's shelves seem to have fared badly in the recent fighting, and hundreds have fallen to the floor, strewn ing the place with torn pages. Several corpses and portions of corpses lie among the literary ruin, many disturbingly chewed upon. Several gaunt gray figures squat on the floor or clamber on the shelves, squabbling over the choicest pieces of meat.

Listing the library's contents here would simply take too much space. There are no magic books or spellbooks hiding on the shelves. Most of the tomes are genealogies, histories, and records of the mundane business of ruling a small city.

Creatures: The second gang of abyssal ghouls mentioned under Random Encounters is normally found in or around this desecrated library. Like the other abyssal ghouls roaming the castle, they have an understanding with the cultists not to devour any drow they come across, but most of Irae's living minions don't push their luck by spending much time in the ghouls' haunts.

Treasure: Characters determined to carry off whatever books they can, regardless of value, can recover approximately two hundred tomes of interest from the shelves. It takes at least 8 man-hours to sort through the mess and set aside books that may be valuable. Each book of interest weighs an average of 3 pounds and fetches an average of 10 gp. Most are written in the drow dialect of Elven.

C29. CULT CHAMPIONS' QUARTERS (EL 14)

Like the doors to the clerics' rooms on this level, the door to this area is protected by a glyph of warding. The cult champions are a little nervous about the nearby pack of abyssal ghouls in C28.

Glyph of Warding: CR 4; 5-foot radius (3d8 electricity); Reflex DC 16 half; Search DC 28; Disable Device DC 28.

Once the characters are past the glyph, read the following:

This room is finished with elegant lacquered paneling and contains three beds, a reading table, and a pair of armoires. A small door to the south leads to a washroom. Two drow women wearing white-and-black tabards over full plate armor are here, with gleaming scythes in their hands. A chesslike game lies forgotten on the table between them.

Three cult champions live here, although one is on duty in C19.

Creatures: The cultists are engaged in a game of sava, the drow version of chess, but like many of Irae's followers they view their situation in the castle as perilous enough to stay ready for any danger.

Cult Champions: (2) hp 73, 61; see page 151.

Tactics: If warned by the detonation of their glyph, these two fighter/clerics prepare for battle by casting their personal enhancement spells (bull's strength, endurance, and divine thirty-two chessmen, also made of gold and ebony, are worth clothing and personal effects, but the sava board the drow are deep in trance, and the other is studying his spellbook.

In the northernmost of the guest rooms are at home. One is necromancers are on duty in C20. Only the two necromancers over the necromancers' domain. At the moment, two of these room is furnished with one or two beds, plus small writing accommodations in the higher levels. It consists of a common room (the northernmost chamber, adjoining C28) and three guest rooms (the smaller rooms along the western passageway). If the player characters go inside, continue with the following:

The door leads into a small, cozy common room with several plush chairs and a bar in the western corner. A hallway leads to the south, with several doors visible in that direction. A gaunt, decaying drow male in chainmail armor stands on guard here.

In the guest rooms reside four cult necromancers: two in the largest, and one each in the two smaller rooms. Each room is furnished with one or two beds, plus small writing desks and armoires.

Creatures: A revenant Maerimydra officer stands guard over the necromancers' domain. At the moment, two of these necromancers are on duty in C20. Only the two necromancers in the northernmost of the guest rooms are at home. One is deep in trance, and the other is studying his spellbook.

Revenant Maerimydra Officer: hp 74; see page 152.

Cult Necromancers (2): hp 49, 42; see page 151.

Tactics: The revenant's job is to guard the necromancers, a task it detests but cannot refuse. If a fight breaks out here, the sounds alert the necromancers in the room next door, who prepare for battle by casting their defensive spells before coming out to meet the threat (they don't want to be trapped in their room).

The necromancers are somewhat cowardly, so they flee through either of the doors leading out of the Rampant Hydra in preference to standing their ground and being killed.

Treasure: As living drow spellcasters, the cult necromancers are unwilling to share their spellbooks. Each necromancer owns two spellbooks containing the spells mentioned in their descriptions on page 151. The spellbooks are carefully stored with each necromancer's personal gear in the guest room armories.

This suit consists of three rooms: a foyer, a large sitting room (the middle room), and a small private bedchamber (the room to the southeast). Before the fall of the city, this suite was the residence of a lesser noble of House Chûmavh and her family. Irae T'sarran and her followers purged these areas of any sign of their former "heretical" occupants in a remarkably thorough act of revenge against the ruling nobles of Maerimydr-for slight she most likely only imagined.

Several of the cult's clerics and champions have petitioned Cabrath for permission to claim these rooms, but Irae's lieutenant is waiting to see who offers the most tempting bribe for use of this comfortable suite. In the meantime, it is a reasonably safe place for intruders to rest; the chance of a random encounter here is only 5% per hour.

C32. Spider's Lair

This large suite is now the domain of Jhorganni, a powerful drider vampire who stands high in the ranks among Irae T'sarran's followers.

A. The Parlor (EL 11 to 17)

Another gold spider seal marks the door to this chamber. The room beyond is a good-sized parlor or foyer, about 30 feet by 15 feet, with another door leading out to the north. A number of valuable furnishings in this room have been destroyed. Fine chairs lie hacked to pieces, beautiful tapestries have been torn down, and a couple of marble busts on pillars have been toppled over and smashed on the floor. The air has a strange, acrid smell to it.

Allow characters entering or passing through this room to make Spot checks in order to notice the arachnoid roper near the northern door (Hide modifier +19). Unless the characters themselves are invisible or otherwise hidden, the roper attacks immediately. It and any characters who successfully spotted it can roll initiative to act in the first round of combat.

Creature: An arachnoid roper, the bizarre creation of Jhorganni, keeps watch in this room to prevent intruders from disturbing its master.

The roper is infused with spidery essence and bears a mixture of spiderlike features and its own natural form. Its stony hide is actually covered with plates of chitin, and coarse gray hairs sprout between the plates. It has ten strands instead of the usual six, and spiderlike mandibles in front of its gaping mouth. Unlike the octopuses in SL8 (E), the roper is still intelligent, though not as bright as a normal roper, and it speaks both Terran and Undercommon. It shouts out after attacking, "Lady Jhorganni! Intruders!" The drider vampire and her bodyguard emerge from area C 1d4+2 rounds later. Their presence raises the EL to 17.

Arachnoid Roper: hp 61; see page 172.
B. THE SPIDER’S LARDER (EL 4)

Huge spiderwebs stretch from wall to wall, a tangled mass of sticky strands. The webs look somewhat thinner and more passable to the west, where a narrow path winds into the room. A door is dimly visible on the far side of the chamber, but the path does not lead directly toward it. Several desiccated bodies—goblins, bugbears, and drow, it seems—hang twisted in the webbing.

Jhorganni can assume gaseous form to slip through the webbing whenever she wishes, but her arachnoid gray render must pick its way along the path to get through this room.

Any creature trying to move through a square filled with webs becomes stuck (Escape Artist DC 28, break DC 34, hit points 14 per 5-foot section, hardness 5/fire).

Creatures: Another of Jhorganni’s pets, a Huge monstrous spider, created these webs. The creature’s body is only about 5 feet in diameter, so it can squeeze itself into almost any corner of the room despite its 15-foot by 15-foot facing. Most of the rooms in Castle Maerimydra have 30-foot ceilings, so the spider has plenty of room to move vertically as well as horizontally.

A Huge Monstrous Spider: hp 51; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: The spider is mindless, but it possesses a certain verminous cunning. It tries to keep 5-feet of webs between it and any attackers, and it casts its webs to trap enemies trying to move along the path.

Treasure: One of the drow bodies trapped deep in the webs is that of a Lolth priestess of House Chûmavh. She still wears her +3 elven chainmail and a drow house insignia carrying the levitate spell.

C. SPIDER NEST (EL 16)

Huge spiderwebs form a gigantic nest in the northeastern corner of this room and heavily cover the walls in other places. Crouching in the nest, its legs knotted in the sticky strands, is a female drider, its eyes glowing red with hate. At the creature’s feet stands another hulking monstrosity, a multi-eyed thing with multiple arms and huge mandibles dripping with venom.

Jhorganni’s pet, the Huge monstrous spider from B, spun the web where the drider vampire now makes her lair. The strands are easy enough for characters on the ground to spot and therefore avoid, but characters pushed into the web risk entanglement, as do flying creatures (see the Monstrous Spider entry in the Monster Manual for details).

Creatures: This is the lair of Jhorganni, a drider vampire cleric of Kiaransalee and an important leader in the new cult in Maerimydra. When Jhorganni failed the Test of Lolth and became a drider, her bitterness led her to abandon Lolth entirely and turn to Kiaransalee. She actively sought out undead as the best way to serve her new deity. She takes great delight in creating more of her kind, introducing them to the cult of Kiaransalee, and sending them into the world.

Jhorganni also enjoys creating arachnoid creatures, and two such creations guard her lair. The arachnoid roper in A is one of her creations, and an arachnoid gray render in...
Part 3

this room is her personal bodyguard. The render is covered with chitinous plates, and coarse brown hair protrudes from between the plates. It has eight eyes instead of six, and six muscular arms instead of just two. Poisonous mandibles jut from its mouth.

Jhorganni: hp 101; see page 152.
Arachnoid Gray Render: hp 267; see page 153.

Tactics: Jhorganni is only too happy to allow her render to take on the brunt of the action by wading into combat. If she has some warning that foes are coming, she casts freedom of movement and bull's strength on the monster, enhancing its ability to move through the webs and deal damage. In a fight, she hangs back and supports it with distance spells until she sees a good opportunity to attack a trapped or isolated foe. She would love nothing better than to grapple and drain a weak second-rank character such as a wizard or bard while her arachnoid gray render keeps the rest of the party busy.

Tactics: In the eastern corner of the room is a large chest in which Jhorganni keeps a small hoard. The chest is protected by a greater glyph of warding trap.

Greater Glyph of Warding: CR 7; 5-ft. radius (10d8 acid); Reflex DC 23 half; Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31.

Inside the chest are 550 pp, 870 gp, a red spinel worth 300 gp, a golden yellow topaz worth 400 gp, a fire opal worth 1,100 gp, a fine lady's mantle of silk embroidered with moonstones worth 2,100 gp, and a +2 lawful dwarven waraxe. Jhorganni detests the weapon but keeps it in the hope of trading it to someone who won't turn on her.

C33. LESSER TOWER LEVITATION SHAFT (EL 15)

A strange glowing shaft of light 10 feet in diameter pierces this room, stabbing down through a hole in the ceiling 30 feet above. In the weird illumination it is possible to see that the column of light ascends to a point up a hundred feet or more.

Like the Great Tower shaft described in C6, this levitation shaft carries any creature stepping into it to the desired level with a simple act of will. The Lesser Tower shaft rises from level four all the way up to level seven.

Creatures: The third band of abyssal ghouls roaming the castle frequents this shaft. They normally lair on level seven, lurking near the top of the shaft to ambush anyone coming up, although they are under orders not to attack any of the other Kiaransalee cultists. The top chamber on level seven is a filthy lair, empty of furnishings and despoiled by the ghouls.

Abysial Ghouls Gang 3 (♂): hp 120, 116, 116, 114, 98; see Appendix 1.

Tactics: The ghouls are quite intelligent and understand perfectly how the shaft works. If they sense the approach of potential targets rising up the shaft, they begin the fray by leaping down upon the intruders, trying to grapple them in the levitation field.

C34. CULT CHAMPIONS' CHAMBER (EL 12)

The door to this room is trapped with a glyph of warding, since the champions who live here are somewhat concerned by the abyssal ghouls who haunt the nearby levitation shaft.

Glyph of Warding: CR 4; 5-ft. radius (5d8 sonic); Reflex DC 26 half; Search DC 28; Disable Device DC 28.

This room seems to have been the residence of an official of some importance. It is richly decorated with darkly beautiful murals depicting underwater scenes in some vast, black sea of the Underdark. A faint fishy odor pervades the place. A drow woman stands by a couch wearing partial armor, the rest of her full plate lying on the floor beside her.

Two cult champions reside in this room, which used to belong to a kuo-toa ambassador to Maerimydra. One of the champions is on duty in C38, and the other is usually taking her ease in this room.

Creature: This cult champion has just risen from her rest and is dressing to relieve her fellow in C38. Because she has put on only part of her armor, reduce her AC by 3.

Cult Champion: hp 65; see page 151.

Tactics: If she is alerted to the approach of enemies by the detonation of the glyph, she begins casting defensive spells at once to prepare for a fight.

Treasuers: Both cult champions have trunks to store their personal possessions. The chests are locked (Open Lock DC 25) but contain nothing of special interest.

C35. NECROMANCER'S GUARDS (EL 15)

This room is an unfurnished antechamber, with another door leading to the east. Three rotting drow in armor stand guard outside the other door, their eyes dull and glassy.

Laerekh, the cult's chief necromancer, is engaged in study on this level (he actually works in C37). The door to the next chamber (C36) is locked and barred from the inside.

If the characters start trying to break the door down, Laerekh may open it before they are finished. He reacts 1d4+1 rounds after the first attempt to open the door, flinging the door open as he bellows, “I told you I was not to be disturbed!” See C37, below.

Creatures: Three revenant spellguards protect Laerekh from any disturbance or intrusion. In life, they were similar to the spellguards in Sixth Morcane—wizards trained to defend the city from intrusion, a function that they continue admirably in undeath. They are undead drow, desiccated and bearing signs of deep wounds, dressed in deep burgundy tunics and black trousers.

These revenants all have mage armor in effect, giving them a +4 armor bonus.

Revenant Maerimydra Spellguards (3): hp 80, 61, 56; see page 150.

Tactics: The spellguards try to handle any intrusion without disturbing Laerekh, since he has threatened them with annihilation if they allow anything to disrupt his work. They attempt to trap dangerous characters in Otiluke’s resilient sphere or wall of force, then concentrate their attack spells on any characters who are not englobed.
C36. NECROMANCER'S PARLOR

The door to this room is locked and barred (Open Lock DC 30, break DC 30). When the heroes open it, continue with the following.

This cluttered room is filled with an odd collection of furnishings, including an unmade bed, a writing desk littered with papers and notes, and several trunks stuffed with clothing—mostly black robes with various bits of embroidery and decoration, such as silver skull emblems.

Laerekh is engaged in his studies in C37, but the sound of the door bursting in this room certainly gains his attention. If he hears the door break, as opposed to simply rattle or thump, he remains in C37 and begins preparing his defensive spells. However, prolonged banging or thumping brings him from his laboratory to demand explanations.

TREASURE: A number of interesting knick-knacks and items decorate this room, including a locked trunk (Open Lock DC 30) with a large silver skull for a hasp. Laerekh carries the key. While the design is quite alarming, it is not trapped in any way. It contains more changes of clothing, four 1-pound ingots of mithral worth 500 gp apiece, a silk pouch containing 40 pp and 240 gp, a potion of lesser restoration, a scroll of fire trap, and a manual of bodily health +2 (Laerekh intends to read the book very soon, but he simply hasn’t gotten to it yet).

C37. NECROMANCER’S LAB (EL 16)

A strange mixture of odors fills the air: the stench of death and rot, sweet spices and perfumes, and a few more chemical odors as well. A handful of makeshift tables are spread around the room, littered with metal tools and arcane components. A beholder floats in the center of the room, its flesh gray and deliquescent.

This room is the abode of Laerekh, a sorcerer who earned the title of “Chief Necromancer” within the cult of Kiaransalee in Maerimydra—no small distinction. He is very, very good at what he does, and he earned this honor as much through the incredible force of his personality as his actual arcane knowledge. With a Charisma of 22, he exudes a presence comparable to that of a mature dragon, and the lesser wizards and even clerics of the cult tend to shake visibly when he is around.

Laerekh is currently working with a death tyrant (a zombielike undead beholder), which he has controlled by means of a control undead spell. He is furious at being disturbed and lashes out with uncontrolled rage.

Laerekh is a very handsome drow, almost as tall as a surface elf, and he smells musky and sweet. He wears a voluminous robe, a cloak of midnight blue, and a finely crafted amulet (his amulet of natural armor) made from the glittering scale of a blue dragon. His ring of protection is inlaid with lapis lazuli, as are his bracers of armor.

Even the scales of his quasit familiar are bluish in tint, rather than the sickly green common to its kind.

Laerekh is in the flesh to stone spell. He is furious at being disturbed and lashes out with his deadly attack spells. He’s fond of using his familiar to deliver vampiric touch attacks.

C38. ENTRANCE TO THE UPPER REALM (EL 16)

A heavy iron grate blocks the shaft at this level. A character levitating in the shaft doesn’t have the leverage to force the grate open with a Strength check. It must be opened from above, blasted through, or passed through by magic. The lock is out of reach from below the grate. The cult champion in the room above holds the key to the lock, which has an Open Lock DC of 30.

Iron Grate: 3 inches thick, hardness 10, hp 90, AC 5.

Past the grate is a large room with two double-door exits and two smaller wooden doors. The walls and floor are bare stone, undecorated and unfurnished. The levitation shaft continues up beyond the grate and ends in the room above, but the obstacle prevents anyone from passing up the shaft and into the room above the grate.

As usual among the drow, there are no furnishings that would allow guards on duty to get comfortable and thus lax in their watch. The revenant guards need no rest anyway.

Creatures: As the entrance to the most important levels of Castle Maerimydra, this area is well guarded. The guard consists of three undead soldiers (two revenants and a ghost to guard against ethereal invaders), a revenant fighter/wizard who used to guard the Shattered Tower, and a living drow fighter/cleric of Kiaransalee, who commands the force.

The undead officers are strong drow women in chainmail, carrying bastard swords and shields. The revenants look much as they did in life, but they are clearly dead and beginning to decompose. The ghost is an insubstantial version of its appearance in life. The revenant fighter/wizard wears a polished black breastplate with the emblem of the Shattered Tower (a white rectangle laced with a network of cracks, like broken glass) and carries a spell storing halberd with vampiric touch cast into it.

The cult champion commander is a frightening figure in full plate armor, swinging a magic scythe to deadly effect. She wears a white tabard over her armor, emblazoned with the symbol of Kiaransalee: a slender drow hand with a silver ring on each finger. A helm shaped to resemble a skull covers her face, but it also allows her white hair to escape through a hole in the top in a long plume.

Revenant Maerimydra Officers (2): hp 43, 43; see page 152.

Cult Champion: hp 93; see page 151.

Tactics: The guards here open the grate to admit fellow cultists who need to ascend or descend the shaft on legitimate business. Any party of intruders coming up from below faces a difficult test in passing the grate. The revenant officers fire their crossbows through the grate, gaining 50% cover, while the revenant Shattered Tower guard and cult champion use their attack spells to blast enemies clustered beneath the gate. The ghost remains above, watching for enemies trying to slip their attack spells to blast enemies clustered beneath the gate.

Treasure: The cult champion on duty here carries a key for the grate and a key to the exterior door leading out onto the Middle Bridge (C41).

A. THE ARCHMAGE’S GUARDS (EL 17)

Magnificent tapestries showing scenes of warfare between drow and surface elves line the walls of this chamber, and several marble benches and busts indicate that this was once the foyer of a prestigious suite in the castle. Magical energy crackles through the air, creating an unearthly chill unpleasantly reminiscent of death. Four undead drow men wearing polished black breastplates and carrying wicked-looking halberds guard the chamber.

The three rooms in this suite once belonged to the leading male wizard of House Chûmavh. This room was the wizard’s parlor and private hall.

Creatures: Four revenants, formerly guards of the Shattered Tower, guard the entrance to the archmage’s quarters, standing near the levitation shaft in order to intercept anyone heading up toward the top level. These guards are fighter/wizards wearing polished black breastplates emblazoned with the emblem of the Shattered Tower (a white rectangle laced with a network of cracks, like broken glass). Each guard carries a spell storing halberd with a different spell stored within: slow, vampiric touch, chill touch, and another slow.

B. ABANDONED BEDCHAMBER

Like the hall outside, this room is well appointed and appears to have been the bedchamber of someone important. A huge, plush bed and several armoires line the walls, but all have been ransacked. Other than the defaced furnishings, there is nothing in this room.

The former occupant of this suite savored his elevated position and denied himself no luxuries, but Irae’s followers thoroughly looted the place during the taking of the castle.

C. THE ARCHMAGE’S CHAMBER

The temperature drops abruptly in this chamber, suddenly becoming quite chill. Glowing blue mist drifts along the floor. A churning fountain of the stuff, like an incorporeal geyser, spouts in the middle of the floor. Beside it, its arms dramatically outstretched, is a creature that seems made of the same misty substance—a vaguely skeletal form wrapped in wisps of glowing blue energy.

The blue “geyser” is actually the raw magic of the Weave, made visible by the proximity of the Weave disruption based in the Undying Temple and Duneth Wharreil’s arcane experiments. A successful Spellcraft check (DC 30) allows a character to understand both that the mist is raw magical energy and that it is distorted in some way. If a character casts a spell in this room, the mist flows and conceals around the character’s hands before dissolving into the desired spell effect. The effect is startling but basically harmless. The mist moves immediately out of the area of an antimagic field but is otherwise completely unaffected by any spell or other effect. The geyser seems at first glance... to be erupting out of the floor, but a closer inspection reveals easily (no Search check required) that its base is actually several inches off the floor.

Creature: The resident of this chamber is Duneth Wharreil, once the renowned Archmage of Maerimydra and now an undead slave of Irae Tsarran. He is a silveraith, created by her power in the Undying Temple. Irae Tsarran believes he is studying the local corruption of the Weave caused by the presence of the Undying Temple in order to harness its power for her cause, but the truth is that he hopes to find his freedom from her yoke—or at worst, his own death.

Though the archmage detests his undead existence and his new mistress, he also hates all living things with a passion, and his loathing of surface-worlders is undiminished by death. He may engage in idle conversation with the characters, but only in the midst of combat as he strives to wipe them from the face of the earth.

As a silveraith, Duneth bears little resemblance to his appearance in life. His form is vaguely skeletal, but flowing wisps of glowing blue energy surround his form in a shape that suggests the robes he once wore. He is illustrated on the back cover of this book.

Duneth Wharreil: hp 104; see page 174.

Tactics: If the Weave corruption has spread to include Castle Maerimydra within its bounds, Duneth chooses his spells in combat to make the best possible use of its effects. He uses baste in his first action (raising his AC to 24), then horrid wilting. In the following rounds, he uses finger of death against a rogue or wizard who managed to survive the horrid wilting, then readies his extra partial action to absorb the first spell targeted at him in the next round (assuming any spellcasters survive). His other favorite spells include enervation, fear, and vampiric touch. He also does not hesitate to use his very effective incorporeal touch attack in melee. He uses his extra action from baste each round to ready his magic absorption ability, hoping to eliminate enemy spellcasters with the negative energy backlash.

Treasure: Lying on the floor near where Duneth stood when the characters entered the room is a large, flawless pearl. A character examining the room must make a successful Search check (DC 15) to locate it because of the mist cloaking the floor. This is the phylactery of the dracolich, Ice (see C46 on level six), which Duneth uses mage hand to carry with him. It has a Nyshul's undetectable aura cast on it, so hasty characters might sell it (it is worth 1,620 gp) before realizing its magical nature.

The phylactery has a hardness of 15, 60 hp, and a break DC of 40. Destroying it while Ice's life force is within it destroys the dracolich. Destroying it while Ice's life force is within her body prevents her from possessing another corpse if her body is destroyed.

C40. Upper Kitchens

Countertops of gleaming copper, two large hearths, and an array of cooking implements hanging from the walls make this room's purpose clear. No one is in here now, but the kitchen is tidy and clean.

This room was the personal kitchen serving the highest-ranking nobles of House Chûmavh. Irae and her followers have little time for the exquisite banquets and delicacies that formerly graced the tables of the previous rulers, so this kitchen is used primarily to store the better foodstuffs remaining in the castle: strong rothé cheese laced with green mold, pickled mushrooms, long-lasting biscuits made from mushroom-spore flour, and a variety of hanging sausages and hard cheeses.

C41. Middle Bridge (EL 9)

A slender bridge arches between the two towers at this level, almost 160 feet above the cavern floor and close to 100 feet above the battlements encircling the castle's lower level. The bridge is open to the air, and its sides are lined with graceful crenellations that seem more decorative than functional. At either end, sturdy iron doors bar entry into the towers.

Unlike the other two bridges joining the upper levels of the Great Tower and the Lesser Tower, this span is not covered. Flying intruders could easily alight here and try their luck at one of the two iron doors at either end of the bridge. Both doors are locked (Open Lock DC 30). The cult champion in C38 holds the key for the north door, and one of the quth-marens in C42 holds the key for the south door. Irae's forbiddance is still in effect here.

Creature: A Gargantuan monstrous spider used to make its home near the top of Castle Maerimydra, serving as a symbol of the favor of Lolth and a mascot for the city as a whole. It perished during the fall of the city, but Irae Tsarran transformed even this monstrosity into an undead minion. It is now a wraith spider—its chitinous shell empty and its deadly poison replaced with deadlier negative energy. It no longer feeds on vital fluids, but on life itself.

Its nest is built on the south face of the Great Tower in the vicinity of level six, between the castle and the large stalactite there. From this perch it keeps an eye on the bridge 40 feet below. Despite its size, the creature is somewhat difficult to see. It has 77% cover in its nest, and its coloration matches the dark stone quite well, so its Hide modifier is +3. Characters flying around at the bridge level who do not look up toward the ceiling are unlikely to notice the wraith spider at all.

Gargantuan Wraith Spider: hp 189; see Appendix 1.

Tactics: The wraith spider is allied with Kiaransalee's cult, so it does not attack drow wearing the cult's emblems. Anyone else crossing the bridge looks like a meal to the monster. It can easily climb on the tower's walls, the bridge, or on the stalactite that hangs down to this level.

C42. Quth-Maren Post (EL 12)

This small room is a guardpost. A sturdy iron door leads to the north and presumably exits the tower. A staircase winds down on the western side of the room, probably leading to lower levels of the tower, and there is a large double door of stone on the southern wall of the room. Six flayed humanoids, horrible creatures of oozing muscle and dripping blood, stand ready to defend this chamber.

Castle Maerimydra is designed so that those proceeding from its bottom floors to its upper floors cannot easily go all the way up via one tower; they must take the bridge to switch towers. That makes this guardpost an important chokepoint in the Lesser Tower, much like C38 in the Great Tower. Irae T'sarran has not left it unguarded.

Creatures: Six quth-maren stand guard here, with orders to destroy any non-Kiaransaleen who enter the room. Irae T'sarran has not left it unguarded.

C43. Cabrath's Apartments

The door opens into a small suite of rooms, stripped of all but the most utilitarian furnishings. The chamber adjoining the levitation shaft is a small sitting room. A bedchamber lies to the north, while a door on the east wall leads to a dining room with a large table and a couple of chairs.

Though Cabrath Nelinderra spends most of her time in the Lesser Temple (C53), she eats and occasionally rests in this suite. Unlike Khumarr, she takes no pleasure in physical luxuries. She has removed most of the furnishings and all the idle decorations from her suite, throwing them on the fires of the burning city. Only two chairs sit at the dining table (Maas sometimes enjoys watching her eat), and the kitchen is nearly bare. In the bedroom, Cabrath replaced the former owner's lush bed with a simple woven straw pallet on the floor. The coffin of the vampire Maas is here, too—the vampire returns to this place in gaseous form if defeated elsewhere in the castle. The sitting room is also bare.

C44. Cult Clerics' Room (EL 10)

A damaged tile mosaic opposite the door catches the eye as soon as one enters. It's hard to be sure now, but the mosaic seems to depict a horrible sacrificial rite to Lolth. The artwork has been badly damaged by repeated blows of a heavy implement, and shattered bits of tile lie about the floor. Two plain bunks have been moved into the room, along with heavy trunks and a small writing desk. A drow woman wearing a white surcoat emblazoned with a black skull over her plate armor stands here, clutching a black-iron morningstar with silver spikes.

This room was formerly a small household shrine to Lolth. It has been commandeered to house two of the cult clerics of Kiaransalee.

Creatures: One of these clerics is on duty with Taharak, serving as part of Irae's ethereal scout force, while the other attends to her devotions here.

Cult Cleric: hp 55; see page 146.

Tactics: This particular cult cleric has an edge over her fellows—in a pouch at her belt she has a pinch of dust of disappearance, which she's been saving for a real emergency. If confronted here, she uses her dust immediately and looks for a chance to circle back out to the levitation shaft, blasting at the intruders from the safety of her invisibility.

Treasure: In addition to the typical belongings of T'sarran drow, the writing desk holds an unusual surprise. In a secret compartment (Search DC 20) so far unnoticed by the room's current inhabitants lies a battered bag, rolled up tightly and stuffed into the small space. The bag is a bag of holding 3, and inside it are the following items: provisions (sixty days of trail rations and six full waterskins), a dozen sunrods, three winter blankets, three bedrolls, and a wand of daylight (arcane) with 15 charges. The bag belonged to a surface wizard captured by the Maerimydran drow who owned this desk many months ago.

