Director,

Per my latest assignment, I’ve compiled a dossier on who appear to be the major players on the station Deep Space 9. With war on the horizon we need to be sure that we have accurate information. We can trust our Dominion allies only so much; it’s best to compile our own intelligence. While most of these individuals are Starfleet officers, some are civilians with significant pull in foreign governments, including the Cardassians, Ferengi and Bajorans. That’s not to mention that Lieutenant Commander Worf is essentially the adopted son of Klingon General Martok.

I spent weeks on the station, disguised as a human. I’ve got to say that I’m relieved to be back in my own skin; I don’t think that I’ll ever forget the smell of so many mammals all in one place. Each of these people, except maybe Quark and Garak, are working against our interests. The Ferengi we might be able to use, but Garak is a problem for reasons more sensitive than I can divulge here.

During my time on the station I confirmed that all the information in the Dominion’s dossiers was accurate. By this point I feel that I know these officers better than they know themselves. We could move against them with strategic assassinations, but at this point I feel that we need this crew in place. We’ve got extensive psychological workups on them, and it’ll be easy to manipulate their actions. If we kill Sisko we risk him getting replaced with an unknown quantity.

For Cardassia,
Agent Viper
Sisko is a walking paradox. A man whose faith lies only in himself and his staff, but a man also revered as a prophet of the Bajoran religion. A backwater administrator who in the space of a single day became the point of first contact with all societies from the Gamma Quadrant. He can spend weeks plotting his next move, but when he acts it’s as furious as a full-grown taspar beast. The Federation’s defense against our upcoming operation will rest on Sisko’s shoulders. We must be ready to strike against him or his family.

A consummate soldier, Kira Nerys was a resistance fighter against the Cardassian Occupation from childhood. She carried out all sorts of black operations and was given a senior officer’s position in the Bajoran Militia for her service, but it’s obvious that it wasn’t her people skills that got her the job. As the station’s executive she consistently holds the staff to the same high standards that she sets for herself. Kira’s a determined warrior, and if there’s one thing we can count on from her, it’s that she’ll go to her grave before she fails her people. Perhaps we can use her desire to protect Bajor from further atrocities as leverage against her?

TRAITS: Bajoran

VALUES:
- True Independence for Bajor
- Never Give Less than What I’m Capable of Giving

An orphaned Klingon noble, Worf was raised by human parents before attending Starfleet Academy. He’s had a tumultuous relationship with his people. Worf was originally a noble of the House of Mogh, a house that was unjustly dishonored, reinstated, and finally dissolved by Chancellor Gowron. Worf is now a member of the rising House of Martok, he’s a brilliant strategist whose served Sisko well since transferring to Deep Space 9 from the U.S.S. Enterprise. His biggest weakness is his devotion to his wife, Jadzia Dax. If we can threaten her with harm, we might be able to turn the Klingon into an asset.

The chief is everything that a commanding officer wants from their enlisted officers. He's loyal, obeys orders without question, and makes sure that the other officers do the same. More than that he's among Starfleet's most competent technicians, able to fix almost any system with minimal time and insufficient parts. O'Brien's a veteran of many battles in the last war with our people and we've tried to capture him before, and our efforts failed. The chief, as his friends call him, seems to want nothing more than a peaceful place for his family to live. For someone with Cardassian blood on his hands, that goal is impossible. O'Brien has an annoying tendency to escape plots against him. We're not going to fail again.

The legacy of Curzon Dax, the man who helped negotiate peace with the Klingons at Khitomer, now resides within a cheeky and impulsive young science officer. Jadzia Dax is eager to see all that the cosmos has to offer, even though she has over 400 years’ worth of memories doing exactly that. Don’t let her comparative youth fool you, this officer has enough experience to teach almost every class at Starfleet Academy. She’s Sisko’s most trusted confidant. Given the new Gamma Quadrant crisis he’s likely to need her expertise in the months and years ahead. We could likely do a great deal of damage to Sisko’s efforts against the Dominion if we were to remove her from the game.

Julian Bashir was an unremarkable child who almost overnight became an honored student who displayed an aptitude for brilliant thinking. Odo actually served as a low-level bureaucrat in our government during the Bajoran Occupation. He used his shapeshifting abilities to outstanding effect as a law enforcement officer. He serves Starfleet and the Bajorans now, which makes him an enemy agent. We have to be careful in how we deal with him, because he’s a member of the Founder’s species. They want their “lost child” back, which means that no matter what actions he takes against us, we can’t retaliate in kind.

TALENTS:
- Morphogenic Matrix: You may spend 1 Momentum as a Minor Action once per Turn to assume a different form, gaining an additional Trait to reflect whatever form you have chosen, though you cannot yet mimic an individual. You must return to a liquid state for a few hours of rest, every sixteen hours. - Cautious (Security): Whenever you attempt a Task with Security, and you buy one or more d20s by spending Momentum, you may re-roll a single d20.

