Special Abilities
Create Spawn (Su) Any humanoid creature that is slain by a barrow wight becomes a barrow wight itself in only 1d4 rounds. Spawn so created are less powerful than typical barrow wights, and suffer a –2 penalty on all attack rolls, saving throws and skill checks, as well as –2 hp per HD. Spawn are under the command of the barrow wight that created them and remain enslaved until its death, at which point they lose their spawn penalties and become full-fledged and free-willed barrow wights. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.
Insanity Gaze (Su) insanity, 30 feet, Will DC 15 negates. The save DC is Charisma-based.
Treasure Sense (Su) A barrow wight has an eternal link to the treasure it possessed in life. They are keenly aware of the location of their treasure within a one mile radius per hit dice and can make Perception checks (in place of Survival) to track down missing treasure at any distance.

While a wight is often an undead creature created through foul necromancy, violent death or a malevolence of personality, the barrow wight is a product of material greed. When a being so corrupted by their own greed dies through a covetous action or simple neglect for their own well-being, they possess the potential to rise as a barrow wight. This potential becomes a certainty, if they are buried alongside their wealth. Rising as an undead creature they jealously protect their wealth from any who would seek to steal from them.

If the resting place of a barrow wight is disturbed or worse some of their treasure is stolen they relentlessly hunt down those that violated their privacy or property. Barrow wight attack thieves with their energy draining fists while saving their insanity gaze for those opponents who interfere.

Special Abilities

Bend Light (Ex) By shifting the make-up of its body as a standard action, a crystalline horror can refract natural light into a bright light that radiates out in a 10-foot spread. Affected creatures must succeed on a DC 16 Reflex save or be blinded for 3 rounds. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Creatures to whom sunlight is harmful or unnatural take 2d6 points of damage from the light. Undead creatures caught within the area take 3d6 points of damage, and undead particularly vulnerable to sunlight – such as vampires – take 3d8 points of damage. Creatures that can not see or perceive objects through the use of vision are unaffected by the blindness, but still suffer damage if they are vulnerable to sunlight.

Shard Spray (Ex) Five times per day crystalline horror can fire a spray of razor-sharp shards of glass from its body in a 40-foot cone. A creature in the area takes 4d6 points of damage (Reflex save DC 16 for half). The save DC is Constitution-based.

Wounding (Ex) A crystalline horror that rolls a critical with a claw attack deals an amount of bleed damage equal to its Strength modifier.

A crystalline horror is a weird, unnatural humanoid composed of crystal and glass. Sages believe it to be from one of the elemental planes, but in fact, the crystalline horror is a creature whose origins lie on the Material Plane. How it came to be remains speculation among many sages and scholars, though all agree it is in fact a living creature and not an automaton.

A crystalline horror begins combat using its shard spray before closing for melee. In close-quarters, it uses its razor sharp claws to slash an opponent. If given the opportunity, it uses its ability to bend natural light to blind its opponents. Though it has no visible sensory organs, it is known (by those who have fought them) that a crystalline horror can see and hear normally.

Special Abilities
Frightful Presence (Ex) As a standard action the devil dog may unleash a frightening howl that affects all living creatures within the listed aura. Creatures are frightened for 2d6 rounds if they fail a DC 12 Will save. A creature that saves is immune to this devil dog’s frightful presence for 24 hours. The save DC is Charisma-based.
Throat Rip (Ex) If a devil dog slays another creature with a coup de grace attack, that creature cannot be raised, but resurrection, true resurrection, or the like can restore the slain creature to life.

The wolf-like devil dog may be an interbred species of wild dog and winter wolf. A devil dog is smaller than a winter wolf but much larger than nearly any normal dog of any breed — about 5 feet long and 3 feet high at the shoulder. A devil dog is white in color, blending in almost perfectly with its snowbound environment. Thanks to their appearance, devil dogs are often mistaken for winter wolves by inexperienced travelers in icy regions. Devil dog packs have been known to stalk and attack humanoids and other creatures much larger than the pack members. They are smart enough to use their coloration to their best advantage in the hunt.

Devil dogs hunt in packs, using tactics similar to normal wild dogs and wolves: the pack circles the prey, with each dog taking its turn attacking. Devil dogs attempt to rip out the throat of any helpless opponent. Devil dogs have been known to rip apart opponents and leave their twisted remains in gruesome patterns. Some suspect that the devil dogs might be practicing a form of ritualistic magic, while other suggest that these creatures are simply marking their territory to other northern predators.