C45. Observation Hall (EL 13 or 16)

A spiral staircase leads down to a sort of upside-down turret, a spike protruding from the bottom of a gigantic stalactite. Barred windows surround the room on all sides, offering a smoke-clouded view of the cavern far below.

Since it is nearly 160 feet off the cavern floor, this observation hall is useful primarily for spotting strange lights within the city (often a sign of intruders, in the days before the cavern floor was lit with campfires) or aerial approaches to Castle Maerimydra. Its windows are much larger than the windows elsewhere in the castle, but thick iron bars spaced every 6 inches and the castle's magical defenses protect the hall from would-be burglars.

Creatures: With winged demons circling close around the tower in search of a way to strike at their enemies, an observation hall surrounded by open windows can be a dangerous place. If the characters bring a light into this room or spend any significant amount of time here (such as resting for an hour or more) they attract the attention of the trio of vrocks (75%) described in M8, or the balor (25%), described in the random encounter Winged Terror in Appendix 2.
Part 3

Vrock Demons (3): hp 60 each; see Monster Manual.

Balor Demon: hp 122; see Monster Manual.

If the characters previously encountered and killed the patrolling vrocks, they do not encounter vrocks here. Likewise, if they already killed the balor, they do not have to face another one here.

Tactics: The demons know that the forbiddance spell prevents them from entering the hall, but the castle's magical defenses do not keep out their ranged attacks. They gleefully hurl telekinesis spells (the vrocks) or unholy blight and implosion (the balor) at anyone foolish enough to remain in view in this hall.

The EL of this encounter is adjusted down to account for the fact that the demons cannot use all their attacks against characters in this room.

C46. NECROMANCER’S EXPERIMENT (EL 17)

Two dragon corpses—one black, one white, and both about 20 feet long—lie sprawled on the floor of this room. Both are in poor condition, with bones visible through the rotting flesh. The white one looks and smells drier, as if its decomposition had been halted somehow. Yet it is the black one that stirs, lifting its head to look in your direction.

This level was formerly the throne room and grand banquet hall of the ruling house, but Irae’s minions have put it to a different use. After spending some time experimenting with creating undead in the corrupted vicinity of the Undying Temple, Duneth Wharreil set his sights on the pinnacle of necromancy: the creation of a dracolich. This experiment, too, was a success.

Creatures: An old white dracolich is the result of Duneth’s experimentation, and it remains in this room alongside his first failed attempt, the black dragon corpse, which is now animated as a zombie. The undead archmage promised the dracolich enormous wealth in exchange for its patience, but it is about ready to leave this place with or without its reward. As long as Duneth holds its phylactery, however, it is not about to show the least sign of rebellion.

In this position, the dracolich (whose name is Ice) is not anxious to plunge into combat, particularly since she isn’t convinced that Duneth would allow her spirit to possess another body if this one died. The black dragon zombie is far less calculating, and it shambles to its feet to attack the characters who enter.

If the characters are willing to talk to her, Ice tries to trick them into bringing her phylactery here, or at least killing Duneth for her. She offers information about Duneth and the cult of Kiaransalee (though her knowledge is fairly limited) in exchange for a single item (her choice) from Duneth’s treasure hoard.

Tactics: The zombie black dragon spends its first action rising from prone, and then simply shambles after the nearest living thing and tries to kill it. Ice observes the melee (using blindsight, not turning her head to watch) with mild amusement, neither moving nor speaking until after it is all over. While she is not in a hurry to take foolish risks by picking a fight with a band of adventurers, she defends herself if attacked. She also may decide to wade in if the party looks weak, foolish, and overly burdened with powerful magic items just waiting to be stripped from their frozen corpses.

If Ice joins the fray, she begins by using her freezing fog ability to divide the party, then seeks to paralyze characters with her gaze or physical attacks. Ice is not above pausing to administer a coup de grace to a paralyzed character if no one else is nearby.

C47. PRIVATE LEVITATION SHAFT

This small shaft is only 10 feet across, just large enough to house a sparkling green pillar of light that leads up to the top of the castle.

This levitation shaft formerly provided the Matron Mother of the house with her own private route from her apartments at the top of the castle to her throne room on the sixth level. Irae claimed the matron’s rooms but has found little use for ostentatious displays of power such as audiences in the throne room below.

C48. TRAPPED STAIRCASE (EL 9)

A steep staircase ascends toward the south along the tower wall, linking the fifth and sixth levels together. The stairs are carved from some dark-grained surface wood and gleam with an inner light.

When she first overthrew House Chûmavh, Irae was concerned that vengeful assassins might creep up through the Great Tower’s secondary staircases and surprise her in the Matron’s Suite. Therefore, she placed a very dangerous trap on this staircase to slow down any attackers moving up through the tower.

Symbol of Discord: CR 9; discord; Will DC 22 negates; Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.

The symbol is scribed on the topmost step of the staircase, just below the landing on the level six.

C49. REVENANT GUARDPOST (EL 13)

This room is a small armory, complete with arming dummies on which suits of mail hang and long racks of polearms and crossbows along the walls. Lights bob and weave disconcertingly around in the darkness in the center of the room, floating around a skull resting on the floor, lit with emerald green fire.

An undead guard is posted in this room to support the jade spider in C70. A wizard himself, the guard is experimenting with the effects of the Weave disruption, but he responds quickly to the sounds of battle in the next room.

The magical effects are exactly what they seem to be: the guard’s innate spell-like abilities to create dancing lights and faerie fire, cast on a drow skull that is not otherwise magical or special in any way.

Creature: The revenant guard is a fighter/wizard who used to guard the Shattered Tower. He wears a polished black breastplate with the emblem of the Shattered Tower (a white rectangle laced with a network of cracks, like broken glass), and carries a spell-storing baldric with vampiric touch cast into it.

Revenant Shattered Tower Guard: hp 67; see page 153.

Tactics: If the party enters this room before the revenant can join a fight out in C50, the creature crouches back behind the arming dummies and throws damaging spells at intruders, hoping the bizarre apparition in the center of the room distracts attackers from their true peril.

Treasure: Among the weapons and suits of armor to be found in this room are four suits of elven chainmail (dark elven make), a masterwork light crossbow, and a masterwork short sword with a jeweled hilt set with emeralds, worth 2,400 gp.

C50. GATEWAY TO THE COLUMN (EL 14 TO 15)

The levitation shaft opens into a large circular chamber with two small doors in the north wall and a large double door of stone in the south wall. The shaft continues to the room above and the room below. A large green statue of a monstrous spider dominates this chamber. The statue is only 5 feet high but fully 20 feet in diameter—easily half the width of the room.

This room is a very important chokepoint in the castle’s defense because it guards access to the Lesser Temple and the Undying Temple beyond that.

Creature: A jade spider—a construct formed of jade in the shape of a Gargantuan monstrous spider—stands guard in this area. It stirs and attacks when any nondrow enters by the door from the bridge; or sits foot in this room from the levitation shaft.

Jade Spider: hp 144; see Appendix 1.

The jade spider alone is an EL 14 encounter. The sounds of battle in this room alert the revenant in C49, however, who joins the melee in just 2 rounds. The revenant increases the EL to 15.

C51. KHUMARR’S SUITE (EL 18)

Occupying most of the Southern Column on this level, this suite of rooms is the domain of Khumarr, one of Irae T’sarran’s chief lieutenants. The column is actually a great stalactite hanging down from the ceiling of Maerimydra’s cavern, linked to the Lesser Tower by an enclosed bridge between areas C50 and C51a.

A. ANTECHAMBER

The door to this room from C50 is locked (Open Lock DC 30). Khumarr, in B, carries the key. A simple but effective trap safeguards the door: three silver goblets are stacked precariously just behind the door, so that when it is opened the goblets fall over and clatter loudly. This noisemaker can’t be found or disarmed from the C50 side of the door, although it is perfectly obvious to anyone approaching from the south.

When you open this door, several large goblets clatter loudly to the ground—silver chalices that were stacked up behind the door. This small room seems to have been a reception area of some kind. Double doors of stone lead out to the north and the south. The room is finished in glossy black tile but has no other furnishings or decorations. No one is in here right now.

Aside from the unusual choice of décor, there is nothing of interest here. Khumarr normally comes to this room to open the locked door when someone knocks sharply and gives the correct password. He stacks the goblets behind the door just in case someone opens the door without calling for him first.

Treasure: The silver goblets are expensive doorstops, worth 80 gp apiece.

B. KHUMARR’S PARLOR

This hall is ostentatiously decorated. Stone doors lead both north and south, while a smaller wooden door on the northern wall seems to lead toward another room in this suite. In the center of the floor a spiral staircase of iron leads down into darkness.

Several comfortable-looking chairs are spaced evenly along the walls. Small tables of fine mahogany stand between, each holding some fine silver implement—a small tray, a large bowl, a tall goblet, and an unlit brazier.

Khumarr was a lowborn drow of the city’s worst quarters before the fall of the city. He now relishes the opportunity to live the high life in the very homes of the drow nobles who so despised him—the same nobles who now serve him and Irae T’sarran as revenant soldiers.

Creature: Khumarr is sitting casually on the chair nearest the door to the bridge when the characters arrive, since he is supposed to help guard the Undying Temple from intrusion. Unless the characters opened the door into A in perfect silence, he is aware of their approach, but he adopts a totally relaxed and confident demeanor. His visor is raised, his sword is propped up against the chair, and his head rests heavily on one hand as he slouches (as best as one can in full plate armor) in the chair.

Khumarr is a tall and strong drow. He wears demon armor, which gives him a particularly fearsome appearance, and swings a greatsword suffused with unholy energy. His face, visible through the demon’s mouth on his helm, is quite handsome, and he smiles almost constantly—sometimes in simple amusement, sometimes in perverse cruelty.

Khumarr: hp 126; see page 175.

Tactics: Khumarr’s slothfulness is a ruse, of course. If attacked he can spring to his feet and parry with surprising speed, and he is not alone here—three abyssal ghouls lurk just behind the door to the closet at the east end of this hall, awaiting Khumarr’s signal to leap out and attack.

Abyssal Ghouls (3): hp 110, 99, 93; see Appendix 1.

Treasure: The four silver implements on the small tables are valuable. The tray is worth 30 gp, the bowl is worth 70 gp, the goblet is worth 80 gp (and matches the ones found in A), and the brazier is worth 140 gp.

Development: If the characters kill Khumarr and do not destroy his body, and if they have not already destroyed the ethereal scouts led by Taharak, then Taharak and his scouts harvest his body within the hour. If this occurs, Khumarr’s revenant appears as an encounter within the Undying Temple. Depending on how much of his gear the characters stripped from his body, he may be a rather less effective fighter the second time around, but he at least has a revenant’s drive for vengeance against its slayers working in his favor.
C. KHMARR’S BEDCHAMBER

The decoration in this suite maintains the high level of taste and quality found in the outer room. The room opens into an opulent room with a fine rug, probably Calishite, on the floor, and small lanterns offer a dim light so that its exquisite colors and patterns can be properly appreciated.

This is Khmarr’s residence, a large step up from the hovel on the plateau that was his home until very recently. He has changed very little of the décor since murdering the previous occupants of this suite, and he savors the feeling of great wealth even though he has little to spend it on and no one to lord it over except an undead horde.

The room includes a small table with two upholstered chairs, two paintings on the wall (depicting noble drow women, ancestors of the family that no longer occupies this suite), and a pair of gold candelabras on the table. The bed is large and soft, covered with fine blankets and furs. A large dresser has a mirror set above it. A fireplace with a fine marble mantelpiece warms the room.

Treasure: Though several valuable items adorn this suite, the only portable ones are the two gold candelabras on the table. Each is worth 370 gp and weighs 5 pounds.

C52. TEMPLE FOYER (EL 17)

This room stands out from every other room in the tower. The chamber looks as if a crazed demon had worked its will on the place. A path made of bones curves from the doors on the north wall to a large staircase leading up to the east, where the room appears to continue almost 40 feet above. The floor around the path is warped and shaped to look as though half-rotted corpses or melting souls were trying to free themselves from its grasp. The walls bear images similar to those on the floor, with all the figures facing toward the door. Two columns shaped like skeletons and surmounted by winged gargoylelike figures flank the staircase, and other nightmarish statues stand here and there.

The top level of the Lesser Tower has become a shrine to Kiaransalee, a companion to the Undying Temple in C60 (detailed in Part 4), in a space more accessible to the cult members who spend their time in the tower. This antechamber has indeed been shaped by a demonic imagination, which happens to belong to Cabrath Nelinderra, Irae T’sarran’s chief cleric lieutenant.

The floor in this chamber, except for the meandering path between the doors leading to C51 and the stairs, is extremely uneven. Characters cannot run or charge in this room, and they must actually move at half normal speed if they leave the path.

Creatures: Three blood fiends—demonic vampire servants of Kiaransalee—guard this outer chamber. Two hide among the bizarre statues on the floor (Hide modifier +17), and the third lurks on the balcony area on level seven. The monsters attack only after they can surround the characters, or when discovered.

Blood fiends are ogre-sized demons, standing about 9 feet tall. Their thick, scaly hide is deep purple, almost black, and each of their four strong arms ends in vicious claws. They have wolflike muzzles with sharp teeth too large to fit in their mouths, and glowing red eyes that can sap a mortal’s will.

Blood Fiends (3): hp 76, 72, 69; see Appendix 1.

Tactics: The two blood fiends in the lower portion of the room begin the fight by attempting to use their domination power on any heavily armored warrior-type characters. The third blood fiend studies the fight from above for a couple of rounds to see how the intruders react, and then teleports down to grapple and drain a vulnerable-looking back-rank character. The blood fiends would like nothing better than to grapple and exsanguinate wizards or rogues among the attacking party while the intruder fighters battle each other to the death.

C53. THE LESSER TEMPLE (EL 18)

If the entrance hall outside this room was grotesque, the room itself is blasphemously obscene. Images of death are all around—usually tortured, painful death. Shattered corpses are used like furniture: Two rotting drow kneel on the floor, supporting a slab of stone between them. Two more flanks this makeshift altar holding smoking braziers in their seared hands. A fifth kneels in front of the altar, holding a massive tome up so that someone standing behind the altar could read from it.

A small wooden door exiting to the south seems to lead to a sacristy or vestment room. A large double door of stone emblazoned with a silver-ringed ebon hand stands on the west wall. On the curving northwest wall is a large mural, no less disturbing than the surrounding murals. A female drow sits on a throne made of bones, her otherwise beautiful face painted like a skull. A silver ring adorns each long finger on her slender hands.

At the right hand of the seated figure in the mural stands another figure, an eerily beautiful elf woman with skin as white as alabaster and one eye glowing red. The other eye is covered with a silver plate studded with rubies. Her head is hairless, and her body is wrapped in glowing blue-green mist.

The mural depicts Kiaransalee (seated on the throne) and Irae T’sarran (at her right hand), who is an albino drow. A successful Knowledge (religion) check (DC 15) allows a character to identify the deity.

Creatures: Besides the five drow zombies (whose function is purely decorative), two cult leaders spend almost all their time in this lesser temple. Cabrath Nelinderra is a powerful cleric of Kiaransalee and Irae T’sarran’s second-in-command. She is a drow woman with dusky gray skin, gray-white hair, and amber eyes. She wears a heavy black robe with royal purple inside the sleeves as her vestment. Her weapon is a bone-handled dagger whose blade is an insubstantial protrusion of glowing blue energy—a spectral dagger.

With Cabrath is her lover, a vampire assassin named Maas. As the leader of Maerimydra’s small force of assassins under the command of the ruling noble house, Maas was a secret follower of Kiaransalee long before Irae T’sarran’s rise to power, and Irae made him a vampire to reward him for his valuable role in assisting her overthrow of House Chûmavh.
Maas is a handsome drow who wears only black trousers, black-leather gloves of dexterity, and elaborate bracers of armor. His shoulders are broad and his chest is well muscled. His stark white hair is cropped close to his head. He carries no weapon.

Cabrath Nelinderra: hp 81; see page 55.

Maas, Vampire Assassin: hp 81; see page 55.

Medium-size Zombies (5): hp 13 each; see Monster Manual.

Tactics: Cabrath fights with reckless disregard for her own life, for she knows that a glorious transformation awaits her after death. Maas, too, is fearless. If reduced to 0 hit points, the vampire retreats to his coffin in C43.

Cabrath begins this fight with several long-lasting spells in effect. She has cast bull's strength on herself and greater magic weapon on her spectral dagger. This raises her Strength to 14 and makes her weapon +5. These spells add +6 to her attack and damage rolls with the dagger. She uses her damaging spells early but tries to avoid catching Maas in the area, even though the vampire would likely escape the spell effects.

Treasure: The tome held by one of the zombies is a worship-book for the church of Kiaransalee. Its pages are vellum and its cover is iron, making it valuable just for its materials. It weighs 11 pounds and is worth 450 gp, although buyers interested in such disturbing material may be hard to find.

Development: If the characters kill Cabrath and do not destroy her body, and if they have not already destroyed the erethal scouts led by Taharak, then Taharak and his scouts harvest Cabrath's body within the hour. If this occurs, Cabrath reappears as a keening spirit within the Undying Temple, raised to undeath by Irae T'sarran's ability.

C54. PATRON'S ROOST

This small but comfortable suite is well appointed with purple tapestries and comfortable velvet-covered furnishings. The room smells oddly of old perfumes.

These rooms were formerly occupied by the patron of House Chûmavh, which amounted to whichever male happened to catch the Matron Mother's eye for a time. She liked to keep her males close by and pampered, at least as long as they interested her. No one resides here now.

Development: If Dorina or Zedarr T'sarran survived the battles for Szith Morcane and fled back to Maerimydra, one or both now reside in these rooms. Irae is, of course, greatly disappointed by their failures and both T'sarrans children are virtually under house arrest as their mother contemplates a suitable punishment for their incompetence.

C55. THE HIGH BRIDGE

A long, slender hallway arches between the Lesser Tower and the Great Tower, narrow windows looking down on the city below from a dizzying height. Huge stalactites hang down from the ceiling in this vicinity. Double doors of stone decorated with golden spider designs lie at each end of the bridge.

This bridge is enclosed, so it is not possible for a flying character to simply alight here and enter the castle in that manner.

C56. MATRON'S CHAMBER (EL 9)

Clearly, drow of some importance lived in this suite of rooms. The walls are sheathed in magnificent fluted paneling of ebon and gold, the floors are made of black gold-veined marble, and the elegant furnishings are made from exotic surface hardwoods lovingly carved into beautiful, if vaguely sinister, designs. A great battle seems to have been fought through the rooms of this suite, as evidenced by the scorch and impact marks that mar almost every wall and the brown bloodstains that appear on many of the furnishings.

The Matron Mother of House Chûmavh formerly lived in these rooms. Although the suite was not the largest in the castle, she used this level only as her private parlor and bedchamber, conducting all her public business in the throne room a level below. Irae T'sarran took these rooms for her own soon after her capture of the castle, but since her spell research now absorbs virtually all her time and attention, she rarely leaves the Undying Temple.

The door leading to the small southern room of the suite is locked (Open Lock DC 30); Irae herself carries the key. It is also trapped with a symbol spell.

Symbol of Death: CR 9; death; Fortitude DC 22 negates; Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.

Treasure: Irae uses the smallest room of the suite as a vault for much of the loot she took from the castle's previous rulers.
Five large chests in here contain 480 gp, 8,400 gp, 26,300 sp, a set of six golden goblets worth 300 gp each, a masterwork lute made of zalantar wood with mithral flets worth 4,400 gp, a ceremonial court costume of black and gold worth 1,600 gp, and a coffi full of assorted gemstones (thirty gems averaging 50 gp apiece, plus twelve more averaging 100 gp apiece and a truly outstanding emerald worth 6,000 gp). A staff of frost with 40 charges is buried in one chest, a possession of Duneth Wharrel that Irae confiscated and has not returned. The most valuable items are the personal arms of the previous Matron Mother—a suit of +4 elven chainmail of invulnerability and a +3 heavy mace of disruption.

C57. HALL OF SHADOWS (EL 18)

Darkness seems to cling to the door, the walls, and the floor like something solid and even alive, draping the entire room in shadow. This room is sumptuously furnished, tastefully decorated, and comfortably warm. A lush purple carpet covers the cold stone floor, thick brocades hang over the walls, and more heavy curtains hang at various locations in the room to divide up what might otherwise be a large open space. Still, it is dark—all the decorations are in black, dark purples, or deep blues.

This apartment is the home of the esteemed ambassador to Maerimydra from the Empire of Shade. Soon after the shades reappeared in the desert of Anauroch, they sent Wyrruth, a powerful enchanter and accomplished negotiator, as an ambassador to this subterranean city that lay so close to their new home above the desert. He avoided the conflict when Kurgoth Hellspawn first arrived on the scene.

Creature: Wyrruth is a shade, a native of the newly formed Empire of Shade. He is a tall and gaunt man with dark gray skin and eyes. He has long black hair pulled back in a ponytail, and he wears a goatee. His clothing is old-fashioned: a many-layered tunic of burgundy and black with gold thread embroidered into the sleeves and collar, black breeches with more gold embroidery, and a heavy black mantle with a burgundy lining. His overall appearance is stately and formal—a first impression that carries through any extended encounter with him, echoing in his manner of speech, posture, and eloquence.

Wyrruth is absolutely loyal to Shade, and he places that loyalty above all else, including his own life. He keeps a close eye on events in Maerimydra, knowing that they could have a significant impact on nearby Shade, and he regularly reports back to his superiors with sending spells. He tries to stay out of the conflict between the drow and the giants, and he does not seek out combat with adventurers from the surface world, either. Instead, he warns them away from his chambers, fighting only in self-defense should that become necessary.

Wyrruth, Ambassador of Shade: hp 71 (87 in darkness);

C58. Sanctum Guards’ Quarters

Two neatly made bunks and a variety of weapons hanging from the walls occupy this room, which seems to be the residence of someone with plain but martial tastes.

None of the weapons are remarkable—they are nonmagical and not even masterwork. Irae T’sarran’s sanctum guards, described in Part 4, originally took this room for their quarters, but when their mistress moved into the Undying Temple, they took up residence there. Once every few days one of the guards returns here for some privacy, but this room is basically unoccupied now.

C59. Fiery Passage (EL 16)

The passage ahead is completely blocked by a column of violet flame that burns without heat, its lurid light flickering over the nearby walls and sending shadows dancing all around. A huge, still figure can dimly be glimpsed through the flames.

The column of fire is a small wall of fire made permanent with the permanency spell. It is 20 feet tall and 10 feet in diameter, blocking the entire passage. The heat of the flames is focused inward. Each creature passing through the wall of fire takes 2d6+17 points of damage, while any character inside the column takes 2d4 points of damage each round.

Creature: Just inside the boundaries of the wall of fire stands a powerful iron golem that enjoys almost constant regeneration from the eternal flames. It attacks any nondrow character that passes through the wall of fire, backing itself into the midst of the flames if it takes any damage.

Mighty Iron Golem: hp 297; see page 156.

Ad Hoc XP Adjustment: Give the characters an extra 10% over the normal experience award for this encounter, because of the golem’s ready source of healing power in the wall of fire.

C60. The Undying Temple

Irae T’sarran’s Undying Temple—a sentient tower surrounding a sphere of eternal blackness—is built within a great stalactite adjacent to the castle’s Southern Column. It is fully detailed in Part 4.

The door between C59 and C60 marks the boundary of the forbiddance spell protecting Castle Maerimydra. On the west side of the door, the restrictions against dimensional travel no longer apply.
rae T'sarran conjured the stronghold of the Undying Temple within Castle Maerimydra. Its name is not just an evocative title suggesting its dedication to a deity of undeath, but also a literal description: The temple itself is a sentient undead creature, sort of an undead construct (a paradox the drow delight in). The temple-creature lies half within the Material Plane and half within the Ethereal Plane, cupped like two hands around a sphere of pure negative energy. The two portions of the temple overlap in some places, where ghosts freely travel between the two planes. A portal near the bottom of the Material Plane portion allows other creatures to enter the Ethereal portion of the temple, while another portal near the top of the Ethereal Plane portion lets them cross back. Before the start of the adventure (D–10), Irae T'sarran used a miracle spell to summon the Undying Temple within the castle, and its very presence, combined with the globe of pure negative energy at its heart, has begun corrupting the fabric of magic around it.

Undying Temple Features

The Undying Temple is a sentient creature with spell-like abilities, similar in many ways to a sentient object such as a construct or an intelligent magic item. In game terms, it is a construct, though it also has certain qualities of the undead (such as being healed by negative energy and harmed by positive energy, though it cannot be turned). See page 156 for its statistics.

Irae T'sarran's forbiddance spell specifically does not include the Undying Temple. The ability to move freely between the Material and Ethereal Planes is critical to the temple's multidimensional structure and Irae's plans for the device.

Doors: Doors within the Undying Temple are made of smooth black stone that blends in closely with the walls. Every door in the temple is considered a concealed door, requiring a Search check (DC 20) to find. The doors are not difficult to open.

Stone Doors: 1 ft. thick, hardness 8; hp 180; AC 5; break DC 35.

Walls: The walls of the Undying Temple are smooth black marble with magical reinforcement.

Reinforced Stone Walls: 1 ft. thick, hardness 16; hp 180; AC 5; break DC 55; Climb DC 25.

Floors: The walls in the temple are the same smooth, black rock as the walls. They are level flagstone floors.

Ceilings: Ceilings in the Undying Temple are 9 feet high.

Destroying the Undying Temple

The orb of negative energy at the heart of the temple—existing simultaneously on the Material and the Ethereal Planes (see U14)—is both the source of the temple's power and its greatest weakness. While it is possible, given enough time, to destroy the temple piece by piece, more direct methods can end its sentience and thus its threat.

Positive Energy: Pouring enough positive energy into the negative energy orb destroys it. This requires making enough successful turning checks (high enough to affect a 20-HD undead) to deal 100 HD worth of turning damage.

Spells: As a construct, the temple is immune to mind-influencing effects, death effects, necromantic effects, and any spell that requires a Fortitude save unless it also affects objects. Its sheer size makes it resistant to even spells like disintegrate, though many of those spells could eventually bring it down. Some spells can affect the temple more immediately. Mordenkainen's disjunction strips the sentience from it if the negative energy orb is within the area of the spell and the Hampering the Temple: A rogue with ranks in Disable Device can prevent the temple from using its spell-like abilities within the boundaries of a given room inside it. The walls of each room are laced with nearly invisible magical circuitry not unlike that created by a magical trap such as a glyph of warding. A rogue who makes a successful Search check (DC 34) can detect this circuitry. By making a successful Disable Device check (DC 34), a character inside a room within the temple can effectively break the circuit, which not only prevents the temple from using its spell-like abilities in that room, but also cuts off its ability to “see” (via blindsight) and communicate via telepathy with any creatures in the room. Disabling this “trap” requires only 1d4 rounds, but the temple tends to direct its attacks against anyone who tinkers with its circuitry. Failing the check by 5 or more means the character is targeted by an enervation attack as if cast by the temple.

Encounters in the Undying Temple

The cult of Kiaransalee is a chaotic and disorganized group at best. Irae T’sarran is magically powerful and inspires obedience in her followers, but she is not a strong leader. Her organizational skills are minimal, and her unceasing spell research, fueled by her crazed thirst for power and vengeance, leaves her little mental energy to spend on “trivial” matters such as organizing the defense of her sanctum. As a result, even with the temple itself aware of the characters’ presence and every inhabitant alerted, the characters meet very little organized resistance.

Instead, each resident of the temple, upon learning of the characters’ intrusion, starts calculating how this disruption could work to his, her, or its benefit. Most of the guards stick to their posts, hoping that they can catch the intruders and thus earn Irae T’sarran’s recognition. They are extremely alert and very difficult to surprise. The lich Umaerh (U23) starts formulating a plan to parley with the characters, help them overthrow Irae T’sarran, then destroy them, leaving himself at the head of the Undying Temple (or whatever is left of it). The undead members of the cult, forced into loyalty and obedience to its high priestess, simply do as they are told, remaining at their posts. Even the temple, after alerting its inhabitants of the characters’ intrusion, is content to toy with them instead of unleashing its full magical power against them. Only Paellinn, a divine seeker in service to the cult, takes some initiative and tries to hunt the characters down before they can wreak too much havoc in the temple.

DIVINE SEEKER (EL 17)

As soon as the characters enter the temple, Paellinn leaves her chamber (U10) and moves to intercept them—asking the temple where they are, if necessary. Knowing that her abilities are best used during a melee in which she can gain flanking bonuses and thus sneak attacks, she remains hidden and silent to the best of her ability (Hide modifier +35, Move Silently modifier +35). She shadows the heroes until they are engaged in melee with another resident of the temple, then she joins the melee, emerging from the shadows to deliver devastating sneak attacks. If seriously injured, she flees the scene to drink her curing potions until she is ready to attack again. She also goes out of her way to deliver coup de grace on fallen characters, knowing that a dead character is a much more serious inconvenience to the party than an unconscious one. She continues this tactic until she is dead or the characters have fled. She does not hesitate to follow the characters through the ethereal portal (U6) if necessary.