RESISTANCE: 0

ATTACKS:
- Unarmed Strike (Melee, 6, Knockdown, Vicious 1, Size 1H, Non-lethal)

EQUIPMENT: Combadge

- Close Protection: When you make a successful attack, you may spend one Momentum to protect a single ally within Close range. The next attack against that ally before the start of your next turn increases in Difficulty by 1.
- Mean Right Hook: Your Unarmed Strike attack gains the Vicious 1 Damage Effect.
A fluidic, shapeshifting species from the Gamma Quadrant, Changelings are typically reclusive, elusive beings, who try to avoid contact with other species, referred to by Changelings as “monoforms” or “solids”. Most Changelings are collectively the Founders of the Dominion, but Changelings encountered beyond the Dominion are often from “The Hundred”, a group of infants sent out to learn about the galaxy before being compelled to return home. The Founders collectively regard themselves as The Great Link, a fluid collective that appears more like an ocean than a society, where the distinctions between individuals disappear.

EXAMPLE VALUE: Solids Fear What They Don’t Understand, and They Don’t Understand Me

- ATTRIBUTES: +1 Control, +1 Fitness, +1 Insight

- Trait: Changeling. A Changeling is naturally a gelatinous orange-brown fluid, which can adopt the form and structure of any solid object, including other living creatures and diffuse substances like fog. While they cannot become energy, a Changeling’s ability to assume other forms is limited more by skill and experience than by physical capacity: it is theorized that they transfer mass to and from subspace in order to change size and density. Many Changelings find themselves persecuted by “solids” for their shapeshifting ability, and often crave a sense of order and justice in the universe, with a rigid attitude at odds with their fluid forms.

- Talents: The character receives access to the following talents. All Changeling characters must take the Morphogenic Matrix talent during character creation.

Morphogenic Matrix

Requirement: Changeling.

This Talent is mandatory and must be selected by a Changeling character during character creation. The character may spend 1 Momentum as a Minor Action once per Turn to assume a different form, gaining an additional Trait to reflect whatever form they have chosen, though they cannot yet mimic an individual, and they must return to a liquid state for a few hours of rest every sixteen hours. While in an alternate form, it is next to impossible (Difficulty 5) to discern the Changeling’s true nature, without separating some part of the Changeling’s substance. The character also has a Resistance of 4.

Morphogenic Mastery

Requirement: Changeling.

The Changeling may, when assuming an alternate form, assume the form of a specific individual, mimicking their appearance and personality sufficiently that even close friends may be unable to discern the truth. Further, the Changeling no longer needs to revert to a liquid state in order to rest.
If there’s something that you want to have or to have done on Deep Space 9, you can get it through Quark. This slippery Ferengi merchant has contacts among the major criminal syndicates in the area, even if he isn’t officially a member of any. The Bajorans put up with him as thanks for some gun running he did during the occupation, and Sisko claims to let him stay as a gesture of goodwill to the alien population. Once we determine the Ferengi’s price, I’m confident that we can buy what passes for loyalty among his people.

TRAITS: Ferengi

TALENTS:
- Defuse the Tension: Whenever you attempt a Task to persuade someone not to resort to violence, you may add one bonus d20 to your dice pool.
- Greed Is Eternal: When engaged in negotiations that have the potential for you to profit financially, you may reroll a single d20.

DETERMINATION: (Start with 1) □□□

ATTACKS:

Ferengi are short, unimposing beings, noted more as merchants than traders than as warriors, scientists, or engineers. Their culture promotes the acquisition of material wealth, and their society is extremely capitalistic, with most routine activities accompanied by the exchange of a precious, non-replicable substance called latinum (a room-temperature liquid metal, often stored within gold “slips,” “bricks,” or “bars.”) Ferengi discriminate between their genders considerably, with female Ferengi not being permitted to own property or wear clothing; enterprising young female Ferengi invariably find a way around these restrictions.

Example Value: 18th Rule of Acquisition – A Ferengi Without Profit is No Ferengi at All

- Attributes: +1 Control, +1 Insight, +1 Presence

- Trait: Ferengi. Ferengi physiology does not lend itself to physical activity, nor does their culture value such hardship, though they have a resistance to many common diseases. Ferengi have exceptional hearing, and highly-sensitive ears, though this also means that intense sounds (and physical force applied to the ears) can inflict debilitating pain. Their unusual brain structure means that telepaths cannot read Ferengi minds. Culturally, Ferengi are acquisitive, regarding the accumulation of wealth as the highest virtue, and while this has given them a reputation as cunning negotiators, they are also often seen as duplicitous and manipulative as well.

- Talents: The character receives access to the following talents:

Greed Is Eternal

Requirement: Ferengi, or Gamemaster permission.

As guided by the Rules of Acquisition, a proper Ferengi seeks profit in every endeavor. When engaged in negotiations – including Social Conflict – that have the potential for the Ferengi to profit financially, they may add 1 point to Threat in order to re-roll their dice pool.

Never Place Friendship Above Profit

Requirement: Ferengi, or Gamemaster permission.