Some northern tribes of orcs and hobgoblins are known to have domesticated or at least formed an alliance with large packs of devil dogs.

DRAGONNEL
This creature looks like a great dragon, at least 20 feet long with a serpentine body, long slender wings and a pointed snout or beak that resembles that of a pteranodon. Its body is colored reddish-violet with lighter shades on its underbelly. A ridge of maroon-colored spines runs the length of its body down the center of its back. A mane of frills, white in color, rings its head.

Dragonnels are believed to be either related to dragons or an abomination of dragon and pteranodon, as they share the physical characteristics of both those monsters. Dragonnels are semi-intelligent and use this ability to their advantage when hunting or stalking prey. Dragonnels are fierce hunters, though some have been trained by evil humanoids as mounts and guardians.

A dragonnel prefers to attack from the air, flying above its prey and then plunging to strike with its claws and bite. A solitary dragonnel is usually either hunting or returning to its lair from hunting, while more than one dragonnel usually indicates a mated pair or family. In such a case, all dragonnels attack in concert with one another and usually fight to the death.

A dragonnel requires training before it can bear a rider in combat. To be trained, a dragonnel must have a friendly attitude toward the trainer (this can be achieved through a successful Diplomacy check). Training a friendly dragonnel requires six weeks of work and a DC 25 Handle Animal check. Riding a dragonnel requires an exotic saddle. A dragonnel can fight while carrying a rider, but the rider cannot also attack unless he or she succeeds on a Ride check.

Dragonnels were first discovered on the tropical islands to the south of the mainland. Originally thought to be a cross-breed of pteranodon and dragon, most sages now believe that creatures are an offshoot of the pteranodon family. These creatures lack the intelligence and treasure hoarding tendencies that would grant credence to the notion that they are in any way related to dragons.

Kechs are monkey-like humanoids standing about 6 feet tall and weighing about 150 pounds. They make their homes in trees and prefer to move through the trees rather than on the ground. They have an almost human organization and society among the various tribes and clans. Family units dwell in a single lair (usually a hollowed tree or small hut built among the branches of a leafy tree). The kech has leathery skin that on first glance resembles a covering of leaves and foliage. Kechs speak their own language and many speak Common.

Kechs attack from ambush, preferring to ensnare their prey in pits, traps, or the like. If faced with a weak adversary, they attack with a frontal assault, seeking to kill as quickly as possible. Slain prey is dragged into the kech’s lair and devoured at the creatures’ leisure.

Kech Characters

Kech are defined by their class levels, as a playable race they do not possess racial Hit Dice. All kech have the following racial traits.

+2 Dexterity, +2 Wisdom, -2 Intelligence: Kech are agile creatures with a keen sense of their surroundings but are more savage and uneducated than standard races.

Medium: Kech are Medium creatures and have no bonuses or penalties due to their size.

Quick and Agile: Kech have a base speed of 40 ft. and possess a climb speed of 20 ft.

Darkvision: Kech can see in the dark up to 60 feet.

Leaf-Like Skin: Kech possess a +4 racial bonus to Stealth in forested areas and possess a +2 natural armor bonus.

Natural Weapons: Kech possess 2 claws (1d4) and a bite (1d6) attack as natural weapons.

Untraceable: Kech of 4th level possess pass without trace as a constant magical effect.

Weapon Unfamiliarity: Kech are slow to learn how to use manufactured weapons. They do not gain any weapon proficiencies for taking a heroic class. You must take feats to acquire proficiency in new weapons.

Introduction

Welcome to the first release in the Monster Update Line. Stefen and I worked extensively on Forgotten Foes published by Tricky Owlbear Publishing for many months. The relationship that we formed on that project lead us to establish Purple Duck Games as its own publishing entity. Possessing a deep love of monster books, one of the first things that we put up for sale was the Monster Update Project. Twenty-six people signed up to the project, whereby they could direct Stefen and I to update the statistics of some of their favourite 3.X monsters to the Pathfinder Roleplaying Game.

It has been many months since this project launched and even though we initially said we wouldn’t start releasing the converted monsters until August it seemed strange to have all these conversions languishing in limbo. Thus starting this month we will endeavor to release five of the selected creatures each month from this point forward. The original Monster Update Project link is now gone but if anyone would like to subscribe to the full project please drop me an email. In total there should be over 26 releases in this series.