Paellinn’s ideal tactical situation lets her maneuver into position to flank three or more characters at once, then use Whirlwind Attack to attack all of them and deliver a massive amount of sneak attack damage. The other residents of the temple don’t go out of their way to set up this situation for her, however, and she would count herself extremely lucky if the opportunity presented itself. She always looks for the opportunity and tumbles into position to accomplish it if at all possible.

Paellinn is an attractive young drow, tall and slender with a delicately angled face and brilliant emerald eyes. Her yellow-white hair is pulled tightly back in a bun and covered by the hood of her piwafwi—a voluminous black cloak (see Appendix 1). She moves with phenomenal grace and elegance, and in almost complete silence, thanks in part to the silent moves studded leather she wears. She carries a rapier of wounding and wears slippers of spider climbing. She is fond of using poisoned hand crossbow bolts from hiding to incapacitate or kill her foes.

key to the undying temple

Irae T'sarran summoned the temple into a tall, cylindrical cavern above Castle Maerimydra. The arrival of the construct displaced the existing rock, much like a steel wedge driven into soft clay.

U1. APPROACH TO THE TOWER (EL 20)

The scene inside the door is quite different from anything else in the tower. You are at the bottom of a large, well-lit cavern almost completely filled by a gracefully curving tower of ribbed black stone. Some 30 feet up, in the hollow of the tower's curve, a gigantic sphere of utter blackness devours any shred of light, obscuring the top of the tower almost completely from view.

Any character using see invisibility, true seeing, or some other method of seeing ethereal objects perceives the rest of the picture: a mirror image of the spiraling tower hangs upside-down above it in the Ethereal Plane, centered on the sphere of blackness. (One such sphere exists in the same location on each plane.)

No entrance is visible; there are only two physical ways to enter the temple. The easiest and most common is for the temple to open an archway. The other way is to fly through the negative energy orb (U14) and enter through the open walls in U12, U13, or U15. See U14 for the effects of passing through the orb.

Creature: The only encounter here is with the temple itself. If characters begin searching the walls for a secret door, the temple first alerts all its residents that intruders are about to enter. Then it uses its detect evil ability to learn whether any of the party members are evil. If not, it attempts to gain control of one of the heroes (a fighter, if possible) with its dominate monster ability. If it successfully gains control of a character, it opens an archway while commanding its new thrall to tell the rest that he or she found a secret trigger to open it. At the same time, it summons Taharak, who reaches area U2 in 2d6 rounds.

If its dominate monster attempt fails, the temple waits until a roguelike character closely examines the walls, then uses its enervation ability on that character and immediately opens an archway. Because the bolt of negative energy springs from the temple wall, the effect looks very much like a sprung trap, and the targeted character is likely to believe that he or she accidentally triggered a secret door and the attached trap.

The temple telepathically hails any evil characters it detects and asks their business, using detect thoughts to check their responses. If there is one evil character in a predominantly good party, the temple asks if that character is planning to betray the others and encourages him or her to do so. If the entire party is evil, it might decide to let the group in, unless it can determine (with detect thoughts) that its members mean harm to Irae T'sarran or Kiaransalee's cause.

If the characters use magic to enter the temple before searching for secret entrances, the temple alerts Taharak immediately and then tries to use dominate monster on a fighter once they are inside. In this case, Taharak and his companions are still fully ethereal when the characters enter.

Once the characters are inside, the temple leaves them to Irae T'sarran and her followers, at least for the moment. Further actions it may take are described in other areas below.

If the characters become ethereal outside the temple, the only way to enter the ethereal portion of it is through the negative energy orb. The temple does not open archways for any ethereal characters except Taharak and his cleric crew.

U2. ENTRANCE HALL (EL 16)

This strange-shaped room is filled with smooth ivory columns arranged in four uneven, curving rows of four columns each. A stairway leads up at one end of the room, and a door leads out through the opposite wall.

The columns provide one-half cover to a character fighting around them, or three-quarters cover to a character peering around them.

Creatures: The ethereal scouts confront the characters here, assuming that the party has not already destroyed them. When the heroes enter or the temple warns the scouts that they are coming, Taharak manifests and the nightmare carries the clerics to the Material Plane to do battle. Alternatively, if the characters became ethereal to enter the temple, the scouts remain on the Ethereal Plane and fight the characters there.

Taharak, the leader of the ethereal scouts, is the ghost of a powerful drow fighter. He was a mighty force for the cause of Lolth in life, but he abandoned Lolth in favor of Kiaransalee after dying and becoming a ghost. He is an impressive figure in full plate, with a helm crafted to resemble a leering skull. He wields a spiked chain but uses his withering touch against opponents on the Material Plane.

Taharak is accompanied by three clerics of Kiaransalee, female drow who also wear full plate armor. They wield magic morningstars made of black iron set with silver spikes, echoing Kiaransalee's holy symbol (a drow hand with silver rings), and they wear actual representations of their deity’s symbol openly around their necks. They consider themselves superior to Taharak but do not push the issue. The clerics make the best possible use of the columns as cover.

The nightmare is somewhat at a loss if it is forced to fight on the Material Plane, since it is used to fighting with Taharak on its back. It flees back to the Ethereal Plane if seriously threatened, and it projects to the Astral Plane if characters follow it to the Ethereal.

Taharak, Ghost Champion: hp 65; see page 146.

Nightmare: hp 47; see Monster Manual.

Cult Clerics (3): hp 61, 55, 53; see page 146.

The Temple: If the characters destroy Taharak, the temple lashes out at them with its horrid wilting ability. If that fails to kill them, it lets the matter rest for the time being.

If the characters have already encountered and eliminated the ethereal scouts, the temple uses its summon monster IX ability to summon a vrock demon to meet them instead. This encounter has an EL of 13. As a special exception to the usual rules, award experience for this vrock as if it were an independent creature, not a summoned monster.

Vrock Demon: hp 65; see Monster Manual.

Development: Destroying Taharak is not necessarily a final solution, since he has the rejuvenation ability common to all ghosts. The only way to destroy him permanently is to destroy Irac T'sarran permanently.

U3. BASEMENT STAIR

A stairway leading downward is the only feature in this long, narrow room.

There is nothing remarkable about this chamber.

U4. BASEMENT

This circular room has all the trappings of a torture chamber: a rack, an iron maiden, and numerous smaller implements of pain. Stretched out on a table, its hands and feet locked in iron manacles, is a body that has been stripped of its skin. It looks much like the undead creatures in the drow outpost.

A trapdoor is set in the center of the floor.

This creature is a newly formed quth-maren. Unless the characters have taken a course of action that would make this impossible, the body belongs to Hamadh the Unseen, leader of the Hidden. Ideally, the characters encountered Hamadh in a diplomatic (if not necessarily friendly) capacity and left him alive. If a different NPC better fits that description, use that character instead.

Creature: As a quth-maren, Hamadh is hardly a threat to the characters. He remembers nothing of his life or of them. If the heroes free him, he attacks blindly and, no doubt, falls quickly. Defeating him does not earn the party any experience points.

Quth-Maren: hp 58; see Appendix 1.

If combat here takes more than 2 rounds, Flenser emerges from the sub-basement (U5) to see what's going on.

Treasure: If the characters search the room (Search DC 15), they find Hamadh's belongings, which were stripped from him before the process of turning him into a quth-maren began. (If you decide to use a different NPC, substitute that character's gear instead.) See Appendix 2 for the complete list of Hamadh's gear, all of which is all here.

U5. SUB-BASEMENT (EL 17)

The odor of a charnel house fills the air. A rusty iron ladder descends down into the floor, leading to a small, mostly bare, circular room. A furry hide of indeterminate nature is piled to one side of the ladder. Above it, a drow hand is nailed to the wall with a large spike. It wears a silver ring on each of its fingers.
This is the home of the cleric responsible for the operation of the torture chamber and the creation of the quth-maren upstairs: a half-fiend drow, called a draegloth, named Flenser.

The pile of hide is Flenser's bed, and the hand nailed to the wall is an object of devotion—a very concrete representation of Kiaransalee's symbol. A close look at the hand reveals that the rings fit poorly. The ring on the middle finger doesn't fit over the knuckle, while the one on the smallest finger is too loose. These facts are a clue that the rings were placed on the hand after its owner's death.

Creature: Flenser is the hideous spawn of a glabrezu and a drow priestess of Lolth, a member of Maerimydra's House Chûmavh. While the birth of a draegloth such as Flenser is usually considered a sign of Lolth's favor among the drow, Flenser's birth killed her mother. Flenser was outcast from the city, and when she reached adulthood she became a cleric of Kiaransalee. She has achieved the vengeance she swore on the ruling house that cast her out, and her role in placing Irae T'sarran on the throne of Maerimydra has earned her a spot in the Undying Temple—a place she enjoys to no end.

Flenser is 8 feet tall, with inky black skin and a knotted mane of yellowish-white hair. Her hide is thick and covered with a fine coat of white hair, and her body is powerfully muscled. Two of her four arms end in hands tipped with powerful claws. The other two, much smaller, end in the normal hands she uses for spellcasting. Her face, which is slightly elongated like a dog's muzzle, has a bestial cast, and her mouth is full of vicious, sharp teeth.

U6. Ethereal Portal (EL 17)

A short wall separates the stairs down from the rest of the room. A single door to the left is just barely visible around the edge of the wall.

The characters cannot see the stairs up, the ethereal portal, or the second door until they come around the short wall.

The south side of this short wall contains a portal to the Ethereal Plane. The portal looks like an open archway filled with ghostly, swirling mist. From the other side, the wall looks—and is—completely solid. Any character stepping through the archway is transported to the corresponding location in the Ethereal Plane (U18) as if affected by an etherealness spell.

Creature: An unusual guard is stationed here—one who is as good at fighting ethereal opponents as physical ones. Yashar is a medusa, with a gaze attack that can petrify ethereal creatures. He is also a sorcerer specializing in force spells, which can affect ethereal foes. He wears a ring of see invisibility that allows him to see ethereal creatures normally, so he is comfortable fighting creatures on either side of the portal. Yashar typically stations himself just behind the wall containing the portal, in the area occupied by U18 on the Ethereal Plane. If he moves elsewhere in the room, the walls of U18 prevent him from seeing any ethereal creatures inside.

Yashar is short for his kind, only about 5 feet tall, but lithe and hardy. He has a powerful presence that draws attention to him—often fatally. Yashar has a familiar, a tiny viper that he steadfastly refuses to name.

U7. Yashar's Chamber

A thick fur on the floor of this room serves as a bed, with a few blankets and smaller furs piled on it in a heap. An assortment of small stone sculptures—life-sized animals such as lizards, rats, and other Underdark fauna—stand around the room in very natural-looking poses, apparently a medusa's idea of art. Another door leads out to the south.

This simple room is Yashar's residence, where he sleeps but does little else.

U8. Dining Room and Kitchen

Three chairs surround a small table on one side of this long room. On the other side is a small kitchen, including cabinets and a countertop but no cookfire.

The living inhabitants of the Undying Temple—Yashar (U7), Paelinn, and the sanctum guards (U24)—come here to prepare and eat their meals. The cupboards hold typical drow foods—cured rothé meat, dried cave fish, pungent rothé cheese, and an assortment of mushrooms, molds, and pickled slime molds. Those who eat here rarely stay for long and almost never gather for a common meal.

U9. Third Floor Landing (EL 11)

A short landing marks the next floor of the tower. The stairs continue up, and a door leads off to the left.

The door into U10 is locked (Open Lock DC 40) and trapped. That chamber is the residence of Paelinn, a divine seeker and accomplished rogue.

Trap: If any character touches the lock on the door without inserting the key (which Paelinn carries on her person at all times), a volley of poisoned darts fills the entire room.

Fusillade of Deathblade Darts: CR 11; +18 ranged (1d4+1 plus poison, dart); poison (deathblade, Fortitude DC 20 resists, 1d6 Con/2d6 Con); fires 1d8 darts at each target in U9; Search DC 25; Disable Device DC 25.

U10. Seeker's Rest (EL 17)

This is a warm room full of pleasant smells, comfortable furnishings, and attractive decorations. A small bed stands in the far corner, with a finely crafted wooden dresser beside it. A full-length silver mirror in an ornate wooden frame stands on the other side of the bed. In the center of the room is a bronze brazier full of smoldering coals and delicately scented incense, lending warmth to the room. A low divan stands near the brazier.

Opposite the divan, a large wooden box stands open. Two wooden panels are folded out from the lid, forming a three-pane image. The center pane, the inside of the lid, depicts a cruelly beautiful drow woman seated on a throne of bones, her face painted to resemble a skull. Each of her fingers wears a silver ring. The left panel of the triptych shows another drow woman standing with her face turned toward the center figure. She wears a simple black robe and holds a skull in her hands. Above her is a cavern ceiling studded with skulls whose eye sockets are alight with a pale red glow. The right panel shows the ghostly form of a heavily armored warrior. Her insubstantial armor is forged to resemble demonic features, and she holds a serrated greatsword in both hands. Bodies are strewn on the ground at her feet.

Below this three-part scene, the bottom of the box looks like a small altar. A lace cloth covers the wood, and three unlit candles stand before the three painted figures. A tiny brazier, also unlit, holds a few cubes of incense.

This fine chamber belongs to Paelinn, the divine seeker of Kiaransalee. A successful Knowledge (religion) check (DC 15) allows a character to identify Kiaransalee in the center panel of the triptych. Identifying the other two figures requires specialized knowledge of drow religion and a successful Knowledge (religion) check (DC 25). The figure on the left is Reaper of Souls Larynda Telenna, the leader of Kiaransalee’s cult across Faerûn, high priestess of the Vault of Gnashing Teeth beneath Vaasa. The figure on the right is Gurdren Myrinn, a keening spirit and divine champion of Kiaransalee, also based in the Vault of Gnashing Teeth.

Creature: If Paelinn is still alive when the characters reach this room, she attacks them by herself rather than allowing them to root through her belongings.

Paelinn, Divine Seeker: hp 74; see page 157.

Treasure: The two marginally valuable items in the room are the brazier (250 gp, 75 pounds) and the portable shrine (900 gp, 25 pounds).

U11. Fourth Floor Landing

This small landing has stairs continuing in both directions and a door on one side. This area is significantly colder than the lower levels of the temple.

The chill here is because of the proximity of the negative energy orb (U14). The effect is worse than natural cold—upon entering this level, any living character not warded against negative energy (such as by a negative energy protection spell) takes 1d6 points of negative energy damage. A new saving throw against the effect is required every round thereafter that the character remains in areas U11–U15. An affected character feels as if the cold is slowly draining the life from his or her body. A character reduced to 0 hp by this negative energy crumbles into ash.

U12. The Last Revenant (EL 18)

On the left side of the door, the wall rises only about halfway to the ceiling. Above it, the black orb that was visible from outside the tower suspends in the air. It seems to be the source of the cold that suffuses this area.

A mosaic on the floor depicts a skull, its mouth open wide to hold a black circle. In the mosaic, this circle is represented by a single circular tile, fully 5 feet in diameter. The eyes of the skull are glowing blue.

The black circle in the mosaic contains a trap (see Trap below). Every round a character not warded against negative energy remains in areas U11–U15, he or she takes 1d6 points of negative energy damage (see U11 for details).

Creature: If the characters killed Khumarr but did not destroy his body (see C51), his revenant now occupies this room. He looks much like he did in life, less any gear that the characters stripped from his body before he was brought to the Undying Temple for reanimation, and with the addition of all the wounds he suffered in his first encounter with them. Assuming the characters removed his demon armor and took his magic greatsword, he has replaced these with masterwork armor and a masterwork greatsword. If the characters left either item on the corpse long enough for Taharak’s group of ethereal scouts to remove it with the body, the revenant still carries them, and his statistics improve accordingly from those presented on page 158.

Khumarr has also lost his easygoing confidence and replaced it with a furious hatred of those who killed him. Unlike most of the revenants in Maerimydra, Khumarr is not under the direct control of Irae T’sarran. Because he can discern the heroes’ exact location with his find the guilty ability, their entrance to this room does not surprise him unless they enter by way of the Ethereal Plane (his ability does not cross planar boundaries).

Khumarr Revenant: hp 101; see page 158.

Trap: The mosaic is a trap—an energy drain effect triggered by any character standing on the black circle in the skull’s mouth. Khumarr’s revenant (if he is here) knows about the trap and uses it for two purposes. First, he tries to lure foes into standing on it so that they will suffer its ill effects. Second, he stands on it himself to receive the beneficial effects it offers an undead creature (2d4 × 5 temporary hit points).

Energy Drain Trap: CR 10; no attack roll necessary, affects any character standing on the black circle (2d4 negative levels); Fortitude DC 23 negates; Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

U13. Fifth Floor (EL 19)

Opposite the stairs that lead both up and down, the entire right half of the wall is open, revealing the side of the huge black globe hanging outside the tower. The chill in this room is intense.

This is the closest point to the negative energy orb at the heart of the Undying Temple (see vii for details). Every round that a character not warded against negative energy remains in areas U11–15, he or she takes 1d6 points of negative energy damage (see U11 for details).

Creature: Any character who makes a successful Spot check (DC 28) notices a pair of red eyes within the orb upon entering. An instant later, a shadowy form emerges from the orb and attacks. This creature is an orb wraith, an undead conglomerate that dwells within the negative energy orb. It leathes all living things and attacks without relenting. (The orb wraith moves freely between the Material and the Ethereal Planes, so if the characters previously destroyed it on the Ethereal Plane, in U21, they do not encounter another one here.)
An orb wraith is a vaguely humanoid mass of darkness. Different features—faces, limbs, glowing red eyes—shift and surface within the creature at different times. Bolts of purple-black negative energy spark within its body, like lightning within a looming thundercloud.

Orb Wraith: hp 217; see Appendix 1.

The Temple: The orb wraith is very closely linked to the life force of the Undying Temple itself, and the temple spares no effort to help the orb wraith defeat the characters—particularly if they have been talking about finding a way to destroy the orb (and thus the temple). The temple uses all its spell-like abilities (including those that are usable only once per day, if it has not used them already that day) to help defeat the characters here. If it exhausts all its abilities that are usable either once or three times per day, it uses enervation every round (with the bolts appearing out of the walls apparently randomly) until the orb wraith is slain or the characters fall or flee. If the characters defeat the orb wraith and leave the room, the temple lets them go, but if they turn their attention to the orb and discuss how to destroy it, it resumes its attacks to the best of its ability.

U14. Negative Energy Orb (EL 19)

The black orb is completely featureless and lightless. No depth is discernable, and nothing moves inside. It is as if vision itself is swallowed up in the inky void. Its cold seems to suck hungrily at every shred of warmth and life nearby.

The orb is a region of pure negative energy, a tiny pocket of the Negative Energy Plane existing simultaneously on the Material and Ethereal Planes.

Any character foolish enough to touch the negative energy orb gains a negative level (Fortitude DC 25 to remove). Any character who enters the orb gains a negative level each round he or she remains inside. A character who gains as many negative levels as he or she has levels or Hit Dice dies and immediately rises as a wraith.

Any undead creature that touches or enters the orb heals 5 hit points per round (or per touch) instead of gaining negative levels, up to its normal maximum hit points. This healing stacks with any fast healing ability the creature has.

A creature within the orb can use plane shift to move from the Material Plane to the Ethereal Plane, from the Ethereal Plane to the Material, or from either plane to the Negative Energy Plane at will, as a move-equivalent action. (Characters who travel to the Negative Energy Plane find it a featureless void with the same energy draining properties as the orb itself. They must use their own resources to return to the Material or Ethereal Plane.)

Creature: The orb is inhabited by an orb wraith, a conglomeration of normal wraiths formed by the orb’s negative energy. The orb wraith attacks characters in U13 and U21, so it is unlikely that they will encounter it within the orb.

Orb Wraith: hp 217; see Appendix 1.

U15. Sixth Floor

This long, narrow room approaches the tower’s pointed spire. The wall opposite the stairs is open to the air, and the opening looks out over the top of the great black orb.

Every round that a character not warded against negative energy remains in areas U11–U15, he or she takes 1d6 points of negative energy damage (see U11 for details). This area is empty.

U16. Seventh Floor

This small room is little more than a landing, with stairs leading down into the body of the tower and up to the very top of its spiral.
If the characters have not already slain the keening spirit in U17 or U26, a faint, eerie moaning echoes down the stairs into this room from above.

U17. EIGHTH FLOOR (EL 18)

This tiny room is the very top of the tower’s spiral. On the wall opposite the stairs, an image of an archway is carved into the stone, but a solid wall fills the arch.

This is the back side of a one-way portal leading from U26 in the Ethereal Plane to this location on the Material Plane. Creatures using that portal to return to the Material Plane seem to step through the solid wall.

Creature: If the characters killed Cabrath Nelinderra in C73 of Castle Maerimydra and did not prevent the ethereal scouts from bringing her body to the Undying Temple (by destroying the body or the scouts), then her ghost inhabits U26, which is on the Ethereal Plane coexistent with this area. As a ghost, Cabrath can attack characters in either plane (or both simultaneously).

To opponents on the Material Plane, Cabrath’s spirit appears as a ghostly, insubstantial version of the way she looked in life—a drow woman with dusky gray skin, gray-white hair, and amber eyes. She still wears a heavy black robe with royal purple inside the sleeves, but it seems to trail off into smoke at the bottom and the ends of the sleeves. She does not seem to be enjoying her undeath at all; her face is contorted into a mask of grief, and she moans, sobs, and wails continually.

U18. ETHEREAL SECOND FLOOR (EL 17)

This room is somewhat disorienting. The ceiling is smooth and level, but the floor slopes sharply up from a point at the bottom to meet the ceiling only 8 feet away. No gravity pulls down to the floor, so it is easy enough to walk—either up the slope or simply up through the air—up to where a hole leads through the ceiling to a room above this one. On the wall opposite the hole in the ceiling, an image of an archway is carved into the stone, but a solid wall fills the arch.

The air is foggy but not damp, though the stone of the building seems clear and solid enough. Because this room is so small, no part of the Material Plane area coexisting with it (U6) is visible.

Creature: If Yashar, the medusa sorcerer in U6 on the Material Plane, is still alive and standing guard in his accustomed spot, he is visible as an indistinct, almost ghostly version of himself. Thanks to his ring of see invisibility, he can see characters in this room, and his spells and gaze allow him to attack such characters even while remaining on the Material Plane. If his attacks seem ineffective, he is willing to use the portal to face his enemies on the Ethereal Plane.

U19. ETHEREAL THIRD FLOOR

This small room has three solid walls, and the floor and the ceiling seem solid enough (except for the hole through which you entered), but the fourth wall seems hazy and insubstantial. It blocks vision, but it’s not at all clear whether it blocks movement as well.

The insubstantial wall is on the Material Plane—it is the curving north wall of U10. Characters on the Ethereal Plane can move through it freely, but they cannot see through it without putting at least their eyes on the other side of it.

Area U10 on the Material Plane is Paelinn’s residence. No features of her room are visible within this area (she avoids the northwest corner of her room, without even realizing she is doing so), and she has no means to detect or affect characters in this area.

U20. ETHEREAL FOURTH FLOOR

This room is long and narrow. A hole in the floor leads down, and another hole leads up about 15 feet away. The wall opposite these holes rises only about halfway to the ceiling, and the bottom of the gigantic black orb is visible beyond. It seems to draw the warmth out of the air here, leaving an unearthly cold behind.
A character who looks out the gap in the wall near the south end of the room can see around the sphere to the indistinct form of the temple on the Material Plane. Every round that a character not warded against negative energy remains in areas U20–U23, he or she takes 1d6 points of negative energy damage (see U11 for details).

U21. ETHEREAL FIFTH FLOOR (EL 19)

Opposite the holes that lead both up and down, the entire right half of the wall is open, revealing the side of the huge black globe hanging outside the tower. The chill in this room is intense.

This area is the closest point on the Ethereal Plane to the negative energy orb at the heart of the Undying Temple. Every round a that character not warded against negative energy remains in areas U20–U23, he or she takes 1d6 points of negative energy damage (see U11 for details).

Creature: Any character who makes a successful Spot check (DC 28) notices a pair of red eyes within the orb upon entering. An instant later, a gigantic shadowy form emerges from the orb and attacks. This creature is an orb wraith, an undead conglomerate that dwells within the negative energy orb. It loathes all living things and attacks without relenting. (The orb wraith moves freely between the Material and the Ethereal Planes, so if the characters

Ethereal Plane Features

The Ethereal Plane is a misty, fog-bound dimension that is coexistent with the Material Plane. Ethereal travelers must deal with altered senses, slow but three-dimensional movement, and the possibility of attack not only from other ethereal creatures but also from certain spells and effects on the Material Plane.

Senses: The Material Plane itself is visible from the Ethereal Plane, but it appears muted and indistinct, its colors blurring into each other and its edges turning fuzzy. No matter where a character is on the Ethereal Plane, he or she can see the corresponding part of the Material Plane. Vision is limited to 60 feet in both aspects. Furthermore, the Material Plane appears as if wrapped in fog, so ethereal observers can't discern precise details, such as normal writing, though it's easy to distinguish faces and landmarks. Sight is otherwise normal, so gaze attacks launched from the Material Plane affect ethereal creatures. (A vampire's domination ability and the eyebite spell are similar to gaze attacks but do not reach into the Ethereal Plane from the Material.)

The Ethereal Plane emits its own diffuse light, so ethereal observers do not need torches to see onto the Material Plane, even if it's pitch-black there. Light sources do not expand the 60-foot vision limit on the Ethereal Plane, nor do alternate methods of sight such as darkvision. A creature with blindsight on the Ethereal Plane can detect other ethereal creatures at its normal range.

To viewers on the Ethereal Plane, objects on the Material Plane are foggy, indistinct, and almost translucent. Such objects block line of sight but provide concealment, not cover. An ethereal observer can't see through a wall on the Material Plane without poking his or her head through it first. An ethereal character whose eyes are totally within a Material Plane object cannot see.

Ethereal listeners hear Material Plane sounds only when they originate less than 60 feet away, and such sound is distorted and ghostly. Sonic attacks do not reach from the Material Plane to the Ethereal Plane, nor do the senses of touch, smell, and taste.

An ethereal traveler is normally invisible and inaudible to an individual on the Material Plane, though spells and abilities such as see invisibility reveal an ethereal object or creature. Blindsight used on the Material Plane does not reveal Ethereal Plane creatures. Creatures on the Ethereal Plane cannot talk to those on the Material Plane, even if they want to be heard.

Movement: Creatures move on the Ethereal Plane just as they do on the Material Plane. However, because of the misty nature of the plane's protomatter, they can move up and down just as easily as they can along solid surfaces. All movement is at half speed, both for travelers and for creatures native to the Ethereal Plane. A definite "down" on the Ethereal Plane corresponds to the gravity of the coexistent plane to which it is attached, but there is no danger of falling.

Because the Ethereal Plane is coexistent with the Material Plane, most travelers walk normally along the ground of the Material Plane. Creatures in the Ethereal Plane can move through solid objects on the Material Plane, but they cannot move through solid objects on the Ethereal Plane (such as the ethereal portion of the Undying Temple).

Force Effects: Force effects extend onto the Ethereal Plane and affect creatures therein. A wall of force, for example, prevents an ethereal creature from passing through it. The appearance of the force effect is the same as it is on the Material Plane—often invisible.

Ethereal Solids: Half of the Undying Temple was built of stone and magically shifted to the Ethereal Plane. Now that portion is ethereal stone—invisible and insubstantial to creatures on the Material Plane, but completely solid and real to creatures on the Ethereal Plane. Characters in the ethereal portion of the temple can move in any direction as if flying, which is why there are no staircases, only holes in floors and ceilings to allow access to all the temple's levels. Ethereal characters can also move through walls that exist only on the Material Plane, though such walls are opaque to them. They cannot, however, move through the walls that exist on the Ethereal Plane. The walls, floor, and ceiling there are as real to them as material stone is on the Material Plane.

To the benefit of the temple's residents, this effect makes it more difficult for characters to scout through walls by becoming ethereal. However, characters on the Material Plane can use spells such as see invisibility or true seeing to see creatures and objects on the Ethereal Plane, and they can freely pass through ethereal walls. have previously destroyed it on the Material Plane, in U13, they do not encounter another one here.)

Orb Wraith: hp 217; see Appendix 1.

The Temple: The Undying Temple spares no effort to help the orb wraith defeat the characters. See U13 for a description of the temple’s tactics during this encounter.

U22. Ethereal Sixth Floor Landing (EL 8)

This small landing has holes leading both up and down and a door on one side. This area is quite cold.

Every round a that character not warded against negative energy remains in areas U20–U23, he or she takes 1d6 points of negative energy damage (see U11 for details).

The door into U23 is locked (Open Lock DC 40) and trapped, since it is the residence of Umaerh, a lich and arcane devotee of Kiaransalee.