Ferengi accept and tolerate self-serving behavior as a natural part of business. When the character assists someone else – including using the Direct Task or other methods of assistance – and one or more Complications occurs, the character may add 1 to Threat to avoid suffering any effect from those Complications personally.
Plain, simple Garak. I know that this one is personal, director. He was one of our agents for years and managed to pull off several assassinations that others considered impossible. He’s out now, and he’s working as a tailor. There’s evidence that Sisko and the other Starfleet crew use his talents from time to time and I’ve seen him in person, and it seems that he regrets some of his previous life. We’ve tried to kill him in the past, and I think that’s a mistake. It’s better to let him live with the pain.

- Interrogation: When you succeed at a Task to get someone to reveal information in a social conflict, you gain one bonus Momentum, which can only be spent on the Obtain Information Spend.
- Cautious (Security): Whenever you attempt a Task using Security, and you buy one or more d20s by spending Momentum, you may re-roll a single d20.

It still riles to hear the Bajorans and Federation types call this station Deep Space 9 instead of Terok Nor. It was originally nothing more than a mining base, insignificant save for the massive quantities of ore that it processed for building up the Cardassian fleet.

Once Bajor was stripped of anything useful, we left. We thought that since we didn’t need it anymore, then giving up Bajor would placate Starfleet at the end of our last war with them. And then they had to go and discover the wormhole.

In just one day the station went from a provincial backwater to the most important base in the quadrant. It sits at the confluence of Cardassian, Federation and Dominion space, making it exceptionally important for trade, diplomacy and military operations.

If we want to have any sort of chance at winning this war, controlling both ends of the wormhole is paramount. We need to retake the station. It relied on our mighty Galor-class warships for defense before we left. Sisko’s made extensive modifications to its weapons and shield grid, and now the station is at least a match for a Klingon flotilla. War is coming. Terok Nor will soon be ours again, then Bajor and the Federation will follow.

DOCKING CAPACITY: 18 vessels, each of Scale 8 or less

WEAPONS:

- Phaser Arrays (Range Medium, 15, Versatile 2, Area or Spread)
- Photon Torpedoes (Range Long, 6, High Yield)

TALENTS:

- Docking Capacity: The station has extra ports and pylons that allow it to support a greater number of docked vessels, as well as larger vessels. The starbase has 18 docking ports, and can support vessels of up to Scale 8.
- Advanced Sickbay: The station has a well-equipped infirmary, and gains the Advanced Sickbay advantage, which applies to all medicine- and biology-related Tasks performed within the Infirmary. This Advantage is lost if the station’s Computers System is disabled.
- Repair Crews: Due to having additional personnel to support repair and maintenance work, it may prioritize the repairs of up to 4 ships, rather than the normal 1.
- Sturdy Construction: When the station suffers damage, it suffers a Breach if 8 or more damage is inflicted, instead of the normal 5 or more.
- Rapid-Fire Torpedo Launcher: Whenever the crew add 3 to Threat to fire a torpedo salvo, they may re-roll a single d20 on the attack, and any number of on the damage roll.
- Firebase: The station is built to defend itself and the space around it from attack, and it is able to unleash colossal amounts of firepower. Whenever a character makes an Attack with the station, they may use the Swift Task Momentum Spend for 1 Momentum instead of the normal 2, so long as their second Task is also an Attack.
Devised in the aftermath of the Battle of Wolf 359, the Defiant class was intended to be a gunship, a dedicated combat vessel that could be deployed against grave threats to the Federation. The design – and its prototype, the U.S.S. Defiant – were shelved, and the project leader, Commander Benjamin Sisko, was reassigned. The project had faced serious flaws and design setbacks, and the threat of the Borg had not manifested again.

In 2370, at the request of Commander Sisko, the Defiant was pulled out of mothballs, and assigned to Starbase Deep Space 9, in response to the rising Dominion threat. Along with this, it was agreed that the Defiant would be equipped with a cloaking device, on loan from the Romulan Star Empire, to allow for intelligence-gathering in the Gamma Quadrant, in exchange for sharing all intelligence on the Dominion with the Romulans. Initial flaws with the design have mostly been resolved by Deep Space 9’s chief of operations, Miles O’Brien, and these adaptations have allowed Starfleet to place the Defiant class into production.

- Ablative Armor: The ship’s Resistance is increased by +2 (included)
- Quantum Torpedoes: The ship is armed with Quantum Torpedoes.
- Cloaking Device: The ship has a cloaking device, allowing it to vanish from view. Activating the device is a Control + Engineering Task with a Difficulty of 2, assisted by the ship’s Engines + Security, performed from the tactical position. This Task has a Power Requirement of 3. If successful, the vessel gains the Cloaked Trait. While Cloaked, the vessel cannot attack, nor can it be the target of an attack unless the attacker has found some way of detecting the cloaked ship. While cloaked, the vessel’s shields are down. It takes a Minor Action to decloak. Due to incompatibilities between Romulan and Federation technology, and Federation unfamiliarity with cloaking technology, any Task relating to using the Cloaking Device has +1 Complication range.