Trap: If any living creature touches the door, the handle, or the lock, a prismatic spray erupts from the door in a cone. (The effect is blocked by the wall opposite, but it would otherwise be a 60-foot cone.)

CR 8; 10-ft. cone, one or more beams strike each character in the area (prismatic spray); save by beam color (DC 25); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 32.

U23. Devotee's Domain (EL 18)

Beyond the door is what looks like another world. Instead of walls, ceiling, and floor, a tight lattice of bones fills the area. A throne made of bones stands in one corner of the room, and upon it a drow woman sits motionless. Her long, white hair flows down around her body, and her face is painted to resemble a skull like the one she holds in her left hand. The chill of the other rooms nearby is unabated here.

This scene is actually a permanent image created by Umaerh (from a scroll). The image is his version of a religious icon, depicting Kiaransalee on her bone throne. (Because the bone-lattice floor looks and feels about as smooth as the actual temple floor, walking in the room does not count as interacting with the illusion.) Any character who interacts in other ways with the image can make a Will save (DC 19) to disbelieve the illusion. Success reveals completely bare stone walls behind it.

Every round that a character not warded against negative energy remains in areas U20–U23, he or she takes 1d6 points of negative energy damage (see U11 for details). Any undead creature (such as Umaerh) in this room heals 1d6 points of damage each round, up to its normal maximum hit points.

Creature: This room is the home of Umaerh, a lich and an arcane devotee of Kiaransalee. For a lich, Umaerh is in amazingly good physical condition, thanks to his robe of gentle repose. His inky black flesh is smooth and supple, though he is extremely gaunt. His stark white hair is long and heavily combed, gathered below his shoulders in a loose ponytail. His magical garment is a light, open-fronted robe of forest green, which he wears over a white shirt and black breeches, maintaining a stylish appearance. A mumified hand with five rings hangs around his neck, and heavy bracers of armor adorn his arms. He is surly and short-tempered (some would say half crazed) and fascinated with death and undeath. He focuses on that aspect of Kiaransalee’s portfolio rather than vengeance.

Tactics: If he has any advance notice of the characters’ approach (including a warning from the temple), Umaerh casts improved invisibility on himself and positions himself within the image of Kiaransalee. He concentrates on manipulating the illusion to respond as he thinks the characters might expect, short of creating intelligible speech.

Unlike many liches, Umaerh is neither a wizard nor a necromancer—he is a sorcerer with an impressive repertoire of attack spells, from prismatic spray to magic missile. He remains invisible as long as possible, using an action to recast improved invisibility if the characters dispel it. (If the characters all seem capable of targeting him effectively even while he is invisible, he does not bother to renew the spell if they dispel it.) He begins combat by casting baste on himself, then leads off with spells that do not have obvious points of origin, such as dominate person, feeblemind, and repulsion. Then he launches into his most powerful attack spells—prismatic spray (which he can cast up to five times), chain lightning, and feeblemind.

Development: Umaerh’s phylactery is an unadorned mithral ring on Irac Tsarran’s left thumb (she is in U29). If the characters slay him but do not destroy the ring, Umaerh reappears 1d10 days after his destruction and goes to any length to recover the ring. The phylactery radiates a strong aura of necromantic magic (caster level 12th). It has a hardness of 15, 60 hp, and a break DC of 40.

U24. Sanctum Defense (EL Variable)

Read the following text if the characters came up from level six (U22):

Opposite the hole in the floor through which you came is a straight wall with a door set in its middle. Another wall curves around alongside the hole, and a third wall joins the two—but it seems only half substantial. Where it meets the curving wall, the shorter wall is blurry, as if it were made of smoke. No hole leading upward is visible.

Read the following text if the characters came down from level eight (U26):

The hole leads down into a tiny triangular room. One wall seems blurry and indistinct, almost insubstantial. No hole leading downward is visible.

As shown on the map, this room is divided by the north wall of U16 on the Material Plane, and it is visible but insubstantial to characters on the Ethereal Plane. Characters can move through it with ease, but no form of vision can penetrate it.

If the characters have not already slain the keening spirit in U17 or U26, a faint, eerie moaning echoes down through the hole into this room from above.

Creatures (EL 18): Two drow guards armed with death spears stand watch here to prevent intrusion via the lower... levels of the ethereal temple. They wear full plate armor with visors covering their faces, and they attack in complete silence.
They hope in this way to give the impression of being nothing more than magically animated suits of armor.

†Sanctum Defenders: hp 102, 89; see page 159.

†Trap (EL 8): The door to the high priestess’s quarters (U25) is warded with a trap that targets a slay living spell on anyone who touches the door without speaking the password, which is known only to Irae T’sarran (“Vaiaran”). At the same time, a circle of doom spell centered on the character touching the door affects all nearby creatures. The trap resets automaticically and immediately.

†Death Trap: CR 8; slay living, affects creature touching doors; Fortitude DC 22 for 3d6+21 damage; circle of doom af-facts creature touching door and all other creatures within 20 feet (1d8+20 damage); Fortitude DC 22 half; Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 30.

U25. HIGH PRIESTESS’S QUARTERS

The inside of this room is swathed in deep magical darkness.
This effect is a deeper darkness spell that Irae T’sarran casts every twenty days to keep her chambers in darkness. Her eyes of the spider give her continual true seeing, which can penetrate the darkness, allowing her to function normally here while still surrounding herself with a feeling of gloom.
If any character uses true seeing or daylight to see normally in this room, read the following description:

The darkness parts to reveal a luxurious chamber, draped in black brocades to complement the magical darkness. A large bed stands in the corner opposite the doorway and to the left. Its frame is black mahogany, and the bedclothes are black silks and sable fur. A dresser stands beside the bed.
In the corner opposite the bed is a small set of shelves loaded down with books and scrolls. A black woven rug lies on the floor in front of the shelves.

This room is Irae T’sarran’s personal chamber, though she spends the vast majority of her time in the Greater Temple (U29), performing the spell research to develop her great revenue spell. If the characters decide to wait here in ambush for her when she returns to her chamber, they must wait for 2d10 hours before she comes to catch 4 hours of rest. She does not arrive unprepared, since the temple telepathically warns her of intruders and keeps her apprised of their locations, unless her sentience has already been destroyed. She always brings her two bodyguards (revenant Shattered Tower guards) with her, though they wait outside her room unless she is expecting attack. See U29 for her statistics and those of her bodyguards.

The dresser beside the bed holds only mundane clothing.
The books and scrolls in the corner are religious texts relating to the faith of Kiaransalee. A character with ranks in Knowledge (religion) can use the books to make a check (at a +2 circumstance bonus) to learn specific details about Kiaransalee’s faith and doctrine. A character with no ranks in Knowledge (religion) can still make an untrained Intelligence check (at a +2 circumstance bonus) to answer basic questions about the faith (DC 15 or below). See the Introduction for more information about Kiaransalee and her church.

U26. MATERIAL PORTAL (EL 18)

This tiny room is formed from two solid walls and two that seem misty and insubstantial.

The characters cannot see the portal to the Material Plane or the second door until they come through the Material Plane wall of U17 and around the short wall.

The north side of the short wall contains a portal to the Material Plane. The portal looks like an open archway leading into a small room (U17), where the misty vapors of the Ethereal Plane are gone and everything looks especially crisp and clear. From the other side, the wall looks—and is—completely solid to ethereal creatures. Any character stepping through the archway is transported to the corresponding location in the Material Plane (U17), ending whatever effect made the character ethereal in the first place.

Creature: If the characters killed Cabrath Nelinderra in C53 of Castle Maerimydra and did not prevent the ethereal scouts from bringing her body to the Undying Temple (by destroying the body or the scouts), then her ghost inhabits this area. As a ghost, Cabrath can attack characters in either the Ethereal Plane or the Material.

To opponents on the Ethereal Plane, Cabrath’s spirit appears exactly as she did in life—a drow woman with dusky gray skin, gray-white hair, and amber eyes. She still wears a heavy black robe with royal purple inside the sleeves. She does not seem to be enjoying her undead at all; her face is contorted into a mask of grief, and she moans, sobs, and wails continually.

†Cabrath Nelinderra Keening Spirit: hp 89; see page 158.

If the characters prevented Cabrath’s body from returning to the Undying Temple, the spiderstone golem from U28 is in this room instead. Unlike the keening spirit, it has no ability to affect creatures on the Material Plane.

†Spiderstone Golem: hp 94; see Appendix 1.

U27. EMPTY ROOM

This room is bare and featureless, except for a door on the side wall.

This room is earmarked to serve as a vestry for the Greater Temple above (U29). Currently all the temple gear is stored in the temple itself, so this room is as empty as it appears.

U28. CONSTRUCT GUARD (EL 18)

This room is bare and featureless stone, except for a tall, obsidian statue of a four-armed male drow that stands in the middle of the room, facing the two doors leading in.

Like U27, this room is intended to serve as a vestry or storage area for the temple, but Irae T’sarran has not yet accumulated enough materials to make such storage necessary. In the meantime, a powerful golem is stationed here to help guard this level. Irae T’sarran is not entirely certain that it serves her faithfully; she believes that it may still have some of Loth’s will left in it. Thus, she does not trust it with solo guard duty as long as Cabrath’s spirit is present.

Creature: This creature is a spiderstone golem—a special creation of the drow animated by an evil spirit from the Demonweb Pits. It stands about 9 feet tall and is carved to resemble a male drow with four arms. It animates as soon as a nondrow enters the room, spitting webs to entangle creatures and slamming them with all four stone fists.

่าว Spiderstone Golem: hp 94; see Appendix 1.

If the ghost of Cabrath Nelinderra is not in U26, the spiderstone golem is in that area instead of here.

U29. THE GREATER TEMPLE (EL 21+)

A giant skull, nearly 3 feet tall and probably originally belonging to a fire giant, is the focal point of this room. A black cloth embroidered with silver stretches across the skull, and several candles in silver holders burn on top of it. Four rotting drow corpses stand flanking the skull, each one holding a candle. Two more corpses kneel before the skull, one clutching a heavy tome to its chest, the other holding a silver dagger. On the wall behind the skull is the looming image of a drow woman’s face, painted to resemble a skull.
The mural continues onto the floor, where the drow’s outstretched hand is painted so that she seems to be cradling the skull in her outstretched hand. The other walls depict grisly scenes of death and torture. The floor is covered in an abstract mosaic of black, blue, and purple tiles. Three more corpses stand against the wall directly opposite the skull. One holds an unlit censer, one holds an aspergill, and the third holds a brazier, all made of silver.

In the center of the room, standing on a large, white circle in the middle of the dark mosaic and flanked by two undead bodyguards, is an eerily beautiful elf woman with white skin and a hairless head. Her body seems to be wrapped in a glowing, blue-green mist that surrounds her shoulders and chest, then rises up behind her head like a high collar and trails behind her like a cloak. On her right hand is a fine metal gauntlet, cruelly pointed at the fingertips. In her left hand she holds a long black rod with an elaborate design of loosely woven and twisted strands at one end.
Energy, like a jet of pale green flame, spurts out from this end of the rod, which she holds like a badge of office. A silver plate studded with a row of rubies adorns her head like a tight-fitting helm, extending down to cover her left eye as well.

The greater temple is the symbolic and spiritual center of Irae T'sarran's power in the ruins of Maerimydra. The priestess spends almost all her time here conducting her spell research, and every other denizen of the Undying Temple visits at least Once a day to offer prayers and small sacrifices to the Lady of the Dead, Kiaransalee.

The fire giant skull serves as the altar for the temple. The altar cloth atop it is embroidered in silver thread with the image of a slender drow hand wearing a silver ring on each finger. The painting behind and beneath the altar depicts Kiaransalee. A successful Knowledge (religion) check (DC 15) allows a character to identify the deity, and a successful Knowledge (religion) check (DC 10) allows identification of the symbol as Kiaransalee's.

Creatures: The white-skinned elf in the center of the room is the albino drow Irae T'sarran. Characters close enough to attack her in melee notice that her one visible eye is as red as the ruby that has replaced her left eye.

Irae T'sarran is cruel, ruthless, and completely unafraid of death. She has much in common with the deity she serves. Utterly consumed with a desire for vengeance stemming from her youth in Maerimydra, she totters on the brink of sanity. She has already exacted her revenge upon the noble houses of the city for "allowing" House T'sarran to be destroyed by a rival house while she was away from the city, and she has since clawed her way to the top of a new order in Maerimydra. Convinced that she was robbed of her proper place in the world, she continues to strive for ever-increasing power that reaches beyond the fallen drow city, while obeying the dictates of her vengeance-mad patron deity. Both Kiaransalee and Irae T'sarran believe they can and will overthrow the tyranny of Lolth and claim vengeance on the surface-dwellers who exiled her (see Irae T'sarran's Power-Up Suite in her statistics on page 160). As a summoned monster, the bebilith does not raise the Encounter Level.

In addition to Irae T'sarran and her two revenant bodyguards, nine Medium-size zombies serve as acolytes and furniture in the room. They do not fight unless attacked, and defeating them earns the characters no experience. If she has time before the characters burst in, Irae also summons a bebilith to help defend the temple once more.

Revenancer, could very well return from death as a keening spirit. If she does, let her lie low long enough for the characters to savor their truly epic victory before she returns to plague them once more.

Regardless of the outcome, Maerimydra is a drow stronghold no more. Its ruins continue to attract looters and scavengers for years to come.

Conclusion

The death of Irae T'sarran effectively decapitates the cult of Kiaransalee in Maerimydra and ends its power there. The drow raids against the surface world end, and the characters are hailed as heroes.

Any remaining Kiarransaleen disperse to lick their wounds and plan disproportionate revenge against the characters. The Undying Temple, if not destroyed, begins to lure new converts to Kiaransalee's cause. The Weave disruption continues until the temple is destroyed.

Kurgoth Hellspawn, still alive, eventually gains access to the castle and completes his conquest of Maerimydra. If he is dead, any remaining members of the Hidden move into the castle and take up the fight against his army. Leaderless, the goblinoids lose interest and eventually disperse.

Regardless of the outcome, Maerimydra is a drow stronghold no more. Its ruins continue to attract looters and scavengers for years to come.

Further Adventures

City of the Spider Queen is an adventure of epic scope. Characters who achieve the main goal of the adventure (foiling Irae T'sarran's plan to raise an undead army to lay waste to the surface world) could still leave abundant loose ends behind them. For example, many of the villains in this adventure, such as the ghosts, are very difficult to destroy permanently. Below are a few of the major players who might return to bedevil the PCs.

Irae T'sarran, as a favored priestess of the goddess called the Revenancer, could very well return from death as a keening spirit. If she does, let her lie low long enough for the characters to savor their truly epic victory before she returns to plague them once more.

Taharak, if he rejuvenates, seeks out Irae T'sarran. Only her destruction can prevent him from restoring himself. As long as she lives (or persists in undead), Taharak will be found in her service.

Cabrath Nelinderra, by contrast, has no particular love for or loyalty to Irae T'sarran. If she rejuvenates, she considers her debt to the albino priestess paid and makes her own way in the world. She relocates to another Underdark location (any place that makes sense for your campaign) and begins gathering her own cult dedicated to Kiaransalee.

Finally, the characters might kill Irae T'sarran and leave Maerimydra without destroying all the villains in Castle Maerimydra and the Undying Temple. As long as Irae T'sarran exists in any form, she tries to keep these creatures under her direct control, and any surviving creatures could populate her new stronghold.
This appendix contains statistics and descriptions for new monsters and magic items that appear in this adventure.

Vile minions of Kiaransalee, abyssal ghouls are twisted undead creatures with fiendish characteristics. Their abyssal connections make them far more formidable opponents than common ghouls. An abyssal ghoul looks similar to a common ghoul in that it is a warped humanoid figure with bestial features. Its skin is scaly and tough, and its fingers and toes end in fearsome claws several inches in length. Its teeth are equally fearsome, and a foot-long tongue dangles from its mouth, trailing into smoky incorporeality at its tip. Though an abyssal ghoul is blind, its other senses allow it to perceive prey around it.

Abyssal ghouls speak Abyssal.

Combat

An abyssal ghoul enters combat slashing with its claws. Its strange tongue allows it to suck mental energy from prey it has pinned.

Despite their apparent bestial nature, abyssal ghouls are quite intelligent, and they show considerable cunning in battle. In groups, they always try to flank opponents so that they can take advantage of sneak attack opportunities.

Disease (Su): Any creature hit by an abyssal ghoul’s front claw or rear claw attack must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 18) or contract demon fever. After an incubation period of 1 day, the disease deals 1d6 points of Constitution damage. Each day after contracting demon fever, the creature must succeed at another Fortitude save (DC 18) or take the same damage. Each time it is damaged by the disease, the creature must immediately succeed at another Fortitude save (DC 18) or 1 point of the Constitution damage taken becomes Constitution drain instead. After making a successful Fortitude save against the Constitution damage on each of two consecutive days, the creature recovers.

Improved Grab (Ex): If an abyssal ghoul hits an opponent its own size or smaller with both front claws, it deals normal damage and attempts to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity (grapple bonus +15). If it gets a hold, it can attempt to pin and use its Wisdom drain ability on its next grapple check. Alternatively, the abyssal ghoul has the option to conduct the grapple normally, or simply use its tail to hold the opponent (–20 penalty on grapple check, but the ghoul is not considered grappled). In either case, each successful grapple check it makes during successive rounds automatically deals damage from both front claws.

Sneak Attack (Ex): Any time the abyssal ghoul’s target is denied a Dexterity bonus, or when it is flanked by the abyssal ghoul, the latter deals an additional +5d6 points of damage on a successful melee attack.

Wisdom Drain (Su): If an abyssal ghoul successfully pins a living opponent, it can drain 1d6 points of Wisdom with its smoky tongue on the same action. Each round thereafter that the pin is maintained, it automatically drains an additional 1d6 points of Wisdom. A creature reduced to 0 Wisdom by an abyssal ghoul becomes unconscious until at least 1 point of Wisdom is restored.

Blindsight (Ex): An abyssal ghoul is blind, but it maneuvers and fights as well as a sighted creature by using scent and vibration to ascertain its surroundings. This ability enables it to discern objects and creatures within 90 feet. The abyssal ghoul usually does not need to make Spot or Listen checks to notice creatures within range of its blindsight.

Deathwatch (Sp): This ability functions like the deathwatch spell, except that it is always active and the abyssal ghoul always knows how near death all creatures within 90 feet of it are. Because of this knowledge, it often pauses to kill fragile creatures (those with 3 or fewer hit points remaining) before moving on to attack healthier foes.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): An abyssal ghoul retains its Dexterity bonus to AC even when flat-footed or struck by an attacker it can’t perceive. In addition, it cannot be flanked except by a rogue of 20th level or higher.

Undead Traits: An abyssal ghoul is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. It is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. An abyssal ghoul cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if it is willing.

Demon, Blood Fiend

Climate/Terrain: Any land and underground
Organization: Solitary, pair, or gang (3–5)
Challenge Rating: 14
Treasure: Standard
Alignment: Always chaotic evil
Advancement: 13–18 HD (Large), 19–36 HD (Huge)

Blood fiends create more blood fiends from other demons in a manner similar to the way vampires create more vampires from humanoids. Their gazes can sap the will of mortals.

A blood fiend is an ogre-sized, demonic creature that stands about 9 feet tall. Its thick, scaly hide is a deep purple color, almost black. Each of its four strong arms ends in a humanlike hand, each finger of which is tipped with a vicious claw. A blood fiend has a wolflike muzzle lined with sharp teeth that seem too large to fit in its mouth, and glowing red eyes.

Blood fiends speak Abyssal.

Combat

A blood fiend lacks the subtlety of an ordinary vampire. It does not hesitate to wade into melee with its four claws and vicious bite.

Blood Drain (Ex): A blood fiend sucks blood from a living victim when it hits with its bite attack. Each successful blood drain attack deals 1d4 points of Constitution drain.

Domination (Su): Like a vampire, a blood fiend can crush an opponent's will by looking into its eyes. This attack functions like a gaze effect, except that it is a standard action, and creatures merely looking at the blood fiend are not affected. Any creature within 30 feet that the blood fiend targets for an opponent's will by looking into its eyes. This attack functions like a gaze effect, except that it is a standard action, and creatures merely looking at the blood fiend are not affected. Any creature within 30 feet that the blood fiend targets for domination must succeed at a Will save (DC 21) or gain one negative level. For each negative level gained, the blood fiend heals 5 points of damage.

Energy Drain (Su): Any living creature hit by a blood fiend's claw attack must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 21) or gain one negative level. For each negative level gained, the blood fiend heals 5 points of damage.

Energy Drain (Su): Any living creature hit by a blood fiend's claw attack must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 21) or gain one negative level. For each negative level gained, the blood fiend heals 5 points of damage. If the amount of healing is more than the damage the creature has taken, it gains any excess as temporary hit points.

Alternate Form (Su): A blood fiend can assume the shape of a regular or fiendish dire bat, a dire wolf, a howler, or a nightmare as a standard action. This ability functions like a polymorph self spell (caster level 12th), except that the blood fiend also gains the extraordinary abilities of the form assumed. The creature can remain in the assumed form indefinitely.

Create Spawn (Su): An outsider of the evil subtype slain by a blood fiend's energy drain attack (negative levels equal to current Hit Dice, or drained below 1st level) rises as a blood fiend 1d4 days after death. The new blood fiend does not possess any of the abilities it had in life.

Fast Healing (Ex): A blood fiend heals 5 points of damage per round as long as it has at least 1 hit point. If reduced to 0 hit points or lower, a blood fiend automatically assumes gaseous form and attempts to escape. Its fast healing begins as soon as it has rested anywhere (it is not limited to a coffin) for 1 hour without interruption. A dismissal, dispel evil, banishment, dictum, or holy word spell cast on it while its current hit points are below 1 destroys it utterly.

Gaseous Form (Su): At will, a blood fiend can assume gaseous form as a standard action. This ability functions like the gaseous form spell (caster level 5th), except that the blood fiend can remain gaseous indefinitely and has a fly speed of 20 feet with perfect maneuverability.

Skills: A blood fiend receives a +8 racial bonus on Bluff, Hide, Listen, Move Silently, Search, Sense Motive, and Spot checks.

Demon, Maurezhi (tanar’ri)

Medium-Size Outsider (Chaotic, Evil)

Hit Dice: 5d8+5 (27 hp)

Initiative: +2

Speed: 40 ft.

AC: 15 (+2 Dex, +3 natural), touch 12, flat-footed 13

Attacks: Bite +7 melee and 2 claws +7 melee

Damage: Bite 1d6+2 plus paralysis, claw 1d4+1 plus paralysis

Face/Reach: 5 ft. by 5 ft.

Special Attacks: Consume, paralysis, pounce, spell-like abilities

Special Qualities: Assume shape, DR 10/+1, outsider traits, SR 19, summon creatures, tanar’ri traits

Saves: Fort +5, Ref +6, Will +5

Abilities: Str 14, Dex 15, Con 12, Int 9, Wis 12, Cha 17

Demon, Maurezhi Skills: Disguise +10*, Hide +9, Jump +10, Listen +10, Move Silently +9, Spot +10

Feats: Alertness, Multiattack

Climate/Terrain: Any land and underground

Organization: Solitary, pair, or pack (3–5)

Challenge Rating: 9

Treasure: Standard and consumed characters’ gear

Alignment: Always chaotic evil

Advancement: Special (see below)

Maurezhis are hideous demons that feed on corpses. Unlike common ghouls, they can assume the forms of humanoid creatures they consume.

In its natural form, a maurezhi strongly resembles an ordinary ghoul. Its hunched and gaunt body has the pallor of death. Its ears are long and pointed, and its mouth is full of serrated teeth for rending flesh. Its elongated fingers end in wicked claws, and its muscular legs, which resemble those of a big cat, allow it to run quickly and pounce on its prey.

Maurezhis speak Abyssal. When a maurezhi assumes another creature’s form, it can speak any language that creature could speak. Like other tanar’ri, maurezhis can also communicate telepathically.

Combat

In its natural form, a maurezhi pounces on its prey and tears the flesh with its claws and teeth. It fights in a consumed creature’s guise only if it wishes to maintain that disguise or if it can gain some clear advantage by doing so.

Consume (Ex): When a maurezhi slays a sentient living creature (Intelligence score 3 or higher) and consumes the body, it gains additional power from this grisly food. It must begin eating the corpse within 10 minutes of its death and requires 30 minutes to complete the consumption. If the maurezhi is interrupted during this process, it can’t completely consume the corpse or gain the benefits. A creature that has been consumed by a maurezhi cannot be restored to life through any form of raising or resurrection that requires part of the corpse. A wish, miracle, or true resurrection spell can restore a devoured victim to life, but there is a 50% chance that even such powerful magic will fail.

There is no limit to the number of corpses a maurezhi can devour in this fashion; but it advances (see below) only by devouring the corpses of creatures whose Hit Dice or levels are at least half its own current Hit Dice. For example, a maurezhi of 13 Hit Dice can advance only by devouring the corpse of a character of at least 7th level.

For each suitable corpse a maurezhi consumes, its hit Dice, natural armor bonus, Strength, Intelligence, and base attack bonus each increase by +1. Its base saving throw bonuses improve according to its new Hit Dice. It gains additional skill points equal to 8 + its Intelligence modifier, and it spends these additional points on skills possessed by its victim (all of which are treated as class skills for the maurezhi). If the added Hit Dice brings the maurezhi’s total to any multiple of four, it gains a new feat as well, which it can choose from among the feats its previous victims had, assuming that it meets the necessary prerequisites. In addition, the maurezhi gains access to the memories of the creature it has consumed, can speak any language that creature knew, and can assume that creature’s form (see below).

The maurezhi can reach a maximum of 20 Hit Dice through advancement. Its challenge rating, damage reduction and spell resistance improve with advancement as shown on the table below.

Paralysis (Ex): Any creature hit by a maurezhi’s claw or bite attack must succeed at a Fortitude save (13, or DC 10 + 1/2 the maurezhi’s Hit Dice + its Constitution modifier, whichever is higher) or be paralyzed for 1d6+4 minutes.

Pounce (Ex): If a maurezhi charges, it can make a full attack even though it has moved.

Spell-Like Abilities: Always active—deathwatch; at will—animate dead, blue, cause fear, chill touch, death knell, hold person, invisibility; 3/day—fear. Caster level equal to total HD; save DC 13 + spell level.

Assume Shape (Su): A maurezhi can take on the appearance of any humanoid creature whose corpse it has consumed. This ability functions like the alter self spell (caster level 10th), except that the maurezhi can remain in the chosen form indefinitely. It can assume a new form or return to its own as a standard action.

Outsider Traits: A maurezhi has darkvision (60-foot range). It cannot be raised or resurrected.

Summon Creatures (Sp): This ability functions like a summon monster spell of the appropriate level, except that it has only a limited chance of success. Once per day a maurezhi can attempt to summon 1d4 ghouls with a 100% chance of success, or 2d4 dretches with a 60% chance of success.

Tanar’ri Traits: Tanar’ri can communicate telepathically with any creature within 100 feet that has a language. A tanar’ri is immune to electricity and poison, and it has acid resistance 20, cold resistance 20, and fire resistance 20.

Skills: A maurezhi gains a +8 racial bonus on Jump checks. When using its assume shape ability, a maurezhi receives an additional +12 circumstance bonus on Disguise checks (reflecting its access to the consumed form’s memories as well as its physical alteration).

A drider vampire's abilities are a mixture of retained drider traits and special qualities similar to those of a common vampire. Unlike humanoids, the drider vampire has a dangerous bite attack and can easily drain blood from a victim without resorting to grappling. A successful hit from one of its clawed hands drains life energy like a vampire's slam attack.

Attached (Ex): If a drider vampire hits with its bite attack, it latches onto the opponent's body and begins draining blood the same round. An attached drider vampire's AC is 21.

Blood Drain (Ex): A drider vampire drains blood, dealing 1d4 points of Constitution drain immediately upon attaching to its opponent. Each round thereafter that it remains attached, it automatically deals an additional 1d4 points of Constitution drain.

Energy Drain (Su): Any living creature hit by a drider vampire's claw attack must succeed at a Fortitude saving throw (DC 18) or gain one negative level. For each negative level bestowed, the drider vampire heals 1 point of damage. If the amount of healing is more than the damage the creature has taken, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. If the negative level has not been removed (with a spell such as restoration) before 24 hours have passed, the afflicted opponent must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 18) to remove it. Failure means the opponent's level (or Hit Dice) is reduced by one.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, detect chaos, detect evil, detect good, detect law, detect magic, faerie fire, levitate. Caster level 6th; save DC 15 + spell level.

Spells: A drider vampire retains all the spellcasting abilities it had in life. Most driders are 6th-level clerics, wizards, or sorcerers. Drider vampire clerics usually worship Kiaransalee (even though they served Lolth in life), and they choose their domains from Chaos, Drow, Evil, Retribution, and Undeath.

Spider Mastery (Su): A drider vampire can compel a spiderkind creature (see Spiderkind sidebar) to obey its mental commands. An unwilling, intelligent target that fails a Will saving throw (DC 18) obeys one command as if under a suggestion spell.

A successful save allows the creature to resist the command, but the drider vampire can attempt to command it again next round. Commanding an unwilling target requires a standard action; otherwise, issuing commands is a free action.

Alternate Form (Su): A drider vampire can assume the shape of a monstrous spider of any size from Tiny to Large as a standard action. This ability functions like a polymorph-self spell (caster level 12th). The creature can remain in spider form until it chooses to revert to its natural form or until the next sunrise.

Fast Healing (Ex): A drider vampire heals 1 point of damage per round as long as it has at least 1 hit point. If reduced to 0 hit points or lower, it automatically assumes gaseous form and attempts to escape. It must reach its web nest within 2 hours or be utterly destroyed. (It can travel up to 9 miles in 2 hours.) After 1 hour of rest in its nest, its hit point total rises to 1, then it resumes fast healing at its normal rate.

Gaseous Form (Su): At will, a drider vampire can assume gaseous form as a standard action. This ability functions like the gaseous form spell (caster level 7th), except that the drider vampire can remain gaseous indefinitely and has a fly speed of 20 feet with perfect maneuverability.

Skills: A drider vampire gains skills as an aberration. It receives a +8 racial bonus on Bluff, Hide, Listen, Move Silently, Search, Sense Motive, and Spot checks.

spiderkind

The term "spiderkind" includes all of the following creatures in the D&D game.

Monster Manual: All spiders, aranea, drider, retriever (demon), bebilith (demon), ettercap, phase spider, monstrous spider.

Monsters of Faerûn: Subterranean (hairly and sword) spiders, yochlol (demon), myrlochar, chitine, choldrith.

City of the Spider Queen: Arachnoid creature, drider vampire, jade spider, wraith spider.

Certain items, class abilities, and spells that are intended to affect spiderlike creatures affect all of spiderkind. The arachne prestige class (in Faiths & Pantheons) grants immunity to the venom of all spiderkind creatures and the ability to communicate with all spiderkind creatures. The arachnemancer prestige class (presented in DUNGEON Adventures #84) has the ability to speak with spiders and command spiders; these abilities extend to all spiderkind creatures. The webspinner ability of the arachne class and the webwalking ability of the arachnemancer class grant immunity to the webs of all spiderkind.

Repelling and Slaying Drider Vampires

Drider vampires cannot be held at bay with garlic, mirrors, or holy symbols like normal vampires can. They can freely cross running water and enter homes uninvited.

Drider vampires can be slain by sunlight, but not by immersion in running water. While driving a wooden stake through a drider vampire’s heart is a sure way to kill it, few adventurers realize that the creature has two hearts—one in its spider body and one in its drow torso—and both must be staked in order to kill the creature.

A spiderstone golem is an obsidian construct with the combat prowess of a trained fighter. Animated by a demonic spirit from the Demonweb Pits, this creature is both more evil and more unpredictable than most other kinds of golem.

A spiderstone golem appears as a statue of a male four-armed drow, standing 9 feet tall and weighing 2,000 pounds. It is carved from obsidian, so it has a smooth, glassy surface marred by occasional sharp fractures. When inactive, it usually stands with its arms folded across its chest.

Combat

Spiderstone golems have an innate understanding of combat, and they conduct themselves in melee as if they were trained fighters. A spiderstone golem uses its four fists to pummel opponents and spits webs to entangle spellcasters and archers.

Berserk (Ex): When a spiderstone golem enters combat, there is a cumulative 1% chance each round that its demon spirit breaks free and goes berserk. The uncontrolled golem goes on a rampage, attacking the nearest living creature or smashing some object smaller than itself if no creature is within reach, then moving on to spread more destruction. A divine spellcaster of a drow deity, if within 60 feet, can try (Diplomacy DC 19) to regain control by speaking firmly and persuasively to the golem. Resting for 1 minute resets the golem’s berserk chance to 0%.

Fighting Spirit: A spiderstone golem gains a +4 racial bonus on attack rolls (already figured into the statistics above).

Spit Web (Su): A spiderstone golem can spit forth a web as a ranged touch attack (maximum range 90 feet, range increment 10 feet). A Large or smaller creature hit by this attack is entangled (–2 on attack rolls, –4 penalty to Dexterity, unable to move). An entangled creature attempting to cast a spell must succeed at a Concentration check (DC 15) to do so. An entangled creature can escape with a successful Escape Artist check (DC 26) or burst the web with a Strength check (DC 32). Both are standard actions. Once the golem spits a web, it can’t spit another one until 1d4 rounds later.

Construct Traits: A spiderstone golem is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. The creature is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. It cannot heal itself but can be healed through repair. It cannot be raised or resurrected. A spiderstone golem has darkvision (60-foot range).

Magic Immunity (Ex): A spiderstone golem is immune to all spells, spell-like abilities, and supernatural effects except Evocation spells and effects, and divine... spells cast by drow divine spellcasters. Against such spells and effects, the golem's spell resistance still applies. Unlike stone golems, a spiderstone golem is not affected by transmute rock to mud or stone to flesh spells.

Spider Climb (Su): A spiderstone golem can move on walls or ceilings as if under the effect of a spider climb spell, except that it moves at its full normal speed. This ability is always in effect.

Webwalking (Su): Spiderstone golems can move freely through any normal or magical web, as if affected by a freedom of movement spell. They can walk along webs as if on solid ground (no Balance check required).

Feats: A spiderstone golem gains feats as a humanoid with the fighter class.

Construction
Spiderstone golems follow the general rules for golem construction presented in the Monster Manual.

A spiderstone golem's body is chiseled from a single block of obsidian weighing at least 3,000 pounds. The golem costs 80,000 gp to create, which includes 1,000 gp for the body. Assembling the body requires a successful Craft (sculpting or masonry) check (DC 17).

The creator must be 16th level, able to cast divine spells, and have access to the Drow domain. Completing the ritual drains 1,600 XP from the creator and requires geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, web, spider climb, and freedom of movement.

Jade spiders are stone constructs created as guardians for drow edifices. Their name derives from the magically treated jade that studs their sharp mandibles and saw-edged legs.

A jade spider appears as a smoothly sculpted stone statue of a monstrous spider, 20 feet in diameter and 5 feet high. It weighs 45,000 pounds.

Combat
Jade spiders are fearless, unthinking guardians that carry out their assigned orders without question or pause.

Unlike stone golems, jade spiders are not affected by transmute rock to mud spells. Stone to flesh does not actually change the golem's structure, but it does cancel its damage reduction for 1 round.

Forcecage Web (Su): Eight times per day, a jade spider can cast a magical web of glowing green energy as a standard action. This effect functions like a forcecage spell, except that it affects only one target and allows a Reflex save (DC 17) to avoid the effect. A target that fails its saving throw is imprisoned within a barred cage of force. After using its forcecage web, a jade spider must wait 2d4 rounds before doing so again.

Petrification (Su): The bite of a jade spider injects a glowing green venom that turns the victim to stone. A creature bitten by the spider must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 22) or immediately turn to stone.

Wounding (Su): A wound resulting from a jade spider's leg slash bleeds for an additional 1 point of damage per round thereafter. Multiple wounds from such attacks result in cumulative bleeding loss (two wounds for 2 points of damage per round, and so on). The bleeding can be stopped only by a successful Heal check (DC 17) or the application of a cure spell or some other healing spell (heal, healing circle, or the like).

Construct Traits: A jade spider is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. The creature is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. It cannot heal itself but can be healed through repair. It cannot be raised or An orb wraith is an undead monstrosity formed when six or more ordinary wraiths come together in an area of powerful negative energy. They share a common origin on the Negative Energy Plane, but the native inhabitants of the Material Plane encounter them within localized areas of negative energy, like the orb at the heart of the Undying Temple—hence their common name.

An orb wraith looks like a vaguely humanoid mass of darkness. Different features—faces, limbs, and glowing red eyes—shift and surface within the creature at different times. Bolts of purple-black negative energy spark within its body, like lightning within a looming thundercloud.

Combat

An orb wraith can extend two appendages—sometimes looking very much like arms, other times more strongly resembling tentacles or wisps of smoke—to attack in melee. Otherwise, it creates an arc of crackling negative energy from its body to that of a nearby target.

Constitution Drain (Su): Any living creature hit by an orb wraith’s incorporeal touch attack must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 32) or take 1d6 points of Constitution drain.

Enervation Ray (Su): An orb wraith can attack with a bolt of negative energy that functions like the enervation spell. This attack is a ray with a maximum range of 60 feet and no range increment. A creature struck by the ray gains 1d4 negative levels.

Spell-Like Abilities: At will—bane, bestow curse, doom, fear; 3/day—circle of doom, circle of death; 1/day—destruction. Caster level 20th; save DC 17 + spell level.

Assimilate (Su): If an orb wraith kills an ordinary wraith (even one of its own spawn), it assimilates the lesser wraith's energy into itself, growing stronger in the process. It adds the assimilated wraith's Hit Dice (usually 5) to its own, to a maximum of 60 HD. It gains all the benefits of these additional HD according to the monster advancement rules in the Monster Manual. When an orb wraith advances to 60 HD, it fissions into two 30-HD orb wraiths.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by an orb wraith becomes a normal wraith in 1d4 rounds. Spawn are under the command of the orb wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Incorporeal Subtype: An orb wraith can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, +1 or better magic weapons, spells, spell-like abilities, and supernatural abilities. The creature has a 50% chance to ignore any damage from a corporeal source, except for force effects or attacks made with ghost touch weapons. An orb wraith can pass through solid objects, but not force effects, at will. Its attacks ignore natural armor, armor, and shields, but deflection bonuses and force effects work normally against them. An orb wraith always moves silently and cannot be heard with Listen checks if it doesn’t wish to be.

Undead Traits: An orb wraith is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. It is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. An orb wraith cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if it is willing. The creature has darkvision (60-foot range).

Unnatural Aura (Su): Both wild and domesticated animals can sense the unnatural presence of an orb wraith at a distance of 90 feet. They will not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

A quth-maren is a revolting undead creature created by clerics of Kiaransalee. These clerics enjoy flaying their enemies—removing every scrap of skin—and then animating them in this hideous form.

A quth-maren bears the overall form it did in life, but it has no skin or exposed fat—just muscles over its skeleton. Caustic blood constantly oozes from its body. Unlike zombies, to which they bear a certain resemblance, quth-marens are neither mindless nor prone to decomposition.

Combat

Quth-marens fight fiercely but cleverly, making the best use of their ranged attacks and gaze attacks before closing with their opponents. In groups, they tend to gang up on a single enemy at a time, rather than distributing their attacks among a group of opponents.

Caustic Blood (Ex): A quth-maren’s natural attacks deal an additional 1d6 points of acid damage from the creature’s caustic blood. Any creature hitting a quth-maren with natural weapons or unarmed attacks also takes 1d6 points of acid damage.

Spit Blood (Ex): Once every 1d4 rounds, as a standard action, a quth-maren can spit a glob of its acidic blood as a grenade-like weapon attack. The quth-maren must make a successful ranged touch attack to hit its target. This attack has a range increment of 10 feet, with a maximum range of 50 feet. The glob deals 2d6 points of acid damage on a direct hit, and 2 points of splash damage to all creatures within 5 feet of where it lands.

Horrifying Gaze (Su): A living creature within 30 feet that meets a quth-maren’s deathless gaze must succeed at a Will save (DC 17) or cower in fear (lose Dexterity bonus to AC, -2 to attack rolls, -2 on initiative, — to Armor Class, — to attack rolls, — to Reflex saves, unable to act, any foe gains a +2 bonus on attack rolls).

Command Undead (Su): Because the quth-maren was an evil cleric in life, it can command undead as a 5th-level evil cleric. It cannot rebuke undead, but it can dispel turning or bolster other undead.

Fast Healing (Ex): A quth-maren regains lost hit points at the rate of 4 per round, as long as it has at least 1 hit point. Fast healing does not restore hit points lost from starvation, thirst, or suffocation, and it does not allow the quth-maren to regrow or reattach lost body parts.

Undead Traits: A quth-maren is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. It is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. A quth-maren cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if it is willing. The creature has darkvision (60-foot range).

Skills: A quth-maren receives a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently and Spot checks.
wraith spider

Wraith spiders are undead creatures formed from the chitinous husks of monstrous spiders and animated by evil spirits from the realm of Kiaransalee.

A wraith spider appears much like it did in life, except that its eight eyes are hollow sockets through which the empty interior of its shell is dimly visible. A shadowy aura surrounds the creature, congealing to pure blackness around its fangs.

combat

Wraith spiders fight much as they did in life, except that they lack spinnerets to produce webs. Their poison glands are also missing, but those have been replaced by negative energy.

- Strength Damage (Su): The bite of a Large or smaller wraith spider deals Strength damage, as noted in the table on the facing page.
- Energy Drain (Su): The bite of a Huge or larger wraith spider bestows negative levels on the victim instead of dealing Strength damage. A Huge wraith spider bestows one negative level, and the Fortitude save to remove it has a DC of 16. A Gargantuan wraith spider bestows two negative levels (DC 25), and a Colossal wraith spider bestows 1d4 negative levels (DC 39). As a special ability, a wraith spider gains the same bonus to the DC for its energy drain ability that living a vermin gets to its poison save DC.

- Undead Traits: A wraith spider is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. It is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. A wraith spider cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if it is willing. The creature has darkvision (60-foot range).
- Tremorsense (Ex): A wraith spider can automatically sense the location of anything within 60 feet that is in contact with the ground.

Arachnoid creature (Template)

In their foul veneration of the Spider Queen, the drow of the Underdark have created many new creatures that manifest spiderlike features. Usually characterized by thick black hair growing in rough clumps, large multifaceted eyes, and mandibles dripping with poison, these arachnoid creatures are horrible abominations that range from loyal servants of the drow to deadly renegades on the outskirts of drow civilization.

Creating an Arachnoid creature.

“Arachnoid creature” is a template that can be added to any animal, beast, or magical beast (referred to hereafter as the base creature). The creature’s type changes to aberration. An arachnoid creature uses all the base creature’s statistics and special abilities except as noted here.

- Speed: The creature gains a climb speed equal to half its base speed (round up to the nearest 10 feet). This grants the creature a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and additional benefits, as described in the Monster Manual.

| AC: The creature’s natural armor bonus increases by an amount based on its size, as shown on the table on the bottom of page 125. |
| Attacks: An arachnoid creature gains a bite attack, if it did not have one already, in addition to the base creature’s attacks. It also gains four additional limbs of the same type as any limbs it already has. If the base creature has natural attacks with its limbs, it can make additional such attacks with these extra limbs. A base creature with no limbs (such as a purple worm) does not gain additional limbs. |
| Damage: If the base creature does not have a bite attack, use the damage value in the table. Otherwise, use the value above or the base creature’s bite damage, whichever is greater. |
| Special Attacks: An arachnoid creature’s bite delivers a debilitating poison, with initial and secondary damage as shown on the table. The saving throw DC for the poison is equal to 10 + half the creature’s Hit Dice + its Constitution modifier + the DC modifier shown on the table. The arachnoid creature also retains all the special attack forms of the base creature. |
| Special Qualities: An arachnoid creature retains all the special qualities of the base creature and also gains immunity to all mind-influencing effects (charms, compulsions, phantasms, patterns, and morale effects). |
| Abilities: An arachnoid creature’s Dexterity score increases by +4 and its Intelligence score decreases by −4. (Treat a result of 0 or below as mindless, with no Intelligence score). |
| Skills: An arachnoid creature has skill points equal to twice its Intelligence score, plus two per extra Hit Die. Mindless arachnoid creatures have 10–15 skill points, like vermin. Hide, Jump, Spot, and all skills from the base creature’s skill list are class skills; all others are cross-class skills. |

An arachnoid creature gains a +4 racial bonus on Hide checks and a +6 racial bonus on Jump and Spot checks.

Half-Dragon, Faerûnian (Template)

Monster Compendium: Monsters of Faerûn details five varieties of dragon common to the lands of Faerûn: brown, deep, fang, shadow, and song dragons. Like the dragons described in the Monster Manual, these dragons sometimes crossbreed with other creatures, producing half-dragons. Deep dragons and song dragons are fond of spending time in humanoid form, so half-dragons of these ancestries are especially common. Such an offspring uses the half-dragon template from the Monster Manual, with certain adjustments based on the type of its dragon parent.

Speed: Half-brown dragons never have functional wings, regardless of their size.

Damage: Half-fang dragons deal damage with their bite and claw attacks as if they were one size category larger than they actually are.

Special Attacks: A half-dragon of brown, deep, shadow, or song dragon ancestry gains a breath weapon usable once per day, as given on the table below.

* A line is always 5 ft. high, 5 ft. wide, and 60 ft. long.
 A cone is always 30 ft. long.

Three times per day, a fang half-dragon can choose to deal 1d4 points of Constitution drain with its bite attack (Fort save DC 14 negates).

Special Qualities: Half-dragons also have additional immunities or resistances based on their dragon variety.

Keening Spirit (Template)

A keening spirit is a kind of ghost, created specifically from the spirit of an evil female elf of any elf subtype. Known for its constant weeping and groaning, the creature is sometimes referred to as a groaning spirit. It shares most of the characteristics of the ghost template described in the Monster Manual except for special attacks and special qualities; those it receives are detailed below.

Special Attacks: All keening spirits retain the special attacks they had in life and gain the following ones.

- Destructive Touch (Su): A keening spirit that hits a living target with its incorporeal touch attack deals 1d8 points of damage. Against ethereal opponents, it adds its Strength modifier to attack and damage rolls. Against material opponents, it adds its Dexterity modifier to attack rolls only.

- Fear Aura (Su): A keening spirit is shrouded in a dreadful aura of death and evil. Any creature within a 60-foot radius that looks at it must succeed at a Will save (DC 10 + 1/2 keening spirit’s HD + keening spirit’s Charisma modifier) or be affected as though by a fear spell cast by a sorcerer of the keening spirit’s character level.

- Keening (Su): A keening spirit’s most dreaded weapon is its wail or keen. This ability functions like the wail of the banshee spell, but it affects any number of creatures within a 30-foot spread centered on the keening spirit. A successful Fortitude save (DC 10 + 1/2 keening spirit’s HD + keening spirit’s Charisma modifier) negates the effect. A keening spirit can use this ability only once per day.

- Spells: A keening spirit can cast any spells it could while alive. A drow keening spirit with spellcasting ability (whether arcane or divine) is commonly known as a kiaranshee, after the drow goddess of the undead, Kiaransalee.

Special Qualities: All keening spirits retain the special qualities they had in life and gain the following ones.

- Manifestation (Su): This ability works as detailed in the ghost template in Appendix 3 of the Monster Manual.
- Rejuvenation (Su): This ability functions as detailed in the ghost template in Appendix 3 of the Monster Manual.
- Spell Resistance (Ex): A keening spirit has SR equal to 13 + its class level.
Turn Resistance (Ex): A keening spirit has +4 turn resistance, which functions as detailed in the Monster Manual.

Undead Traits: A keening spirit is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. It is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. A keening spirit cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if it is willing. The creature has darkvision (60-foot range).

Sample keening spirits are detailed in Appendix 2.

Revenant (Template)

Revenants are undead avengers who have returned from the grave to track down and kill their murderers. They exist only for revenge against their killers and any who aided them.

A revenant looks like a decaying and ravaged version of the murdered person at the time of his or her death. Its skin is drawn tightly against the bones, and its clammy flesh may sport open wounds. Its eyes seem lifeless until it faces its killer, then they blaze with unnatural light. Revenants sometimes spontaneously form even from victims whose bodies were completely destroyed, indicating that the magic that brings revenants to life can also reform their bodies. Such a revenant lacks any magic items that were left with its original body.

A revenant possesses most of the abilities it had in life, including weapon use and magical abilities. Its alignment changes to neutral, which can prevent the use of class abilities for certain character classes. Revenants who were formerly arcane spellcasters do not keep their familiar after becoming revenants. Clerics and paladins who had positive energy powers instead become users of negative energy. Instead of turning undead, such a character can rebuke undead, and instead of spontaneously casting cure spells, he or she can spontaneously cast inflict spells. A cleric can still pray for spells from his or her deity, though all such prayer must now occur at midnight. Revenant wizards may have difficulty accessing their spellbooks, but revenant sorcerers have no such problems. Revenants can speak all their original languages, though they seldom converse.

A revenant ordinarily ignores anyone who was not involved in its death, unless such a creature is guarding the guilty party. Though a revenant may desire revenge against accomplices to the deed, it tends to make that goal secondary to its primary mission.

A revenant that has completed its mission of revenge crumbles on the spot, and its spirit moves on to its next destination. A revenant that cannot accomplish its mission decays slowly. About six months after its creation, it can no longer hold itself together, so it crumbles into dust. The spirit departs, having failed in its quest.

The minor artifact known as the claw of the revenancer (detailed in the next section) allows its wearer to create revenants to serve him or her. These revenants' desire to hunt down their killers is overwhelmed by their requirement to serve the wearer of the claw. They rarely have the opportunity to use their special attacks or their ability to find the guilty, but they still make powerful undead servants—particularly when they are created from the bodies of powerful characters.

Creating a Revenant

Revenant is a template that can be added to any humanoid creature type (referred to hereafter as the base creature). The creature's type changes to undead. It uses all the base creature's statistics and special abilities except as noted here.

Hit Dice: All the base creature's Hit Dice become d12s.

Special Attacks: A revenant retains all the special attacks of the base creature and also gains the abilities described below.

Vengeful Strike (Ex): Any melee attack the revenant makes against its killer inflicts an additional +1d10 points of damage.

Paralyzing Glare (Ex): The first time a revenant confronts its killer, the latter must make a Will save (DC 10 + 1/2 the revenant's Hit Dice and/or levels + the revenant's Charisma modifier) or be paralyzed for 2d4 rounds.

Special Qualities: A revenant retains all the special qualities of the base creature and also gains undead traits and those listed below.

Damage Reduction (Su): A revenant has DR 5/+1.

Turning Immunity (Ex): A revenant cannot be turned or rebuked by clerics or paladins.

Fast Healing (Ex): A revenant regains lost hit points at the rate of 3 per round, as long as it has at least 1 hit point. Fast healing does not restore hit points lost from starvation, thirst, or suffocation, and it does not allow the revenant to regrow or reattach lost body parts, except for damage dealt by fire.

Immunities (Ex): Revenants are immune to acid, gas, cold, electricity, and polymorph.

Find the Guilty (Ex): So long as a revenant and its killer are on the same plane of existence, the revenant knows in which direction its killer can be found and how far away he or she is. Depending on the magical abilities of the base creature, this extraordinary sense may even be made to work across planar boundaries.

Undead Traits: A revenant is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. It is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. A revenant cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if it is willing. The creature has darkvision (60-foot range).

Abilities: A revenant gains +4 to its Strength and +2 to its Charisma, but it has no Constitution score since it is undead.

Climate/Terrain: Any land and underground

Organization: Solitary

Challenge Rating: As base creature +1

Treasure: As base creature or none

Alignment: Always neutral

Advancement: —

This template originally appeared in Monster Compendium: Monsters of Faerûn. This version is slightly changed, and it represents an official update of the original template. Sample revenants are presented in Appendix 2.

Silveraith (Template)

Silveraiths are incorporeal undead creatures that glow with pale blue energy (like that created by a chill touch spell).
creating a silveraith

"Silveraith" is a template that can be added to any living creature of at least 5 levels or Hit Dice that uses magic, whether it is an arcane or divine spellcaster or a creature with supernatural or spell-like abilities (referred to hereafter as the base creature). The creature’s type changes to undead, and it gains the incorporeal subtype. It uses all the base creature’s statistics and special abilities except as noted here.

Hit Dice: All the base creature’s Hit Dice increase to d12s.

Speed: A silveraith gains a fly speed of 30 feet (or the base creature’s fly speed, if that is greater), with perfect maneuverability.

AC: The silveraith has a deflection bonus to its AC equal to 5 + its Charisma bonus (if any). As an incorporeal creature, it has no natural armor bonus.

Attacks: A silveraith can make a number of incorporeal touch attacks equal to the base creature’s number of natural attacks. For example, a Small dragon silveraith would have three incorporeal touch attacks (from its bite and two claw attacks). If the silveraith has more than one incorporeal touch attack, it makes additional attacks beyond the first at a –5 penalty (unless it has the Multiattack feat). A silveraith applies its Dexterity modifier to its touch attack rolls.

Damage: A silveraith’s incorporeal touch attacks function as inflict serious wounds spells that deal 3d8+1 points of damage per level (maximum 3d8+10). A successful Will save (DC 10 + 1/2 silveraith’s level + silveraith’s Charisma modifier) reduces the damage by half.

Special Attacks: A silveraith retains all the base creature’s supernatural and spell-like special attacks (but not its extraordinary ones) and also gains those listed below. All saving throw DCs are equal to 10 + 1/2 silveraith’s HD + silveraith’s Charisma modifier unless noted otherwise.

Magic Absorption (Su): A silveraith can ready an action to absorb spell energy that deals 1d6 points of damage per absorbed spell level to the caster of the spell (Will save for half). A negative energy protection spell negates this damage, and undead spellcasters are actually healed by this effect.

Skills: A silveraith can cast any spells it could cast while alive, except for healing spells or other spells utilizing positive energy.

Special Qualities: A silveraith retains all the base creature’s supernatural and spell-like special qualities (but not its exceptional ones) and also gains those listed below.

Create Spawn (Su): An arcane or divine spellcaster killed outright by the backlash of the silveraith’s magic absorption power rises as a silveraith itself in 1d4 days. If the victim would not otherwise qualify for the template, it does not become a silveraith. The silveraith exercises no special control over spawn created in this manner.

Immunities (Ex): Silveraiths are immune to cold, electricity, polymorph, and mind-affecting attacks.

Incorporeal Subtype: A silveraith can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, +1 or better magic weapons, spells, spell-like abilities, and supernatural abilities. The creature has a 50% chance to ignore any damage from a corporeal source, except for force effects or attacks made with ghost touch weapons. A silveraith can pass through solid objects, but not force effects, at will. Its attacks ignore natural armor, armor, and shields, but deflection bonuses and force effects work normally against them. A silveraith always moves silently and cannot be heard with Listen checks if it doesn’t wish to be.

Turn Resistance (Ex): A silveraith has +4 turn resistance.

Undead Traits: A silveraith is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. It is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. A silveraith cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if it is willing. The creature has darkvision (60-foot range).

 Abilities: A silveraith gains +2 to Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma, but as an incorporeal undead creature, it has no Strength or Constitution score.

Skills: A silveraith receives a +8 racial bonus on Hide, Listen, Search, and Spot checks. Otherwise its skills are the same as the base creature’s.

Climate/Terrain: Any land and underground

Organization: Solitary

Challenge Rating: Same as the base creature + 2

Treasure: None

Alignment: Any nonlawful and nongood. Lawful or good designators change to neutral. Thus, a chaotic good creature becomes a chaotic neutral silveraith, while a lawful good creature becomes neutral.

Advancement: As base creature

Sample silveraiths are detailed in Appendix 2.

New Special Items

Drow Poison: Drow are renowned for their use of unconsciousness-inducing poison in subterranean ambushes. Drow poison is an Injuries (DC 17) poison. Its initial damage is unconsciousness for 1 minute, and its secondary damage is unconsciousness for 2d4 hours. Drow poison costs 75 gp per dose. The dark elves carefully guard the secret of their venom, and it is exceedingly difficult to find it outside of drow realms and outposts.
New Magic Items

Amulet of Dark Blessing: Made from an iridescent black gemstone found in the Underdark, these amulets are identical in function to the devices surface dwellers know as amulets of Laravel's tears. These drow devices bestow 24 temporary hit points on the wearer. When those temporary hit points have been expended, the amulet crumbles into worthless dust.

_Caster Level: 12th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, aid, shield other; Market Price: 1,200 gp._

Claw of the Revenancer (Minor Artifact): This fine metal gauntlet covers the back of the wearer’s hand and forearm, attaching to the fingers by way of five silver rings and to the wrist by a fine silver bracelet. The claw has three functions: protection, attack, and creating undead. For the purpose of determining how many magic items a character can wear, the claw counts as one ring, one glove or gauntlet, and one bracer. Thus, the wearer can still wear another ring, a single glove (such as a _glove of storing_), and a single bracelet (such as a _bracelet of friends_).

The claw bestows one negative level on any creature wearing it that does not worship Kiaransalee. This negative level persists as long as the claw is worn and disappears when it is removed. The negative level never results in actual level loss, but it cannot be overcome in any way (including _restoration_ spells) while the claw is worn.

The claw functions as _bracers of armor +5_ combined with an _amulet of natural armor +5_, providing the wearer with a +5 armor bonus and a +5 natural armor bonus to AC.

When used as a weapon, the claw functions as a +1 weapon that deals 1d6 points of slashing damage (critical 19–20/x2) plus 1d6 points of negative energy damage. The wearer is automatically proficient with the claw.

Finally, the _claw of the revenancer_ allows the wearer to transform a corpse into an undead creature by touching it. Three times per day, the wearer can create a revenant that serves the wearer of the claw (even if that is not the person who created it) instead of single-mindedly pursuing vengeance against its killer. Commanding the revenant to seek its killer frees it from the wearer’s command forever. Once per tendeday, the wearer can instead create a silveraith from the corpse of a creature that used magic in life. This ability reflects the claw’s intimate connection to Kiaransalee. The wearer of the claw cannot create a revenant and a silveraith on the same day.

The undead-creation function of the claw uses the spell trigger activation method, so the wearer must have _create undead_ on his or her spell list to use this ability.

_Caster Level: 20th; Weight: 1 lb._

Death Spear, Lesser or Greater: This _+2 longspear_ is bathed in an aura of negative energy that deals an additional 1d6 points of negative energy damage on a successful attack. In addition, the spear can be used to deliver an _enervation_(lesser death spear) or _energy drain_(greater death spear) effect on a successful hit. A death spear has 10 charges when created, and each use of a spell effect uses one charge. When drained of charges, the spear retains its aura of negative energy and its enhancement bonus.

_Caster Level: 7th (lesser death spear) or 17th (greater death spear); Prerequisites: Craft Magic Arms and Armor, energy drain (greater death spear) or enervation (lesser death spear); Market Price: 13,905 gp (lesser death spear), 38,905 gp (greater death spear); Cost to Create: 7,105 gp + 544 XP (lesser death spear), 19,605 gp + 1,544 XP (greater death spear)._
subconscious. This gives it an instinctive knowledge of what the next moment will bring, which manifests as a +1 insight bonus on attack rolls. (This ability does not function during Lolth’s silence.)

Because the fang scarab is designed for spiders, it’s not useful to most adventurers. A nonspider can make a fang scarab function with a successful Use Magic Device check (DC 25), but doing so also makes it permanently to its user’s neck, near the Adam’s apple. Nothing short of the wearer’s death can then remove it.

Though the fang scarab grants its wearer the same attack bonus that it would to a spider, it also initiates a metamorphosis that can change the wearer into a half-spider abomination over time. When the scarab first attaches itself, the wearer’s canine teeth enlarge and coarse black hairs appear on the back of his or her neck. No further changes occur until the character attains levels in the fang of Lolth prestige class (fully detailed in Song & Silence: A Guidebook to Rogues and Bards).

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, divination; Market Price: 3,500 gp; Weight: —.

Fire Elemental Gem: This red or orange gem contains a conjuration spell attuned to the Elemental Plane of Fire. When the gem is crushed, smashed, or broken (a standard action), a fire elemental (Small, Medium-size, Large, Huge, greater, or elder) appears as if summoned by a summon monster spell. The elemental is under the control of the creature that broke the gem.

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, summon monster III (Small), V (Medium-size), VI (Large), VII (Huge), VIII (greater), or IX (elder); Market Price: 750 gp (Small), 2,250 gp (Medium-size), 3,300 gp (Large), 4,550 gp (Huge), 6,000 gp (greater), 7,550 gp (elder); Weight: —.

Hand of Kiarasalee’s Glory: Very similar to the hand of glory described in the Dungeon Master’s Guide, this item is a mummified drow hand with a silver ring on each finger. As with the hand of glory, a magic ring placed on one of the fingers (as a replacement for one of the silver rings) functions normally for the character who wears the hand.

In addition, each of the five silver rings allows the wearer of the hand to use a specific spell effect. Each ring can produce one of the following effects once per day: deeper darkness, see invisibility, ray of enfeeblement, chill touch, and spectral hand. If the wearer replaces one of the five silver rings with another magic ring, he or she must sacrifice one of these spell effects in order to replace it with the magic ring’s power. If removed from the hand, the silver rings have no magical power.

Caster Level: 9th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, animate dead, chill touch, deeper darkness, ray of enfeeblement, see invisibility, spectral hand; Market Price: 19,000 gp; Weight: 2 lb.

Piwafwi, Lesser or Greater: The dark-colored greater piwafwi is a cloak that has all the abilities of a cloak of ebonite, and it also provides the benefit of endure elements (fire), negating fire damage per round. (Lesser piwafwi are simply cloaks of ebonite.)

Caster Level: 5th; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, endure elements, invisibility, creator must be a drow; Market Price: 6,100 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

Ring of See Invisibility: This ring allows the wearer to see invisible, astral, or ethereal creatures or objects within 130 feet as if they were normally visible. It does not reveal illusions or creatures that are simply hiding or concealed. Ethereal creatures viewed from the Material Plane appear slightly hazy and unfocused, but the wearer can otherwise see details normally.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Forge Ring, see invisibility; Market Price: 15,000 gp.

Ring of Silent Spells: Once per day, this plain silver ring can cast a silence effect centered on the wearer. While the silence remains in effect, the wearer can cast up to three spells without verbal components as though using the Silent Spell feat, except that such spells do not require higher spell slots. The ring of silent spells appears in three varieties: a lesser version that affects only spells of 3rd level or lower, a normal version that silences spells of 6th level or lower, and a greater version that affects all spells.

Caster Level: 5th (lesser), 11th (normal), or 17th (greater); Prerequisites: Forge Ring; Market Price: 9,000 gp (lesser), 29,520 (normal), or 60,840 (greater).

Robe of Gentle Repose: This simple garment is favored by intelligent corporeal undead, particularly liches. It surrounds the wearer with a constant gentle repose effect, preventing all decay of his or her corporeal form.

Caster Level: 3rd; Prerequisites: Craft Wondrous Item, gentle repose; Market Price: 10,000 gp; Weight: 1 lb.

Rod of the Twisted Weave: This rod is a long black scepter with a point at one end. The other end is an intricate design of loosely woven and twisted strands, with raw magical energy glowing pale green in the midst of it, like a burning jet of natural gas. The rod of the twisted weave functions just like a rod of absorption, automatically absorbing single-target spells or rays (and spell-like abilities duplicating those effects) directed at the possessor or the possessor’s gear. However, instead of storing absorbed spell energy, the rod immediately creates a backlash of negative energy that deals 1d6 points of damage per absorbed spell level to the caster of the spell (a successful Will save reduces the damage by half). A negative energy protection spell negates this damage, and undead spellcasters are actually healed by this effect.

Caster Level: 18th; Prerequisites: Craft Rod, spell turning, energy drain; Market Price: 60,000 gp.
This appendix contains complete statistics for all the NPCs and monsters that appear in this adventure, except monsters that appear in the Monster Manual and are not significantly modified in this adventure.

Several NPCs in this adventure have prestige classes that are detailed in books other than the Dungeon Master's Guide and the Forgotten Realms Campaign Setting. These other books are not required to run this adventure because all pertinent statistics and abilities for these NPCs are included here. For reference purposes, each NPC entry indicates the original source of any such prestige class.

In addition, several monsters from Monster Compendium: Monsters of Faerûn appear in this adventure. Their complete statistics are reproduced here, and the appearance of the monsters is described in the main text of the adventure. However, if you prefer using monsters from the Monster Manual or the Forgotten Realms Campaign Setting, the statistics block for each of these monsters includes a suggested substitution for that monster. (The various revenants that appear in the adventure do not include suggested substitutions because the complete revenant template from Monsters of Faerûn is reproduced in Appendix 1.)

Drow NPCs

-The following information pertains to all drow in this adventure.

Drow Traits (Ex): In addition to the proficiencies, spell resistance, saving throw bonuses, and skill modifications already included in the statistics blocks, all drow share the traits below.

- Immunity to magic sleep spells and effects.
- A +2 racial bonus on Will saves against Enchantment spells or effects.
- A drow who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if he or she were actively looking for the door.
- A +2 racial bonus on Will saves against spells or spell-like abilities.
- Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, faerie fire. Caster-level equals character level.
- Darkvision 120 ft.
- Light Blindness (Ex): Abrupt exposure to bright light (such as sunlight or a daylight spell) blinds a drow for 1 round. In addition, he or she takes a –1 circumstance penal-

Incidental Treasure: Most of the living drow encountered in this adventure carry belt pouches or small purses containing a number of coins and small gems. Any given drow character carries incidental treasure as shown below:

- Characters of 1st or 2nd Level: 1d4×10 sp, 1d6 gp, and 1d4+2 pp. These amounts average to 11 gp worth of incidental treasure.
- Characters of 3rd to 3rd Level: 1d4×10 sp, 1d6×5 gp, 1d4 pp, and 1d6–3 gemstones. Each gemstone is worth 10 gp. These amounts average to 70 gp worth of incidental treasure.
- Characters of 8th Level or Higher: 1d4×10 sp, 1d6×10 gp, 2d6 pp, and 1d6–1 gemstones. Each gem is worth 10 gp. These amounts average to a little more than 130 gp of incidental treasure. Of course, many high-level drow also carry a number of valuable items and may have personal caches described in their chambers.
Appendix 2

Aranea

An aranea delivers its poison (Fortitude save DC 13) with each successful bite attack. The initial damage is 1d6 points of Strength damage, and the secondary damage is 2d6 points of Strength damage.

Web (Ex)

In spider or hybrid form, an aranea can cast a web up to six times per day. This attack is similar to an attack with a net, but it has a maximum range of 70 feet and a range increment of 10 feet, and it is effective against targets of Large or smaller size. If the aranea hits with a ranged touch attack, its target is entangled and cannot move. An entangled creature can escape with a successful Escape Artist check (DC 20) or burst the web with a successful Strength check (DC 26). The web has 6 hit points and takes double damage from fire.

Alternate Form (Su)

An aranea’s natural form is that of a Large monstrous spider. It can assume two other forms: a Small or Medium-size humanoid (the exact form is fixed at birth) or a Medium-size spider-humanoid hybrid. Changing form is a standard action. An aranea in humanoid form gains all the abilities of that form; for example, an aranea in dwarf form has dwarf racial traits. The aranea keeps its ability scores and can cast spells, but it cannot use webs or poison in humanoid form. In hybrid form, an aranea looks like a humanoid at first glance, but a successful Spot check (DC 18) reveals the creature’s fangs and spinnerets. The aranea can use weapons and webs in this form. An aranea remains in one form until it chooses to assume a new one. A change in form cannot be dispelled, nor does the aranea revert to its natural form when killed. A true seeing spell reveals its natural form.

Ranger Spells Prepared: None, because of Lolth’s silence.

Possessions: +1 rapier, masterwork light pick. One aranea also has a wand of magic missile (5th-level caster).

Tierak Morcane: Female drow Cleric of Lolth; CR 7; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 7d4+5; hp 45; Init +8; Spd 20 ft; AC 17, touch 10, flat-footed 16; Atk +6 melee (1d4+19–20, masterwork dagger); SA rebuke spiders 6/day, rebuke undead 6/day; SQ drow traits (see Drow NPC sidebar, page 132), SR 18; AL CE; SV Fort +5, Ref +4, Will +12; Str 10, Dex 16, Con 13, Int 13, Wis 13, Cha 14. Skills and Feats: Concentration +10, Diplomacy +10, Knowledge (arcana) +12, Knowledge (religion) +12, Listen +8, Search +5, Spellcraft +14, Scribe Scroll. Spells Prepared: (7/4/4/3; save DC 14): 0—dispel magic, mage hand, ray of frost, resistance; 1st—charm person, expedience retreat, shield. 2nd—cat’s grace, dispel magic, mage armor, magic missile, magic weapon, ray of enfeeblement; 3rd—fireball*, ice storm*, stoneskin.

Szith Morcane

Morcane Noble Guard: Male drow Ftr 8; CR 6; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 5d10+5; hp as listed in encounter descriptions; Init +2; Spd 30 ft; AC 17, touch 12, flat-footed 16; Atk +6 melee (1d6+19–20, masterwork dagger), or +7 ranged (1d4/19–20, masterwork hand crossbow); SQ drow traits (see Drow NPC sidebar, page 132), SR 18; AL CE; SV Fort +5, Ref +5, Will +8; Str 16, Dex 16, Con 12, Int 14, Wis 16, Cha 10. Skills and Feats: Climb +12, Jump +12, Listen +5, Search +5, Spot +5, Survival +5; Alertness, Dodge, Mobility, Spring Attack, Stealthy. Possessions: 2 mithral shirt; +2 buckler; +1 rapier; masterwork dagger, masterwork hand crossbow, 20 bolts, cloak of resistance +2, 2 potions of spider climb, potion of cure serious wounds, potion of charm, +1 buckler, +1 maul.

Szith Morcane Sentries

Szith Morcane Sentries come in three different varieties. Mix and match them for flavor.

Szith Morcane Sentry 1: Male drow Ftr 7; CR 6; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 5d10+5; hp as listed in encounter descriptions; Init +2; Spd 30 ft; AC 19, touch 12, flat-footed 16; Atk +7 melee (1d8+18–20, +1 rapier or +1d4/19–20, masterwork dagger); or +7 ranged (1d8/19–20, masterwork hand crossbow); SQ drow traits (see Drow NPC sidebar, page 132), SR 16; AL CE; SV Fort +6, Ref +4, Will +2; Str 16, Dex 15, Con 12, Int 14, Wis 10, Cha 10. Skills and Feats: Climb +11, Hide +8, Jump +12, Listen +4, Move Silently +5, Search +4, Spot +4, Alertness, Dodge, Mobility, Spring Attack, Stealthy. Possessions: +1 mithral shirt; +1 buckler; +1 rapier; masterwork dagger, masterwork hand crossbow, 20 bolts, cloak of resistance +2, 2 potions of spider climb, potion of cure serious wounds, potion of charm, +1 maul.
Szith Morcane Sentry 2: Male drow Ftr5; CR 6; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 5d10+5; hp as listed in encounter descriptions; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17, touch 12, flat-footed 15*; Atk +10 melee (1d10+6/×3, masterwork glaive), or +9 melee (1d6+3/19–20, masterwork short sword), or +7 ranged (1d8/19–20, light crossbow); SQ drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), SR 16; AL CE; SV Fort +5, Ref +3, Will +1; Str 16, Dex 15, Con 12, Int 14, Wis 10, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Climb +9, Hide +6, Jump +9, Listen +4, MoveSilently +6, Search +4, Spot +4; Alertness, Point Blank Shot, Stealthy, Weapon Focus (glaive), Weapon Specialization (glaive).

Possessions: Masterwork mithral breastplate, masterwork glaive, masterwork short sword, light crossbow, 20 bolts, potion of bull’s strength, 1d6–3 doses of drow poison.

Szith Morcane Sentry 3: Male drow Ftr5; CR 6; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 4d10+5; hp as listed in encounter descriptions; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 18, touch 13, flat-footed 17*; Atk +7 melee (1d6+2/19–20, short sword), or +10 ranged (1d8-1/×3 plus poison, masterwork mighty composite shortbow [+2 Str bonus] with +1 arrow); SQ drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), SR 16; AL CE; SV Fort +6, Ref +4, Will +2; Str 15, Dex 16, Con 12, Int 14, Wis 10, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Climb +10, Hide +19, Jump +10, Listen +4, MoveSilently +9, Search +4, Spot +4; Alertness, Point Blank Shot, Stealthy, Weapon Focus (composite shortbow), Weapon Specialization (composite shortbow).

Possessions: +1 mithral shirt, short sword, masterwork mighty

Vampires

In addition to the damage reduction, saving throw bonuses, ability score adjustments, and skill modifications already included in the statistics blocks, all vampires share the traits below.

Vampire Attacks: All vampires can use the following special attacks. Save DCs, where applicable, are given in the individual statistics blocks.

- Blood Drain (Ex): A vampire can suck blood from a living victim with its fangs by pinning its opponent. On the round that it makes a successful pin attempt, it drains blood, dealing 1d4 points of Constitution drain per round that the pin is maintained.

- Domination (Su): A vampire can make a gaze attack against one creature within 30 feet as a standard action. The target must make a successful Will save (DC as noted in individual statistics block) or be affected as though by a dominate person spell (caster level 12th).

- Energy Drain (Su): Any living creature struck by a vampire’s slam attack must succeed at a Fortitude saving throw (DC as noted in individual statistics block) or gain two negative levels. For each negative level bestowed, the vampire heals 7 points of damage. If the amount of healing is more than the damage the creature has taken, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. If the negative level has not been removed (with a spell such as restoration) before 24 hours have passed, the afflicted opponent must succeed at a Fortitude save with the same DC to remove it. Failure means the opponent’s level (or Hit Dice) is reduced by one.

Vampire Traits: All vampires share the following traits.

- Alternate Form (Su): A vampire can assume the shape of a bat, dire rat, bat, wolf, or dire wolf as a standard action. This ability is similar to a polymorph self spell (caster level 12th), except that a vampire can assume only one of the forms noted here. It can remain in that form until it assumes another or until the next sunrise.

- Children of the Night (Su): Once per day, a vampire can summon 4d8 dire rats, 10d10 bats, or 3d6 wolves as a standard action. These creatures arrive at 2d6 rounds and serve the vampire for up to 1 hour.

- Create Spawn (Su): A humanoid or monstrous humanoid slain by a vampire’s energy drain attack rises as a vampire spawn 1d4 days after burial. If the vampire instead drains the victim’s Constitution to 0 or below, the victim returns as a vampire spawn if it had 4 or fewer Hit Dice and as a vampire if it had 5 or more Hit Dice. In either case, the new vampire or vampire spawn is under the command of the vampire that created it and remains enslaved until its master’s death.

- Gaseous Form (Su): At will, a vampire can assume gaseous form as the spell (caster level 6th), but it can remain gaseous indefinitely and has a fly speed of 20 feet with perfect maneuverability. Using this ability is a standard action.

- Fast Healing (Ex): A vampire heals 5 points of damage per round so long as it has at least 1 hit point. If reduced to 0 hit points or lower, it automatically assumes gaseous form and attempts to escape. It must reach its coffin home within 2 hours or be utterly destroyed. (It can travel up to 9 miles in 2 hours.) Once at rest in its coffin, it rises to 1 hit point after 1 hour, then resumes fast healing at the rate of 5 hit points per round.

- Resistances (Ex): A vampire has cold resistance 20 and electricity resistance 20.

- Spider Climb (Ex): A vampire can climb sheer surfaces as though with a spider climb spell.

- Undead Traits: A vampire is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. It is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. A vampire cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if it is willing. It has darkvision (60-foot range).
composite shortbow (+2 Str bonus), 25 +1 arrows, cloak of elvenkind, potion of spider climb, 1d6–1 doses of drow poison.
*While climbing, a SENTRY 3 has an AC of 13.

Szith Morcane

Fiendish Monstrous Spider: CR 9; Gargantuuan vermin; HD 2d8+24; hp 132; Init +3; Spd 30 ft., climb 20 ft.; AC 18, touch 9, flat-footed 15; Face/Reach 20 ft. by 10 ft./10 ft.; Atk +20 melee (2d6+9 plus poison, bite), or +17 ranged touch (web); SA poison, smite good 1/day, web; SQ cold resistance 20, darkvision 60 ft., DR 10/+3, fire resistance 20, SR 25; AL CE; SV Fort +15, Ref +11, Will +8; Str 23, Dex 17, Con 12, Int 3, Wis 10, Cha 12.

Poison (Ex): A fiendish monstrous spider delivers its poison (Fortitude save DC 31) with each successful bite attack. The initial damage is 1d8 points plus poison, and secondary damage is the same (2d6 points of Strength damage).

Smite Good (Su): Once per day, the spider gains a +5 bonus on a single damage roll against a good foe.

Web (Ex): Eight times per day, the spider can cast a web. This attack is similar to a net attack, except that it has a range increment of 10 feet and a maximum range of 70 feet, and it is effective against targets of Huge or smaller size. If the spider hits with a ranged touch attack, its target is entangled and cannot move. An entangled creature can escape with a successful Escape Artist check (DC 30) or burst the web with a successful Strength check (DC 36). The web has 16 hit points per 5-foot section.

Szith Morcane Officer: Female drow Ftr9; CR 10; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 9d10+9; hp as listed in encounter descriptions; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 19, touch 12, flat-footed 17; Atk +12/+7 melee (1d8-4/19–20, +1 two-bladed sword) and +12 melee (1d8/19–20, +1 two-bladed sword), or +11 ranged (1d4/19–20 plus poison, hand crossbow), SQ drow traits (see Drow NPC sidebar, page 132), SR 20, AL CE; SV Fort +8, Ref +6, Will +5; Str 16, Dex 15, Con 13, Int 12, Wis 10, Cha 12.

Skills and Feats: Climb +12, Listen +9, Search +3, Spot +9, Ambidexterity, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Exotic Weapon Proficiency (two-bladed sword), Mobility, Spring Attack, Two-Weapon Fighting, Weapon Focus (two-bladed sword), Weapon Specialization (two-bladed sword).

Possessions: +1 breastplate, +1/1+1 two-bladed sword, slippers of spider climbing, cloak of resistance +1, hand crossbow with 20 bolts, 1d6 doses of drow poison, key to the iron grate at S19.

While climbing, a Szith Morcane Officer has an AC of 19.

These spells belong to the school of Illusion, which is this character’s specialty. Prohibited school: Evocation.

Possessions: Bracers of armor +2, amulet of natural armor +1, gloves of Dexterity +2, cloak of arachnida, potion of cure moderate wounds, diamond dust (270 gp).

Nycaloth: CR 13; Large outsider (evil); HD 1d8+13; hp 67; Init +2; Spd 40 ft., fly 90 ft. (good); AC 17, touch 11, flat-footed 15; Atk +5 melee (1d6+5, 2 claws); Face/Reach 5 ft. by 5 ft./10 ft.; SA improved grab, rake 1d6+5, spell-like abilities; SQ DR 20/+2, summon yugoloth, wounding, yugoloth traits; SR 24; AL NE; SV Fort +10, Ref +9, Will +7; Str 20, Dex 14, Con 17, Int 13, Wis 10, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +11, Hide +12, Knowledge (the planes) +8, Listen +14, Move Silently +16, Sense Motive +14, Spot +14, Dodge, Flyby Attack, Mobility.

Improved Grab (Ex): If an airborne nycaloth hits an opponent that is at least one size category smaller than itself with both claw attacks, it deals normal damage and attempts to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity (grapple bonus +12). If it gets a hold, it can rake on the same round. Thereafter, the nycaloth the option to conduct the grapple normally, or simply use its claws to hold the opponent (~20 penalty on grapple check, but the nycaloth is not considered grappled). In either case, each successful grapple check it makes during successive rounds automatically deals damage from its claw attacks. If the nycaloth gets a hold on a nonlying opponent of Medium-size or smaller, it can ascend with the grabbed creature. When carrying a creature weighing more than 230 pounds, the nycaloth’s fly speed drops to 60 feet and it takes a -3 penalty on Hide and Move Silently checks. The nycaloth can’t carry a load of more than 496 pounds.

Rake (Ex): On any round that a nycaloth has a hold on an opponent (see Improved Grab, above), it can make two rake attacks (+5 melee) with its hind legs for 1d6+5 points of damage each.

Spell-like Abilities: At will—deeper darkness, detextate, fear, invisibility, mirror image, see invisibility, and teleport without error.
Summon Yugoloth (Sp): Once per day, a nycaloth can attempt to summon another nycaloth (or, if you are using Manual of the Planes, 1/4 mezzaloth) with a 20% chance of success. Summoned nycaloths remain for 1 hour, and they cannot use their own summon abilities during that time. There is a 20% chance that a summoned nycaloth turns on its summoner, attacking immediately (and hoping for a reward from whomever was threatening the first nycaloth).

Wounding (Ex): A wound resulting from a nycaloth’s claw attack bleeds for an additional 1 point of damage per round thereafter. Multiple wounds from such attacks result in cumulative bleeding loss (two wounds for 2 points of damage per round, and so on). The bleeding can be stopped only by a successful Heal check (DC 15) or the application of a cure spell or some other healing spell (heal, healing circle, or the like).

Yugoloth Traits: A yugoloth is immune to poison and acid. It has cold resistance 20, electricity resistance 20, and fire resistance 20, and it can communicate telepathically with any creature within 100 feet that has a language.

Substitution: Use a vrock demon instead of the nycaloth.

Skills and Feats: Climb –2, Concentration +12, Hide +4, Jump +12, Knowledge (arcana) +7, Listen +3, Spot +8; Alertness, Combat Casting, Combat Reflexes, Point Blank Shot, Power Attack, Precise Shot.

Rock Throwing (Ex): Ghunda and Thurrak can hurl rocks weighing 40 to 50 pounds each with a range increment of 180 feet and a maximum range of 5 increments.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—stone shape, stone tell, and either transmute rock to mud or transmute mud to rock; Caster level 10th; save DC 13 + spell level.

Rock Catching (Ex): Once per round as a free action, Ghunda and Thurrak can catch Small to Large rocks aimed at them. A successful Reflex save (DC 15 for Small, DC 20 for Medium-size, DC 25 for Large) negates the attack.

Sorcerer Spells Known (6/7/4; save DC 13 + spell level): 0—arcane mark, dance lights, daze, detect magic, read magic, resistance; 1st—endure elements, magic missile, true strike; 2nd—endurance.

Possessions: Bracers of armor +2, Huge +1 greatclub.

Piendisk Kraken: CR 14; Gargantuan magical beast (aquatic); HD 20d10+180; hp 303; Init +4; Spd swim 20 ft.; AC 20, touch 6, flat-footed 20; Atk +28 melee (2d8+12/19–20, 2 tentacle rakes) and +23 melee (1d6+6, 6 arms) and +23 melee (4d6+6, bite); Face/Reach 20 ft. by 40 ft./10 ft. (100 ft. with tentacle); SA constrict 1d6+18, improved grab, smite good 1/day, spell-like abilities; SQ cold resistance 20, DR 10/+3, fire resistance 20, ink cloud, jet, SR 23; AL NE; SV Fort +21, Ref +12, Will +13; Str 34, Dex 10, Con 29, Int 21, Wis 20, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +19, Knowledge (geography) +10, Knowledge (nature) +10, Listen +17, Search +17, Spot +17, Alertness, Blind-Fight, Expertise, Improved Improved Critical (tentacle), Improved Initiative, Improved Trip, Iron Will.
Constrict (Ex): With a successful grapple check, a fiendish kraken can crush a grabbed opponent, dealing 1d6+18 points of bludgeoning damage.

Improved Grab (Ex): If the fiendish kraken hits a Huge or smaller opponent with an arm or tentacle attack, it deals normal damage and attempts to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity (grapple bonus +44). If it gets a hold, it can constrict on the same round. Thereafter, the creature has the option to conduct the grapple normally, or simply use its arm or tentacle to hold the opponent (–20 penalty on grapple check, but the kraken is not considered grappled). In either case, each successful grapple check it makes during successive rounds automatically deals damage from its arm or tentacle and constrict attacks.

Smite Good (Su): Once per day, a fiendish kraken gains a +20 bonus on a single damage roll against a good foe.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—control weather, control winds, dominate animal, resist elements. Caster level 9th; save DC 15 + spell level.

Ink Cloud (Ex): A fiendish kraken can emit a cloud of jet-black ink 80 feet high by 80 feet wide by 120 feet long once per minute as a standard action. The cloud provides total concealment, which the kraken normally uses to escape a losing fight. Creatures within the cloud suffer the effects of total darkness.

Jet (Ex): A fiendish kraken can jet backward once per round as a standard action. The jet has a range of 80 feet and deals 2d6+4 points of damage to objects in its path. Creatures that are caught in the jet are knocked back and stunned for 1 round.

Improved Grab (Ex): If an advanced chuul hits a Large or smaller opponent with a claw attack, it deals normal damage and attempts to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity (grapple bonus +32). If it gets a hold, it can squeeze on its next turn. Thereafter, the creature has the option to conduct the grapple normally, or simply use its claw to hold the opponent (–20 penalty on grapple check, but the octopus is not considered grappled). In either case, each successful grapple check it makes during successive rounds automatically deals damage from its claw attacks.

Paralysis (Ex): The chuul can transfer grabbed victims from its claw to its tentacles as a partial action. The tentacles grapple with the same strength as the claw but deal no damage. However, they exude a paralytic secretion. Every creature held in the tentacles must make a Fortitude save (DC 26) or be paralyzed for 6 rounds. While held in the tentacles, paralyzed or not, the victim automatically takes 2d6+18 points of damage each round from the creature’s mandibles.

Squeeze (Ex): A chuul that gets a hold automatically deals claw damage, plus an additional 1d6+18 points of bludgeoning damage from the crushing force each round the hold is maintained.

Kuo-Toa Monk: Male kuo-toa Mk10; CR 12; Medium-size monstrous humanoid (aquatic); HD 2d8+4 plus 10d8+20; hp 81; Init +6; Spd 40 ft., swim 50 ft.; AC 25; touch 19, flat-footed 23; Atk +10/+6/+4 melee (1d10+3, unarmed strike) and +5 melee (1d6+1, bite), or +9/+6/+3 melee (1d6+6 plus 1d6 fire, +1 flaming nunchaku) and +9 melee (1d6+4 plus 1d6 cold, +1 frost nunchaku) and +5 melee (1d6+1, bite); SA flury of blows, ki strike (+1), stunning attack (10/day; DC 20); SQ amphibious, darkvision 60 ft., electricity resistance 30, fast movement, immunities*, improved evasion, keen sight*, leap of the clouds, light blindness*, purity of body, slippery*, slow fall (50 ft.), still mind, wholeness of body, +20; AL NE; SV Fort +11, Ref +12, Will +9; Skills and Feats: Balance +14, Escape Artist +22, Hide +12, Jump +15, Knowledge (religion) +6, Listen +11, Move Silently +17, Search +9, Spot +14, Tumble +14; Alertness, Deflect Arrows, Dodge, Great Fortitude, Improved Initiative, Improved Trip, Mobility, Shield Proficiency, Spring Attack.

Search +27, Spellcraft +27, Spot +29; Alertness, Flyby Attack, Hover, Improved Initiative, Power Attack, Wingover.

Breath Weapon (Su): Glouroth’s breath weapon is a cone of blinding, smoky shadows with an energy drain effect. Any creature within the 40-ft. cone gains 3 negative levels, or 2 negative levels with a successful Reflex save (DC 26). The Fortitude save to remove the negative level also has a DC of 26.

Frightful Presence (Ex): Whenever Glouroth attacks, charges, or flies overhead, every creature within a radius of 180 feet with fewer than 22 HD must make a successful Will save (DC 26) or become shaken for 4d6 rounds (or panicked if it has 4 or fewer HD). Creatures that successfully save are immune to Glouroth’s frightful presence for one day.

Sorcerer Spells Known (6/8/7/5; caster level 7th; save DC 15 + spell level): 0—arcane mark, daze, detect magic, disrupt undead, mage hand, ray of frost, read magic; 1st—chill touch, mage armor, magic missile, ray of enfeeblement, true strike; 2nd—blur, invisibility, resist elements; 3rd—deeper darkness, dispel magic.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—mirror image; 2/day—dimension door. Caster level 7th; save DC 15 + spell level.

Dragon Traits: Glouroth is immune to sleep and paralysis effects. He has darkvision 60 ft. and low-light vision.

Shadow Blend (Su): During any conditions other than full daylight, Glouroth can disappear into the shadows, giving him nine-tenths concealment. Artificial illumination, even a light or continual flame spell, does not negate this ability, but a daylight spell does.

Substitution: Use an old black dragon in place of the shadow dragon.

Vournoth’s Mire

Maerimydra Officer: Female drow Ftr8; CR 9; Medium-size humanoid (dwarf); HD 8d10+16; hp 60, 60; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 23, touch 13, flat-footed 21; Atk +12/+7 melee (1d6+5/18–20, +1 rapier); SQ drow traits (see Drow NPC sidebar, page 132), SR 19; AL CE; SV Fort +8, Ref +4, Will +3; Str 15, Dex 15, Con 14, Int 10, Wis 12, Cha 12.

Skills and Feats: Climb +2, Jump +2, Listen +6, Search +2, Spot +6; Blind-Fight, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Mobility, Spring Attack, Weapon Finesse (rapier), Weapon Focus (rapier), Weapon Specialization (rapier).

Possessions: +2 chainmail, +1 large steel shield, +1 rapier, ring of protection +1.

Gok’lik’ak: Male grimlock Bbr12; CR 13; Medium-size monstrous humanoid; HD 2d8+10 plus 1d12+60; hp 189; Init +3; Spd 40 ft.; AC 22, touch 13, flat-footed 22; Atk +21/+16/+11 melee (2d8+6/18–20×3); +2 keen battleaxe); SQ blindsight, DR 1/—, fast movement, immunities, rage 4/day, scent, uncanny dodge; AL NE; SV Fort +15, Ref +10, Will +7; Str 19, Dex 16, Con 20, Int 8, Wis 10, Cha 6.

Skills and Feats: Climb +18, Hide +8, Intimidate +10, Listen +12, Search +8, Spot +4, Alertness, Cleave, Improved Critical (battleaxe), Power Attack, Weapon Focus (battleaxe).

Blindsight (Ex): Gok’lik’ak can ascertain all foes within 40 feet as a sighted creature would. Beyond that range, he treats all targets as totally concealed. Gok’lik’ak is susceptible to sound- and scent-based attacks, however, and is affected normally by loud noises and sonic spells and overpowering odors. Negating his sense of smell or hearing reduces this ability to the equivalent of the Blind-Fight feat. If both are negated, Gok’lik’ak is effectively blinded.

Immunities: Gok’lik’ak is immune to gaze attacks, visual effects, illusions, and other attack forms that rely on sight.

Rage: The following changes to the above statistics are in effect while Gok’lik’ak rages: AC 20, touch 11, flat-footed 20; hp 211; Atk +23/+18/+13 melee (1d8+10/18–20×3); +2 keen battleaxe); SV Fort +15, Will +9; Str 23, Con 24, Cleave +20. Gok’lik’ak can rage four times per day for a duration of 10 rounds each time.

Possessions: +2 keen battleaxe, +2 hide armor, +2 bracers of defense, nonmagical rings and gemstones worth 100 gp.

Quthnorak: Male mind flayer Sor6; CR 14; Medium-size aberration; HD 8d8+24 (mind flayer) plus 6d4+18 (Sor); hp 102; Init +7; Spd 30 ft.; AC 18, touch 15, flat-footed 15; Atk +13 melee (3d4, +4 tentacles); SA extract, improved grab, mind blast, psionics; SQ darkvision 60 ft., telepathy; SR 25; AL LE; SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +15; Str 17, Con 16, Int 18, Wis 18, Cha 24.

Skills and Feats: Alchemy +9, Bluff +12, Concentration +18, Diplomacy +9, Hide +9, Intimidate +15, Knowledge (arcana) +15, Knowledge (the planes) +11, Listen +11, Move Silently +8, Scry +10, Spellcraft +10, Spot +11, Alertness, Combat Casting, Dodge, Expertise, Improved Initiative, Weapon Finesse (tentacle), Weapon Focus (tentacle).

Extract (Ex): A mind flayer that begins its turn with all four tentacles attached and successfully maintains its hold automatically extracts the opponent’s brain, instantly killing that creature.

Improved Grab (Ex): If Quthnorak hits an opponent of Small to Large size with a tentacle attack, it deals normal damage and attempts to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity (grapple bonus +9). If it gets a hold, it can attempt to start its remaining tentacles with a single grapple check. Thereafter, Quthnorak has the option to conduct the grapple normally, or simply use its tentacle to hold the opponent (–20 penalty on grapple check, but Quthnorak is not considered grappled). In either case, each successful grapple check it makes during successive rounds automatically deals damage from its tentacle attacks. The opponent can escape with a single successful grapple check or Escape Artist check, but Quthnorak gets a +2 circumstance bonus for every tentacle that was attached at the beginning of the opponent’s turn.

Mind Blast (Sp): This attack is a cone 60 feet long. Anyone caught in this cone must succeed at a Will save (DC 21) or be stunned for 3d4 rounds.

Pionsics (Sp): At will—astral projection, charm monster, detect thoughts, levitate, plane shift, and suggestion. Caster level 8th; save DC 17 + spell level.

Telepathy (Su): Mind flayers can communicate telepathically with any creature within 100 feet that has a language.

Spells Known (6/8/7/5; save DC 17 + spell level): 0—arcane mark, daze, detect magic, disrupt undead, ghost sound, light, read magic; 1st—chill touch, mage armor, magic missile, shockning grasp; 2nd—alter self; see invisibility; 3rd—baste.

Possessions: Ring of protection +2, cloak of charisma +2.

Note: If you are using the Psionics Handbook in your game, you can use Quthnorak as a pion instead of a sorcerer, with the following adjustments to his skills, feats, and powers known.

Quthnorak: Male mind flayer Pion 6 (telepath); Statistics as the sorcerer version, except as noted below: AC 22, touch 15, flat-footed 19.

Skills and Feats: Animal Empathy +13, Bluff +24, Concentration +18, Diplomacy +19, Hide +9, Intimidate +17, Knowledge (psionics) +15, Knowledge (the planes) +11, Listen +11, Move Silently +8, Psicraft +10, Remote View +10, Spot +11, Alertness, Combat Manifestation, Dodge, Improved Initiative, Inertial Armor, Weapon Finesse (tentacle), Weapon Focus (tentacle).

Taharak, Ghost Champion: Male drow ghost Frt12; CR 17; Medium-size undead; HD 12d12; hp 67; Init +3; Spd fly 30 ft. (perfect); AC 15, touch 15, flat-footed 12; Atk +15/+10 melee touch (withering, incorporeal touch); SA manifestation, horrific appearance, withering; SQ drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), incorporeal, rejuvenation, turn resistance +4, undead traits; SR 24; AL CE; SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +9; Str 17, Dex 16, Con —, Int 12, Wis 12, Cha 17.

Against Eberron Opponents: AC 23, touch 13, flat-footed 22; Atk +18/+13/+8 melee (2d6+13/19–20, +2 spiked chain); SA paralyzing glare; SQ drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), incorporeal touch.

Skills and Feats: Climb +13, Hide +6, Jump +12, Listen +15, Search +13, Spot +13; Blind-Fight, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Exotic Weapon Proficiency (spiked chain), Improved Critical (spiked chain), Mobility, Point Blank Shot, Power Attack, Precise Shot, Spring Attack, Weapon Focus (spiked chain), Weapon Specialization (spiked chain).

Withering (Su): Taharak’s touch acts as a rod of withering, dealing 1d4 points of Strength damage and 1d4 points of Constitution damage with a successful corporeal touch attack (Fort DC 28 negates). If Taharak scores a critical hit, the damage is Constitution drain instead.

Horrific Appearance (Su): Any living creature within 60 feet that views Taharak must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 18) or immediately take 1d4 points of Strength drain, 1d4 points of Dexterity drain, and 1d4 points of Constitution drain. A creature that successfully saves against this effect cannot be affected by Taharak’s horrific appearance again for one day.

Incorporeal Subtype: Taharak can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, +1 or better magic weapons, or magic. He has a 50% chance to ignore any damage from a corporeal source. He can pass through solid objects at will, and his own attacks pass through armor. He always moves silently.

Manifestation (Su): When Taharak manifests, he becomes visible but is still incorporeal. He can use his incorporeal touch attack and his horrific appearance against material opponents.

Rejuvenation (Su): If destroyed, Taharak restores himself in 2d4 days if he makes a successful level check (DC 16).

Undead Traits: Taharak is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromatic poisons, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. He is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. Taharak cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if he is willing. He has darkvision (60-foot range).

Possessions: +2 full plate, +2 spiked chain (both ethereal).

Cult Cleric: Female drow Cfr9 of Kiarasalee; CR 10; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 9d8+9; hp as listed in encounter descriptions; Init +0; Spd 20 ft.; AC 23, touch 10, flat-footed 23; Atk +7/+2 melee (1d8+1, +1 morningstar), or +8 ranged (1d8+19–20, masterwork light crossbow with masterwork bolts); SA rebuke undead 10/day; SQ drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), SR 20; AL CE; SV Fort +7, Ref +3, Will +9; Str 10, Dex 10, Con 12, Int 14, Wis 16, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +13, Knowledge (arcana) +8, Knowledge (religion) +8, Listen +7, Search +4, Spot +7; Combat Casting, Craft Wand, Extra Turning, Scribe Scroll.

Spells Prepared (6/6/6/5/3/2; save DC 13 + spell level): 0— cure minor wounds, detect magic, guidance, read magic, resistance, virtue; 1st— deathwatch, divine favor, endure elements, random action, sanctuary, shield of faith*; 2d— cure moderate wounds (2), death knell, desecrate*, hold person, spiritual weapon; 3rd— animate dead*, bestow curse, dispel magic, invisibility purge, magic vestment; 4th— cure critical wounds, divine power, fire shield*, 5th— circle of domes, slay living.

Possessions: +2 full plate, +1 large steel shield, +1 morningstar, scroll of flame strike, scroll of blade barrier, wand of summon monster III (15 charges; this item does not work inside the forbiddance of Castle Maerimydra), masterwork light crossbow, 20 masterwork bolts.

Rat Form: While Logala is in her hybrid form, the following changes to the above statistics are in effect: Small Shapechanger; Init +7; AC 21, touch 18, flat-footed 21; Atk +14 melee (1d4, bite); SA curse of lycanthropy, sneak attack +4d6; SQ alternate form, DR 15/silver, drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 172), evasion, natural lycanthropy, rat empathy, SR 20, traps, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC, can’t be flanked); SV Fort +9, Reflex +13, Will +8; Str 12, Dex 18, Con 10, Int 10, Wis 15, Cha 15.

Natural Lycanthrope: Logala was born a lycanthrope and has full control over her lycanthropy. She never needs to make Control Shape checks.

Posessions: Masterwork light crossbow, 20 bolts, rapier.

Kâras: Male drow Rog5/Clr3 of Vhaeraun/Skr3; CR 12; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 5d6 plus 3d8 plus 3d6; hp 41; Init +4; Spd 30 ft.; AC 22, touch 14, flat-footed 22; Atk +8/+3 melee (1d6+1/19–20, +1 short sword), or +11 ranged (1d4/19–20, hand crossbow); SA repute undeal 5/day, sneak attack +4d6; SQ drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), evasion, locate object, obscure object, sacred defense, +1 sanctuary, thwalt glyph, traps, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC); SR 22; AL NE; SV Fort +7, Ref +14, Will +7; Str 10, Dex 18, Con 10, Int 10, Wis 15, Cha 15.

Skills and Feats: Balance +15, Climb +19, Craft (pottery) +7, Disguise +16, Knowledge (religion) +14, Listen +13, Move Silently +19, Pick Pocket +19, Search +27, Spot +11, Tumble +19, Multitack, Attack, Weapon Finesse (bite). Curse of Lycanthropy (Su): Any humanoid hit by Logala’s bite or weapon attack must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 15) or contract lycanthropy.

Natural Lycanthrope: While Logala is in her hybrid form, the following changes to the above statistics are in effect: Large giant (fire); AC 26, touch 14, flat-footed 14; Atk +13/+8/+3 melee (1d8+1, +2 slams), +1 short sword; SA command undead, rock throwing, smite good; SQ acid resistance 20, aura compliance; SR 26; AL CE; SV Fort +20, Ref +11, Will +11; Str 12, Dex 17, Con 11, Int 10, Wis 15, Cha 14.

Alternate Form (Su): Chiirikk can assume the form of any corporeal creature or object from Diminutive to Large-size as a standard action. This ability is otherwise similar to shapechange (caster level 20th). Chiirikk’s favorite forms (an old-looking drow male and a fire giant male) are detailed below.

Drow Form: While Chiirikk is in this form, the following changes to the above statistics are in effect: Medium-size humanoid (elf); AC 12, touch 12, flat-footed 12; Atk +22 melee (1d3, unarmed strike); SQ alternate form, drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar), scent, telepathy, tremorsense; Fort +9, Ref +11; Str 10, Dex 13, Con 8; Climb +6.

Fire Giant Form: While Chiirikk is in this form, the following changes to the above statistics are in effect: Large giant (fire); AC 16, touch 8, flat-footed 16; Atk +30 melee (1d4+10, unarmed strike); SA rock throwing; SQ alternate form, fire subtype, rock catching, scent, telepathy, tremorsense; Str 31, Dex 9, Con 21; Climb +16.

Amorphous (Ex): In its natural form, Chiirikk is immune to poison, sleep, paralysis, stun, and polymorph. It is not subject to critical hits and, having no clear front or back, cannot be flanked.

Telepathy (Su): Chiirikk can communicate telepathically with any creature within 100 feet that has a language.

Tremorsense (Ex): As long as it is touching the ground itself, Chiirikk can automatically sense the location of anything within 60 feet that is in contact with the ground.

Skills: When using an alternate form, Chiirikk gains a +10 circumstance bonus to Disguise checks.

Guk: Female goblin Rog9; CR 9; Small humanoid (goblinoid); HD 9d6+18, hp 49; Init +4; Spd 30 ft.; AC 19, touch 13, flat-footed 19; Atk +6/+1 melee (1d8–1/19–20, +1 venemous short sword), or +11 ranged (1d4/19–20, masterwork hand crossbow); SA sneak attack +3d6; SQ darkvision 60 ft., evasion, traps, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC, can’t be flanked); AL NE; SV Fort +7, Reflex +12, Will +4; Str 6, Dex 18, Con 14, Int 14, Wis 12, Cha 8.

Skills and Feats: Appraise +14, Balance +16, Climb +16, Escape Artist +16, Hide +16, Listen +15, Move Silently +20, Read Lips +8, Search +10, Spot +19, Alertness, Dodge, Lightning Reflexes, Skill Focus (Hide).

Possessions: +1 shadow studded leather, +1 venemous short sword, masterwork hand crossbow, 20 quarrels. (A venomous weapon, described in Magic of Faeirun, allows the wielder to use a poison spell (DC 14) against a creature struck by the weapon once per day. The wielder can decide to use the power after striking the blow, as long as it is in the same round, and doing so is a free action.)

Kurgoth Hellspawn, Conqueror of Maerimydra: Male half-fiend/half-fire giant Blk5 of Kossuth; CR 17; Large outsider (fire, evil); HD 17d8+90 plus d10–10; hp 218; Init +1; Spd 30 ft., fly 30 ft. (average); AC 29, touch 10, flat-footed 28; Atk +32/+27/+22/+17 melee (2d8+19 plus 1d6 fire, Huge +1 flaming greatsword), or +31 melee (1d6+12, 2 claws) and +26 melee (1d8+6, bite); or +21/16/11/6 ranged (2d6+12 plus 2d6 fire, rock); SA command undead, rock throwing, smite good, 1/day, sneak attack +16d6, spell-like abilities; SQ acid resistance 20, aura of despair, cold resistance 20, fire subtype, electricity resistance 20, poison immunity, poison use, rock catching, AL NE, SV Fort +20, Reflex +8, Will +7, Str 31, Dex 13, Con 25, Int 14, Wis 10, Cha 13.

Command Undead (Su): Kurgoth can command undead as a 3rd-level cleric.

Rock Throwing (Ex): Kurgoth can hurl rocks weighing 40 to 50... pounds each with a range increment of 120 feet and a maximum range of 7 increments.

Smite Good (Su) Once per day, Kurgoth gains a +1 bonus on a single attack roll and a +7 bonus on the corresponding damage roll against a good foe.

Spell-Like Abilities: At will—detect good; 3/day—darkness, poison, unholy aura; 1/day—blasphemy, contagion, desecrate, destruction, horrid wilting, summon monster IX (friends only), unbullow, unholy blight. Caster level 20; save DC 11 + spell level.

Aura of Despair (Su): Kurgoth radiates a malign aura that causes every enemy within 10 feet of him to suffer a –2 morale penalty on damage from cold (if it penetrates his cold resistance), except on a successful save.

Poison Use: Kurgoth has no risk of accidentally poisoning himself when using poisons.

Rock Catching (Ex): Once per round as a free action, Kurgoth can catch small to large rocks aimed at him. A successful Reflex save (DC 15) negates the attack.

Skills: Balance +15, Climb +11, Disguise +4, Hide +19, Listen +6, Spot +6.

Feats: Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Mobility, Spring Attack.

Skills and Feats: Climb +2, Hide +10, Jump +2, Listen +14, Search +10, Spot +14; Blind-Fight, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Mobility, Spring Attack, Weapon Finesse (rapier), Weapon Focus (rapier), Weapon Specialization (rapier).

Against Ethereal Opponents: AC 23, touch 13, flat-footed 21; Atk +12/+7 melee (1d6+5/18–20, +1 rapier), or +10 melee touch (corruption 1d4+2, touch).

Corrupting Touch (Su): When the ghost hits a living target with its incorporeal touch attack, it deals 1d4 points of damage (or 1d4+2 against ethereal opponents).

Corrupting Gaze (Su): Any creature within 30 feet that meets the officer’s gaze must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 17) or take 2d10 points of damage plus 1d4 points of Charisma drain.

Incorporeal Subtype: The officer can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, +1 or better magic weapons, or magic. She has a 50% chance to ignore any damage from a corporeal source. She can pass through solid objects at will, and her own attacks pass through armor. She always moves silently.

Manifestation (Su): When the officer manifests, she becomes visible but is still incorporeal. She can use her incorporeal touch attack and her corrupting gaze against material opponents.

Rejuvenation (Su): If destroyed, the officer restores herself in 2d4 days if she makes a successful level check (DC 16).

Undead Traits: The officer is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. She is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. The officer cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if she is willing. She has darkvision (60-foot range).

Possessions: +2 chainmail, +1 large steel shield, +1 rapier (all ethereal).

\textsuperscript{*}Revenant ability; see Revenant Template in Appendix 1.

Doomsphere: Beholder ghost; CR 15; Large undead (incorporeal); HD 11d12; hp 83; Init +4; Spd fly 30 ft. (perfect); AC 13, touch 13, flat-footed 13; Atk +7 ranged touch (eye rays) and +2 melee touch (corruption 1d4, incorporeal touch); SA corrupting touch, eye rays; SQ all-around vision, antimagic cone, cold immunity, electricity immunity, incorporeal subtype, manifestation, rejuvenation, turn resistance +6, weather resistance +4; AL NE; SV Fort +5, Ref +3, Will +11; Str 10, Dex 10, Con —, Int 17, Wis 17, Cha 19.

Against Ethereal Opponents: AC 20, touch 9, flat-footed 20.

Corrupting Touch (Su): When the doomsphere hits a living target with its incorporeal touch attack, it deals 1d4 points of damage.

Eye Rays (Su): Each of the doomsphere’s ten small eyes can produce a magical ray once per round, even when the doomsphere is attacking physically or moving at full speed. The creature can easily aim all its eyes upward, but its own body tends to get in the way when it tries to aim the rays in other directions. During a round, the creature can aim only three eye rays at targets in any one arc other than up (forward, backward, left, right, or down). The remaining eyes must aim at targets in other arcs or not at all. A beholder can tilt and pan its body each round to change which rays it can bring to bear in a given arc.

Each eye’s effect resembles a spell cast by a 13th-level sorcerer but follows the rules for a ray (see Aiming a Spell in the Player’s Handbook). The doomsphere retains the living beholder’s eye rays of fear and slow. Its other eight eyestalks have the powers described below. All rays have a range of 150 feet.

Child Ray: This ray deals 2d6 points of Constitution damage. In addition, the target must succeed at a Will save (DC 20) or be affected as if by a slow spell for 11 rounds.

Withering: This ray deals 1d4 points of Strength damage and 1d4 points of Constitution damage when it hits a living creature. If the doomsphere scores a critical hit, the damage is actually Constitution drain instead. A successful Fortitude save (DC 20) negates the effect.

Hold Monster: The target must succeed at a Will save (DC 20) or be affected as though by the spell.

Enervation: The target must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 20) or be affected as though by the spell.

Animate Dead: This ray works just like the spell, except that the doomsphere uses the ray rather than a physical touch.

Bonebiter: This attack breaks the bones or chitin of the subject, dealing damage and reducing speed by half. On a successful Fortitude save (DC 20), the target takes 5d8 points of damage; on a failure, he or she takes 7d8 points of damage on the first round and an additional 1d8 on the next round. Incorporeal, gaseous, and invertebrate (including plants, oozes, elementals, worms, and mollusks without shells, such as squids or slugs) creatures are not affected.

Flesh Tear: The target’s flesh is magically scoured away from the bone, dealing damage as a Melf’s acid arrow spell (2d4 points of damage per round for 3 rounds).

Unholy Blight: The target is affected as though by the spell. A good character takes 5d8 points of damage and is sickened for 1d4 rounds. A neutral character takes half damage and is not sickened. A successful Fortitude save (DC 20) reduces the damage by half and negates the sickening effect.

All-Around Vision (Ex): The doomsphere can’t be flanked, and it gains a +4 racial bonus on Spot and Search checks (in addition to the ghost’s +8 racial bonus).

Antimagic Cone (Su): The doomsphere’s central eye continually produces a 150-foot antimagic cone extending straight ahead from the creature’s front. This ability functions just like antimagic field (caster level 13th). All magical and supernatural powers and effects are suppressed—even the doomsphere’s own eye rays. Once per round, during its turn, the doomsphere decides which way it will face and whether the antimagic cone is active or not. (The doomsphere deactivates the cone by shutting its central eye.) Note that a doomsphere can use its incorporeal touch attack only against creatures to its front.

Incorporeal Subtype: A doomsphere can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, +1 or better magic weapons, or magic. It has a 50% chance to ignore any damage from a corporeal source. It can pass through solid objects at will, and its own attacks pass through armor. It always moves silently.

Manifestation (Su): When a doomsphere manifests, it becomes visible but is still incorporeal. It can use its corrupting touch and eye rays against material opponents while manifested.

Rejuvenation (Su): If destroyed, the doomsphere restores itself in 2d4 days if it makes a successful level check (DC 16).

Undead Traits: A doomsphere is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantical effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. It is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive

Arachnoid Roper: CR 11; Large aberration; HD 10d8+30; hp 61; Init +7; Spd 10 ft., climb 10 ft.; AC 28, touch 12, flat-footed 23; Atk +10 ranged (special, 10 strands) and +7 melee (+2d6 plus poison); SA attach, poison, strands, weakness; SQ cold resistance 30, electricity immunity, fire vulnerability, immunities, SR 28; AL NE; SV Fort +6, Ref +6, Will +12; Str 19, Dex 17, Con 17, Int 8, Wis 16, Cha 12. Skills and Feats: Climb +12, Hide +19, Jump +10, Listen +15, Spot +21; Alertness, Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Weapon Focus (strand)

Attack (Ex): If an arachnoid roper hits with a strand attack, the strand latches onto the opponent's body. This attack deals no damage but draws the struck opponent 10 feet closer each subsequent round (no attack of opportunity) unless that creature breaks free with a successful Escape Artist check (DC 23) or Strength check (DC 19). The roper can draw in a creature within 10 feet of itself and bite with a +4 bonus in the same round.

A single attack with a slashing weapon that deals at least 10 points of damage severs a strand (AC 20).

Poison (Ex): An arachnoid roper delivers its poison (Fortitude save DC 22) with each successful hits attack. The initial and secondary damage is the same (1d6 points of Strength damage).

Strands (Ex): The arachnoid roper has ten long, sticky strands that can strike up to 70 feet away (no range increment). Weakness (Ex): A roper's strands can sap an opponent's strength. Anyone caught by a strand must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 18) or take 2d8 points of temporary Strength damage.

Fire Vulnerability (Ex): An arachnoid roper takes double damage from fire attacks unless a save is allowed for half damage. A successful save halves the damage and a failure doubles it.

Immunities: Arachnoid-ropers are immune to all mind-influencing effects (charms, compulsions, phantasms, patterns, and morale effects).

Skills: An arachnoid roper gains a +4 racial bonus on Hide checks and a +6 racial bonus on Jump and Spot checks. In stony or icy areas, its racial bonus on Hide checks rises to +12 (an additional +8).

Jhorganni: Female drider vampireClr7 of Kiransaeler; CR 16; Large undead; HD 13d12; hp 101; Init +7; Spd 30 ft., climb 15 ft.; AC 27, touch 14, flat-footed 22; Atk +14 melee (1d4+6 and energy drain, 2 claws) and +11 melee (1d6+3, bite); Face/Reach 10 ft. by 10 ft. /5 ft.; SA attach, blood drain, energy drain, rebuke undead 14/day, spell-like abilities, spider mastery; SQ alternate form, cold resistance 20, DR 15/l, electricity resistance 20, fast healing 5, gaseous form, turn resistance +4, undead traits; SR 26; AL CE; SV Fort +5, Ref +4, Will +17; Str 22, Dex 16, Con —, Int 16, Wis 21, Cha 24. Skills: Climb +12, Concentration +16, Hide +17, Knowledge (arcana) +10, Knowledge (religion) +10, Listen +23, Move Silently +21, Scream +10, Search +11, Sense Motive +15, Spellcraft +19, Spot +26, Alertness, Ambidexterity, Combat Casting, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Extra Turning, Improved Initiative, Lightnig Reflexes, Mobility, Multiattack, Spell Penetration, Weapon Focus (claw).

Attack (Ex): If Jhorganni hits with her bite attack, she latches onto the opponent’s body and begins draining blood the same round. Her AC while attacked is 25.

Blood Drain (Ex): Jhorganni drains blood, dealing 1d4 points of Constitution drain damage upon hitting her opponent. Each round thereafter that she remains attacked, she automatically deals an additional 1d4 points of Constitution drain.

Energy Drain (Su): Any living creature hit by Jhorganni’s claw attack must succeed at a Fortitude saving throw (DC 23) or gain one negative level. For each negative level bestowed, Jhorganni heals 7 points of damage. If the amount of healing is more than the damage she has taken, she gains any excess as temporary hit points. If the negative level has not been removed (with a spell such as restoration) before 24 hours have passed, the afflicted opponent must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 23) to remove it. Failure means the opponent’s level (or Hit Dice) is reduced by one.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, detect chaos, detect evil, detect good, detect law, detect magic, faerie fire, levitate, Caster level 6; save DC 15 + spell level.

Spider Mastery (Su): Jhorganni can compel a spiderkind creature (see Spiderkind) to obey her mental commands. An unwilling, intelligent target that fails a Will saving throw (DC 23) obeys one command as if under a suggestion spell. A successful save allows the creature to resist the command, but Jhorganni can attempt to command it again next round. Commanding an unwilling target requires a standard action; otherwise, issuing commands is a free action.

Alternate Form (Su): Jhorganni can assume the shape of a monstrous spider of any size from Tiny to Large as a standard action. This ability functions like a polymorph self spell (caster level 12th). She can remain in spider form until she chooses to revert to her natural form or until the next sunrise.

Fast Healing (Ex): Jhorganni heals 5 points of damage per round as long as she has at least 1 hit point. If reduced to 0 hit points or below, she automatically assumes gaseous form and attempts to escape. She must reach her web nest within 2 hours or be utterly destroyed. (She can travel up to 9 miles in 2 hours.) After 1 hour of rest in her nest, her hit point total rises to 1, then she resumes fast healing at her normal rate.

Gaseous Form (Su): At will, Jhorganni can assume gaseous form as a standard action. This ability functions like the gaseous form spell (caster level 5th), except that Jhorganni can remain gaseous indefinitely and has a fly speed of 20 feet with perfect maneuverability.

Undead Traits: Jhorganni is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. She is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. Jhorganni cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if she is willing. She has darkvision (60-foot range).

Spells Prepared (effective caster level 13th; 6/8/10/7/6/4/3): save DC 17 + spell level:

0—create water, detect magic, guidance, read magic, resistance, virtus; 1st—bane, cause fear, command, comprehend languages, detect undead, doom, random action, shield of faith;
2nd—aid, bull’s strength, darkness, desperate knowledge, endureance, hold person, resist elements, spiritual weapon; 3rd—beacon curse, blindness/deafness, deeper darkness, dispel magic, invisibility purge, magic circle against good, protection from elements; 4th—cure critical wounds, divine power, freedom of movement, poison, spell immunity, unblinking eyes; 5th—circle of doom, flame strike, insect plague, slay living beings; 6th—blade barrier, create undead, etheralness, greater dispelling, 7th—control undead*, deanimation, repulsion.

*Domain spell. Domains: Evil (cast evil spells at +1 caster level), Undead (free Extra Turning feat).

Possessions: Ring of protection +2.

Arachnoid Gray Rander: CR 11; Huge aberration; HD 20d8+180; hp 267; Init +3; Spd 30 ft.; climb 20 ft.; AC 24, touch 9, flat-footed 23; Atk +23 melee (2d8+10 plus poison, bite) and +18 melee (1d8+7, 6 claws); Face/Reach 10 ft. by 10 ft./15 ft.; SA improved grab, poison, rend 3d8+15; SQ immunities, scent; AL NE; SV Fort +21, Ref +15, Will +7; Str 31, Dex 32, Con 28, Int —, Wis 21, Cha 8. Skills: Climb +18, Hide +8, Jump +16, Spot +14.
Appendix 2

Improved Grab (Ex): If an arachnoid gray render hits a Large or smaller opponent with a bite attack, it deals normal damage and attempts to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity (grapple bonus +3). If it gets a hold, it can rend on the same round. Thereafter, the creature has the option to conduct the grapple normally, or simply use its jaws to hold the opponent (–20 penalty on grapple check, but the gray render is not considered grappled). In either case, each successful grapple check it makes during successive rounds automatically deals damage from its bite attack.

Poison (Ex): An arachnoid gray render delivers its poison (Fortitude save DC 17) with each successful bite attack. The initial and secondary damage are the same (2d8 points of Dexterity damage).

Rend (Ex): An arachnoid gray render that gets a hold latches onto the opponent's body and tears the flesh. This attack automatically deals 3d8+15 points of damage.

Immunities: Arachnoid gray renders are immune to all mind-affecting effects (charms, compulsions, phantasms, patterns, and morale effects).

Skills: Arachnoid gray renders receive a +4 racial bonus to Hide checks, a +6 racial bonus to Jump checks, and a +10 racial bonus to Spot checks.

Laerekh, Chief Necromancer: Male drow Sor14/CR 15; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 14d4+14; hp 75; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 20, touch 14, flat-footed 18; Atk +7/+2 melee (1d4+19–20), dagger of venom; SQ drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), familiar benefits; SR 25; AL NE; SV Fort +7, Ref +6, Will +9; Str 8, Dex 14, Con 12, Int 15, Wis 10, Cha 22.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +18, Knowledge (arcana) +19, Knowledge (religion) +6, Listen +2, Scry +11, Search +4, Spellcraft +19, Spot +2; Greater Spell Focus (Necromancy), Improved Familiar, Spell Focus (Necromancy), Spell Penetration, Spellcasting Prodigy.

Familiar Benefits: Laerekh has a quasit familiar, who grants him Alertness when he is within 5 ft. Laerekh has an empathic link with the quasit to a distance of 1 mile. He can share spells with it, speak with it, and scry on it. In addition, the familiar can deliver touch spells for Laerekh.

Sorcerer Spells Known (6/8/8/7/6/4): save DC 17 + spell level, or 21 + spell level for Necromancy spells: 0—daze, detect magic, flare, read magic; 1st—charm, detect secret area, detect thoughts, ghost sound; 2nd—charm person, disintegrate, minor illusion; 3rd—dispel magic, greater dispel magic, invisibility; 4th—invisibility, poltergeist; 5th—astral projection, cause fear, dispel magic, dimension door; 6th—charm object, contact other plane, greater invisibility; 7th—etherealNESS. * Spell described in Magic of Faerûn: substitute magic missile (1st) and resist elements (2nd) if that book is not available.

Spells Prepared (4/6/6/5/4/4/4/1/1; save DC 17 + spell level, or 19 + spell level for Necromancy and Transmutation spells):

0— daze, detect magic, mage hand, read magic; 1st—cause fear, charm touch, magic missile, ray of enfeeblement, shield, true strike; 2nd—blindness/deafness, ghoul touch, Melf’s acid arrow, scare, spectral hand, web; 3rd—dispel magic, haste, lightning bolt, slow, vampiric touch; 4th—enervation, fear, ice storm, scrying, wall of fire; 5th—cone of cold, bold monster, quickened magic missile, nightmare; 6th—circle of death, disintegrate, greater dispelling, true seeing; 7th—finger of death; 8th—barricade writing.

Arcane Reach: Duneth can use touch spells on targets up to 30 feet away. If the spell requires a touch attack, he must make a ranged touch attack.

Spell Power: Duneth adds +1 to the save DCs and to caster level checks for spells he casts.

Spellbook: 0—arcane mark, dancing lights, daze, detect magic, detect poison, dispel undead, flare, ghost sound, light, mage hand, bending, open/close, prestidigitation, ray of frost, read magic, resistance; 1st—cause fear, charm person, charm touch, color spray, comprehend languages, endure elements, expedient retreat, feather fall, magic armor, magic missile, ray of enfeeblement, shield, true strike; 2nd—blindness/deafness, darkness, ghoul touch, invisibility, knock, levitate, Melf’s acid arrow, resist elements, scare, spectral hand, Tasha’s hideous laughter, web; 3rd—dispel magic, fireball, fly, haste, hold person, light, lightning bolt, protection from elements, slow, slinking cloud, suggestion, vampiric touch; 4th—bestow curse, contagion, dimension door, enervation, fear, ice storm, improved invisibility, phantasmal killer, scrying, stonekin, wall of fire; 5th—animate dead, cloudkill, cone of cold, control other plane, dominate person, bold monster, magic jar, nightmare, passwall, permanency, teleport, wall of force; 6th—circle of death, contingency, dispel magic, eye haste, flesh to stone, globe of invulnerability, greater dispelling, Otiluke’s freezing sphere, planar binding, true seeing; 7th—control undead, delayed blast fireball, finger of death, foreknowledge, greater scrying, limited wish, plane shift, prismatic spray, teleport without error; 8th—claw, barricade writing, power word, blindness, protection from spells, symbol.

Silverhair ability: See Silverhair Template in Appendix 1.

Ice: Female old white dragon dracolich; CR 17; Huge undead (cold); HD 2d12+2; hp 161; Init +4; Spd 60 ft., fly 200 ft. (poor), swim 60 ft., burrow 30 ft.; AC 33, touch 8, flat-footed 33; Atk +31 melee (2d8+9 plus 1d6 cold plus paralysis, bite) and +26 melee (2d6+4 plus 1d6 cold plus paralysis, 2 claws) and +26 melee (1d8+4 plus 1d6 cold plus paralysis, 2 wings) and +26 melee (2d6+13 plus 1d6 cold plus paralysis, tail slap); SA breath weapon (10 ft. by 20 ft. area, perforating cold and control undead, freezing fog, frightful presence, paralyzing gaze, paralyzing touch, spell-like abilities, spells; SQ blindfight, cold subtype, DR 10/*1/cold, dragon traits, keen senses, ice walking, invisibility, immunity, invulnerability, SR 24, undead traits; AL CE; SV Fort +14, Ref +12, Will +7; Str 29, Dex 10, Con —, Int 12, Wis 13, Cha 14.

Skills and Feats: Bluff +26, Concentration +26, Diplomacy +26, Jump +33, Listen +25, Search +25, Spellcraft +25, Spot +25; Alertness, Cleave, Improved Initiative, Power Attack, Sunder, Weapon Focus (bite), Weapon Focus (claw).

Breath Weapon (Su): Ice’s breath weapon is a cone of cold. Every creature within the 70-foot cone takes 8d6 points of cold damage, or half that amount with a successful Reflex save (DC 24). If the creature makes a successful Reflex save, its damage is reduced by 50%.

Control Undead (Sp): Once every three days, Ice can use control undead (caster level 17th). She cannot cast other spells while this ability is in effect.

Frightful Presence (Ex): Whenever Ice attacks, charges, or flies overhead, every creature within a radius of 240 feet with fewer than 24 HD must make a successful Will save (DC 24) or become shaken for 4d6 rounds (or panicked if it has 4 or fewer HD). Creatures that successfully save are immune to Ice’s frightful presence for one day.

Freezing Fog (Sp): Three times per day, Ice can produce an effect similar to that of a solid fog spell, except that it also causes a rime of slippery ice to form on any surface the fog touches, creating the effect of a grease spell. Ice is immune to the grease effect because of her icewalking ability.

Paralyzing Gaze (Su): Anyone within 40 feet of Ice who fails a Fortitude save (DC 24) is paralyzed for 2d6 rounds. If the saving throw is successful, the creature is forever immune to Ice’s gaze.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): A creature struck by any of Ice’s melee attacks must make a Fortitude save (DC 24) or be paralyzed for 2d6 rounds. A successful saving throw against this effect does not confer any immunity against subsequent attacks.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—fog cloud, gust of wind. Caster level 8; save DC 12 + spell level.

Blindsight (Ex): Ice can ascertain creatures by nonvisual means with a range of 240 feet.

Dragon Traits: Ice is immune to sleep and paralysis effects. She has darkvision 60 ft. and low-light vision.

Cold Subtype: Ice is immune to cold but takes double damage from fire, except on a successful save.

Known Senses (Ex): Ice sees four times as well as a human in low-light conditions and twice as well in normal light. She also has darkvision with a range of 800 feet.

Icewalking (Ex): This ability works like the spider climb spell, but the surface Ice climbs must be icy. It is always in effect.

Immunities: In addition to her dragon and undead immunities, Ice is immune to polymorph and electricity effects. Like a skeleton, she takes only half damage from piercing or slashing weapons.

Invulnerability: If Ice is slain, her spirit immediately returns to her phylactery. See the Forgotten Realms Campaign Setting for the details of this ability.

Undead Traits: Ice is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. She is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. Ice cannot be raised, and resurrection works only if she is willing. She has darkvision (60-foot range).

Khumarr: Male drow Ftr7/Blk4 of Kiaransalee/Chm5 of Kiaransalee; CR 17; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 4d10+7 plus 4d10+4 plus 4d10+5; hp 126; Init +6; Spd 20 ft.; AC 23, touch 11, flat-footed 22; Atk +23/+18/+13/+8/melee (2d6+10/17–20, +2 unholy greatsword), +11/+6/+1/+0 ranged (1d10+3) SA breath weapon (100 feet wide, 20 feet high, +1 cold); control undead, distancing, frightful presence, paralyzing gaze, paralyzing touch, spell-like abilities, spells; SQ blindfight, cold subtype, DR 10/*2/cold; AL CE; SV Fort +17, Ref +12, Will +5; Str 19, Dex 15, Con 12, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Climb +5, Concentration +4, Hide +2, Intimidate +7, Knowledge (religion) +8, Listen +2, Search +2, Spot +7; Blind-Fight, Cleave, Combat Reflexes, Great Cleave, Improved Bull Rush, Improved Critical (greatsword), Improved Initiative, Power Attack, Sunder, Weapon Focus (dagger), Weapon Focus (greatsword), Weapon Specialization (greatsword).

Command Undead (Su): Khumarr can command undead as a 3rd-level cleric.

Smite Good (Su): Once per day, Khumarr gains a +3 bonus on a single attack roll and a +4 bonus on the corresponding damage roll against a good foe.

Smite Infidel (Su): Once per day, Khumarr gains a +3 bonus on a single attack roll and a +5 bonus on the corresponding damage roll against an opponent who does not worship Kiaransalee.

Aura of Despair (Su): Khumarr radiates a malign aura that causes every enemy within 10 feet of him to suffer a —2 morale penalty on all saving throws.

Detect Good (Sp): At will, Khumarr can use detect good.

Divine Wrath (Su): Once per day as a free action, Khumarr gains a +3 bonus on attack rolls, damage, and saving throws for 3 rounds. During this time, he also has DR 5/—.

Poison Use: Khumarr has no risk of accidentally poisoning himself when using poisons.

Sacred Defense: Khumarr gains a +2 bonus on saving throws against divine spells, as well as the spell-like and supernatural abilities of outsiders.

Possessions: Demon armor, undeath's greatsword, gauntlets of agery power.

Cabrath Nelinderra: Female drow Clr15 of Kiaransalee; CR 16; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 15d8+15; hp 81; Init +0; Spd 20 ft.; AC 23, touch 12, flat-footed 23; Atk +11/+6/+1 melee touch (1d6 plus 1 temporary); SA robeks undead 10/day; SQ drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), SR 26; AL CE; SV Fort +14, Ref +11, Will +23; Str 10, Dex 10, Con 12, Int 17, Wis 18, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +19, Knowledge (arcana) +20, Knowledge (religion) +20, Listen +6, Search +4, Spellcraft +20, Spot +6, Wilderness Lore +6; Extra Turning, Greater Spell Focus (Necromancy), Greater Spell Penetration, Lighting Reflexes, Spell Focus (Necromancy), Spell Penetration, Survivor.

Spells Prepared (6/7/7/7/5/5/4/3; save DC 13 + spell level): 0—detect magic, guidance, mending, purify food and drink, read magic, resistance; 1st—clue of dark power*, diviner's favor, doom, endure elements, entropic shield, mountain, see through, speak with animals, speak with plants, true seeing; 2nd—blood, command, shadow shield, know directions, magic missile, shield of faith, strong will; 3rd—creatures of the night, dimension door, darkness, disintegrate, entropic shield, find trap, groupstitution, healing word, invisibility, magic missile, mind blank, invisibility purged, magic aura, prayer, resist energy, resistance, dimensional蜇nd, slept drain, silent image, true seeing, unsee; 4th—air walk, charm person, cure critical wounds, divine power, greater magic weapon, poison; 5th—ethereal jaunt, flame strike, fly living, spider form*, true seeing; 6th—channels, dispel magic, greater dispelling*, harm, heal; 7th—destruction, greater scrying, word of chaos; 8th—fire storm.

*Domain spell. Domains: Chaos (cast chaos spells at +1 caster level), Drow (free Lightning Reflexes feat).

Possessions: Spectral dagger (described in Magic of Faerûn: acts as chill touch spell, DC 12), +4 light fortification half-plate armor, ring of protection +2, greater fire elemental gem (see Appendix 1).

Maas, Vampire Assassin: Male drow vampire Mnk4/Rog4/Asn5; CR 16; Medium-size undead; HD 1d8+12; hp 81; Init +11; Spd 40 ft.; AC 33, touch 23, flat-footed 33; Atk +12/+7 melee or +10/+6/+5 melee flurry of blows (1d8+3 plus energy drain, unarmed strike); SA death attack (DC 18), flurry of blows, sneak attack +6, stunning attack (4/day, DC 16); SQ +2 save against poison, DR 15/+1, drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), evasion, fast movement, poison use, slow fall (20 ft.), still mind, traps, turn resistance +4, uncanny dodge (Dex bonus to AC, can't be flanked); SR 24; AL LE; SV Fort +6, Ref +21, Will +10; Str 16, Dex 24, Con —, Int 16, Wis 18, Cha 19.

Skills and Feats: Balance +25, Bluff +16, Climb +19, Disguise +8, Escape Artist +16, Hide +31, Jump +21, Listen +27, Move Silently +31, Search +13, Sense Motive +12, Spot +20, Tumble +27, Alertness, Blind-Fight, Combat Reflexes, Deflect Arrows, Dodge, Expertise, Improved Disarm, Improved Initiative, Lightning Reflexes, Mobility, Spring Attack.

Vampire Attacks: The Will save DCs for Maas's dominate and energy drain abilities are both 20.

Turn Resistance (Ex): When resolving a turn, rebuke, command, or bolster attempt, Maas is treated as a 15-HD creature.

Poison Use: Maas has no risk of accidentally poisoning himself when using poisons.

Spells Prepared (2/2/1; save DC 13 + spell level): 1st—change self, obscuring mist; 2nd—darkness, pass without trace; 3rd—nondetection.

Possessions: Bracers of armor +4, ring of protection +2, amulet of natural armor +2, gloves of dexterity +2.

Wyrwruth, Ambassador of Shade: Male human shade Enc6/Sha10; CR 18; Medium-size outsider; HD 16d4+32; hp 71; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17, touch 10, flat-footed 17; Atk +8/+3 melee (1d6+3 plus energy drain, unarmed strike); SA death attack (DC 18), once per day, Khumarr gains a +3 bonus on saving throws for 5 rounds. During this time, he also has DR 5/—.

Poison Use: Khumarr has no risk of accidentally poisoning himself when using poisons.

Spells Prepared (2/2/1; save DC 13 + spell level): 1st—change self, obscuring mist; 2nd—darkness, pass without trace; 3rd—nondetection.

Wyrwruth has darkvision with a 60-foot range. He can create darkness within a 100-ft. radius of himself.

Greater Shield of Shadows (Su): As a standard action, Wyrwruth can create a mobile disk of purple-black force that duplicates the effect of a shield spell and provides him with three-quarter concealment (30% miss chance) against attacks originating from the other side of it. It also grants him SR 22 against such attacks. The shield of shadows lasts for 10 rounds per day.

Invisibility (Sp): Wyrwruth can use invisibility once per round (caster level 16th).

Shadesight (Sp): Wyrwruth has darkvision with a 60-foot range. He can see normally through any darkness effects, but not through fog, invisibility, obscurement, and so forth.

Shadow Defense: Wyrruth gains +3 bonus on his saving throws against Enchantment, Illusion, and Necromancy spells, as well as spells with the darkness descriptor.

Shadow Double (Su): Once per day, Wyrruth can use a standard action to create a double of himself woven from shadowstuff that lasts for 16 rounds. The double has Wyrruth's ability scores, base attack bonus, base saves, and hit points as Wyrruth, but no equipment.

Shadow Image (Sp): This ability functions like a mirror image spell (caster level 16th), except that it creates 1d4+5 figments of him. Wyrruth can use this ability three times per day.

Shadow Stride (Sp): Wyrruth can vanish from his current location and reappear in any shadowy area within 300 feet of as often as once every 2 rounds. Using this ability is a move-equivalent action, so he can use another ability, cast a spell, or attack in the same round.

Shadow Travel (Sp): Once per day, Wyrruth can use either teleport without error to reach a shadowy locale on the same world as the shade on plane shift to access the Plane of Shadow.

Shadow Walk (Sp): Wyrruth can use shadow walk once per day.

The Undying Temple:

CR 20; Colossal construct; Init +3; Spd 20 ft. (can't run); AC 31, touch 6, flat-footed 31; Atk +53 meele (4d6+15, 2 slams); Face/Reach 10 ft. by 10 ft.; SA breath weapon; SQ—construct traits, DR 100, magic immunity, rust vulnerability, AL N; SV Fort +18, Ref +16, Will +18; Str +4, Dex +5, Con +; Int —, Wis 11, Cha 1.

Breath Weapon (Su): On the first or second round of combat as a free action, the golem can breathe a cloud of poisonous gas in a 10-foot cube directly in front of it. The cloud lasts for 1 round. After if has breathed, the golem must wait 1d4+1 rounds before doing so again. The cloud is poisonous to all within it (Fortitude save DC 37). The initial damage is 1d4+1 points of Constitution damage; the secondary damage is death.

Construct Traits: A mighty iron golem is immune to mind-affecting effects, poison, sleep, paralysis, stunning, disease, death effects, necromantic effects, and any effect that requires a Fortitude save unless it also works on objects. The creature is not subject to critical hits, subdual damage, ability damage, ability drain, energy drain, or death from massive damage. It cannot heal itself but can be healed through repair. It cannot be raised or resurrected. A mighty iron golem has darkvision (60-foot range).

Magic Immunity (Ex): A mighty iron golem is immune to all spells, spell-like abilities, and supernatural effects, except as follows. An electricity effect slows it (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw. A fire effect breaks any slow effect on the golem and cures 1 point of damage for each 3 points of damage it would otherwise deal. (The wall of fire deals 2d6+1 points of damage, so each round the golem stands within the wall it heals 1/3 of that amount.) attacking an object found in Chapter 8 of the Player’s Handbook. It is inanimate and immobile, so hitting it is trivially easy. It does not have a hit point total. Individual sections of wall and other features of the building have hit points, but all of these sections must be destroyed in order to destroy the temple. It takes half damage from ranged weapons (except for siege engines and the like) and from acid, fire, and lightning attacks, and it takes one-quarter damage from cold. It fails all Reflex saves. It is considered to be a magical item (caster level 20th).

Telepathy (Su): The temple can communicate telepathically with any creature within 100 feet that has a language.

Paelinn, Divine Seeker: Female drow Rog11/Skr5 of Kiaransalee; CR 17; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 11d6+11 plus 5d6+5; hp 74; Init +6; Spd 30 ft.; AC 25, touch 17, flat-footed 25; Atk +19/+14/+9 melee (1d6+2/18–20, +2 wounding rapiers), or +17 ranged (1d4+4 plus poison, hand crossbow); SA sneak attack +8d6; SQ divine perseverance, drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), evasion, improved evasion, speak with spiders, uncanny dodge ( Dex bonus to AC, can’t be flanked, +1 against traps); AL CE; SV Fort +5, Ref +17, Will +5; Str 10, Dex 22, Con 16, Int 16, Wis 16, Cha 10.

Sacred Defense: Paelinn gains a +2 bonus on saving throws against divine spells, as well as the spell-like and supernatural abilities of outsiders.

Sanctuary (Sp): Paelinn can use sanctuary once per day.

Locate Creature (Sp): Paelinn can use locate creature once per day.

Obscure Object (Sp): Paelinn can use obscure object once per day.

Divine Perseverance: Once per day when brought to –1 or fewer hit points, Paelinn is automatically cured of 1d8+5 points of damage.

Immunities (Ex): Flenser is immune to poison and sleep-inducing spells and effects.

Possessions: +2 full plate, greater death spear (8 charges, see Appendix 1), +2 mighty composite longbow (+3 Str bonus), +20 arrows.

Irae T'sarran: Female drow Chr17/Hie3 of Kiaransalee; CR 21; Medium-size humanoid (elf); HD 17d8+17 (Chr) plus 3d8+3 (Hie); hp 114; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 20; touch 10, flat-footed 20; Atk +14/+9/+4 melee (1d4+1 plus 1d6 negative energy/19–20, claw of the revenancer); SA blast infidel, divine reach, rebuke undead 10/day, spell power +2; SQ drow traits (see Drow NPCs sidebar, page 132), SR 31; AL CE; SV Fort +14, Ref +8, Will +19; Str 10, Dex 10, Con 12, Int 14, Wis 19, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +24, Knowledge (arcana) +19, Knowledge (religion) +25, Listen +6, Scent +12, Search +4, Spellcraft +27, Spot +6; Craft Wondrous Item, Extra Turning, Greater Spell Focus (Necromancy), Heighten Spell, Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes, Spell Focus (Necromancy), Spell Penetration.

Blast Infidel: Any spell using negative energy that Irae casts on an opponent who does not warship Kiaransalee functions as if under the effect of the Maximize Spell feat, without using a higher-level spell slot. Undead affected by this ability heal the appropriate amount of damage, regardless of their patron.

Divine Reach: Irae can use touch spells on targets up to 30 feet away. If the spell requires a melee touch attack, she must make a ranged touch attack instead.

Spell Power: Irae adds +2 to the save DCs and to caster level checks for her divine spells.

Spells Prepared (6/7/7/7/5/5/4/3/2): save DC 16 + spell level, or 20 + spell level for Necromancy spells; 0—create water, detect magic, guidance, mending, purify food and drink, read magic; 1st—banish, cause fear, command, deathwatch, detect undead, divine favor, dominate; 2nd—bull's strength, cowardly mummies, death knell, endure_rai, hold person, silence, stone images; 3rd—animate dead, darkfire, death, darkness, dispel magic, protection from elements (2), warping light; 4th—care critical wounds, death ward, dimensional anchor, divine power, fire shield, poison, spell immunity; 5th—battlefield, circle of dancing, commune, flame strike, slay living; 6th—banishment, etherealness, greater dispelling, harm, heal, 7th—destruction, greater searing, spell turning, summon monster VII; 8th—disern location, fire storm, unholy aura; 9th—energy drain, implosion.

*Domain spell. Domains: Retribution (strike of vengeance 1/day), Undeath (Extra Turning as a bonus feat).

† Spell described in Magic of Faerûn: substitute blindness/deafness (3rd) and insect plague (7th) if that book is not available.

Possessions: Claw of the revenancer, eyes of the spider, rod of the twisted weave (34 levels remaining), masterwork dagger, plain mithral ring (Umaerh's phylactery). The new magic items are described in Appendix 1.

Irae T'sarran's Power-Up Suite: On a daily basis, Irae T'sarran increases her Strength and Constitution scores with bull's strength and endurance. Her increased scores are not included in the statistics above, but they are reflected in the powered-up statistics below.

Irae T'sarran prepares for a climactic battle by casting the following spells, one per round, in this order: (200 minute duration); spell turning, protection from elements (fire), death ward, deathwatch, (20 round duration) unholy aura, fire shield (warm shield), divine power, and (10 round duration) divine favor. If she can time it right—in other words, if the temple remains able to warn her of the characters' approach—she casts summon monster VII (summoning a bebilith) immediately before the characters enter the Greater Temple (U29).

Powered-Up Statistics: HD 17d8+51 plus 3d8+9; hp 171 plus 20 temporary hp (endurance and divine favor); AC 24, touch 14, flat-footed 24 (unholy aura); Atk +31/+26/+21/+16 melee (1d4+11 plus 1d6 negative energy/19–20, claw of the revenancer [divine favor gives +11 to attack and +4 to damage, divine power gives +6 to attack and damage]); SQ as above, plus spell turning, immune to fire until spell absorbs 240 points of fire damage (protection from elements), immune to death spells and effects (death ward), immune to possession and mental influence (unholy aura), good creatures striking her take 1d6 temporary Strength damage (Fort DC 24 negates; unholy aura), creatures striking her take 1d6+20 fire damage (SR negates; fire shield), half damage from cold attacks (none on a successful save; fire shield), SV Fort +20, Ref +12, Will +23 (endurance increases Fort, unholy aura adds +4 resistance), Str 18 (13 without divine favor but with bull's strength), Con 16 (endurance).
In the lightless realm of the drow, betrayal has always been as natural as breathing, and the only certainty is death.

What could possibly upset a society wrought of pure evil and utter chaos? The ebon-skinned servants of Lolth are about to find out.

THE FATE OF FAURON LIES IN SHADOWY DARKNESS

Daggerdale is reeling from a sudden series of murderous drow raids. As a grave threat to the entire surface world develops in the war-torn dark elf city of Maerimydra, intrepid heroes must discover its source and destroy it, if they can. Designed to take 10th-level characters as far as 18th level, City of the Spider Queen draws the heroes into the deepest reaches of the Underdark and plunges them into an epic adventure with dire consequences.

* 13 new monsters  * 13 new magic items  * 16-page full-color map booklet

To use this accessory, you also need the FORGOTTEN REALMS Campaign Setting, the Player’s Handbook, the DUNGEON MASTER’S Guide, and the Monster Manual.
